"brings but little joy to the poor, Harry. For them remains only snow and cold and hunger. But if I get this work done in time, we will have some Christmas, you and I, never fear."

"Dit a pie, mamma," said the happy child, "and a chicken, a big chicken like papa used to get."

"Yes," replied his mother sadly, "if I can afford it I will get a turkey as papa used to get."

The boy smiled and looked out upon the fast-falling flakes with renewed attention.

"And poor Joe, mamma, can't he come too?"

The mother stayed her needle for a moment, and then with a new light upon her face said slowly:

"Yes, darling, Joe shall have a Christmas dinner, too. You may run around and invite him to-morrow morning. The widow's mite," she murmured softly, "that still is left to me."

"Little angels, little angels, presently whispered the boy, "have you come down to see 'trismas, too?"

"What do you mean, Harry?" cried the startled mother.

"I is talkin' to the snow, mamma, what is flyin' down from heaven. See, some of them wants to get in to Harry, see!"

"Yes, yes! Mamma must hurry with her sewing or we will have no Christmas," replied the mother. "It grows late and will soon be dark."

At seven o'clock they ate their frugal supper, and after tidying up a bit, the Widow White tucked the little one in bed and prepared for her visit to the store.

"Three dollars," she sighed as the last garment was counted, "three dollars for nearly a week's labor. Ah, me!"

"Mamma."

"Yes, dear."

"Come kneel down long side of your little boy, and pray for the poor what ain't going to have no 'trismas," said Harry timidly. "We is goin' to have chicken and pie, and so is poor Joe. We is rich, ain't we, mamma?"

With fast-falling tears the mother knelt and silently asked the giver of all good to bless her boy, and to strengthen and aid all, who like them, were struggling with loneliness and poverty.

She arose and leaning over, kissed him good-night.

"I didn't hear you pray, mamma," said the wondering boy. "Can God hear you so far off?"

"Yes, dear. He looked into my heart, and heard. I made a silent prayer," replied the mother. "Go to sleep now, and be up early on Christmas morning."

"Tilent prayer," murmured the boy "tilent prayer," and long after her footsteps had died away, the boy lay with wide-open eyes, whispering to God to send a good Christmas to everybody, "but 'specially," he added, "'specially to poor, drunken Joe."

An hour later the weary mother returned, and sank into a chair beside the dying fire with a groan of despair.

"They never break their rules," she moans. "Saturday is pay day and I must wait, wait."

As she sat there desolate and despairing the sound of icy particles of snow beating against the window, attracted her attention.

"The angels coming down," she murmured, recalling Harry's words, "to see Christmas. Pure, white angels," and with a strange, peaceful feeling at her heart she sat there listening to that rustling which, she imagined, was around and about her.

Suddenly she arose.

"I will ask for credit," she exclaimed, "for credit. 'Tis the first time, and surely I will not be denied. Harry must not be disappointed. He shall not be!"

And I am glad to relate Harry was not.

"Now," cried the happy little fellow, as the turkey—a very small turkey—was the next day placed in the oven, "I will run over for Poor Joe, old drunken Joe the bad boys say. Mayn't I, Mamma?"

"Yes," said his smiling mother, "but you must not speak to him in that way, dear. He was once a great gentleman, and you must not hurt his feelings. People say he is not near so poor as he looks, but I am sure, half the time, he has not sufficient food or the comforts of life about him. Tell him we desire his company at dinner and don't stay 'ong."

An hour passed, yet Harry came not back.

The mother grew uneasy at last and decided to ascertain the cause of his delay.

In a few minutes she stood at the door of Joe's den. All was silent within, and tremblingly she opened the door and entered the one cheerless room which he called home.

Upon the bed lay a man on whose once fine face was graven the name "inebriate."

Long and heavily had he slept, but, alas! for many weeks and months had he found no sleep long enough to uncloud that once noble mind, to sweep from it the cobwebs which shadowed his faculties and blurred all the good in his nature.

He had but just awakened, and his wondering eyes were fixed upon the figure of a little child which knelt beside him.

The sun had risen bright and cheering this Christmas morning, and peeping through the curtainless window fell in gentle benediction upon the golden head of the kneeling boy, whose eyes and hands were raised toward heaven in earnest supplication.

The man scarcely breathed, and great drops of perspiration stood upon his brow.

"I thought at first it was an angel," he muttered, "but it's little Harry White, and I do believe he is praying for—" something arose in his throat, choking further utterance.

Neither of them noticed the open door, and the mother stood rooted to the spot.

"Amen," softly breathed the boy as he rose to his feet. "Amen."

"Were you—you—" stammered Joe—once the Hon. Joseph Willard—"were you praying for me?"

"Yes," said the child, solemnly, "my heart was talkin' to God, Mamma calls it 'tilent prayer."

"For me, for me," sobbed Joe. "Precious little one. Truly, of such is the kingdom of heaven."

"I heard the angels, Joe, when I was praying," earnestly said the child, "they come down on 'trismas day, you know, come down to help poor folks like you and mamma and me."

"Aye, close indeed, my little one, close indeed," reverently said Joe, "for in truth a saving one has come to me this day. Kiss me Harry. The touch of those lips will purify mine mayhap."

Sweetly were the fresh lips raised to the feverish ones, smilingly the earnest eyes looked into his.

"You are not—not——"

"The boy hesitated.

"Not what?" asked the man.

"Not drunk now, Joe, and you will come to dinner with mother and me," simply said Harry. "She sent me and told me to be very perlite to you, Joe, for you was once a gentleman."

A scarlet line shot athwart the man's forehead. Then hiding his face from the gaze of those innocent eyes, sob after sob broke from the penitent man.

In contrition the little fellow kissed the tear-bedewed fingers.

"You will be good," he pleaded, "and not let the boys call you 'old drunken Joe,' any more. I love you Joe, 'deed I do."

Silently the mother stole away, and with a song on her lip and deep thankfulness in her heart made preparations for the coming guest.

Could this be Joe, who, from the window she saw advancing with the little one's hand lovingly clasped in his, Joe, who walked so erect, whose attire showed such effort at neatness; Joe, upon whose countenance a grave resolve sat, whose eyes, when they greeted each other, looked into hers with no shifting, uncertain expression as of yore?

"Thank you, madam," he said with his old-time, courtly grace, "for thinking of me upon such an occasion. I have entertained an angel unawares to-day," he added, with a quivering lip. "May the future prove you have done likewise."

The widow was bustling about, and the full significance of the remark was lost upon her.

The next morning found Harry again gazing from the window—not upon the falling flakes of snow, but watching this time the removal of sundry packages from a wagon which stood before their door.

"For me!" exclaimed the bewildered widow, "for me!" as package after package was piled upon the table.

"Yes'm," said the man. "I was to give 'em to you with Mr. Joseph Willard's compliments."

With her boy clasped tightly in her arms, the widow, a while later, sobbed out her thankfulness and heartfelt joy.

"God bless my boy," she said, softly kissing his golden head, "and——"

"Poor Joe, mamma, ask for poor Joe too."

"Poor Joe no longer, dear," his mother replied, "never again poor Joe."

* * * * * *

The frosts of winter were gradually yielding to the mild glances of spring, when day after day Mr. Willard was found at the widow's cottage.

Upon his shoulder rested the golden head of little Harry, whose waxen face and heavy eyes spoke but too plainly of the coming morn when the sun would no longer turn those locks to threads of gold, when the sad, beautiful eyes would be forever closed to the light of day.

"I told you so," the neighbors whispered to one another. "He was not long for this earth, the little dear," and then the story of the silent prayer by the bedside of the inebriate was related, and men and women alike wiped their streaming eyes, and agreed that he was spared by heaven for the simple purpose of reclaiming one sinner, and that sinner, poor drunken Joe.

And so one night, clasped in the loving arms of the man he had saved, the boy opened his eyes, and smiling into the face of his mother who bent above him, said softly:

"Pray, mamma, pray for your little boy."

"What shall I say," sobbed the heart-broken mother, "what shall I say for my angel?"

"A 'tilent prayer," replied the boy faintly, turning his heavy eyes upon Mr. Willard, "a 'tilent prayer. God likes them best, don't he, Joe?"

Silence fell upon the group, broken only by the sobbing of the kneeling mother.

"Harry," presently whispered Mr. Willard. "Harry, my boy."

But Harry was no longer there; a silent prayer, a silent flight, and that lovely spirit was with the angels.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

NO. 3861 EQUITY.

In the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting as a Court of Equity.

Jacob J. Weaver, Jr., executor under the last will and testament of Margaret S. Ferguson, late of Carroll County, Maryland, deceased, plaintiff, vs. the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication and Sabbath School Work, a body corporate of the State of Pennsylvania, and the unknown heirs of Mary Elizabeth Ferguson, wife of Cumberland Ferguson; Margaret Frances Paxton, wife of Samuel Paxton; Ann Dayhoof, wife of James M. Dayhoof; Litticia Dayhoff, wife of Andrew Dayhoff; Eleanor Banks, wife of Thomas Banks, and Hugh Francis Ferguson, defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure the proper construction by the Circuit Court for Carroll county in Equity, of the residuary clause of the last will and testament of Margaret S. Ferguson, late of said county, deceased.

The bill states that said Margaret S. Ferguson, spinster, departed this life on the 8th day of December, A. D. 1899, leaving a last will and testament duly executed and admitted to probate by the Orphans' Court of said county and that letters testamentary were granted to said Jacob J. Weaver, Jr., the executor named in said will, who has duly qualified and has entered upon the discharge of his duties as such executor.

That he has paid all the debts of said testatrix and has paid and satisfied certain legacies and bequests in said will.

That said executor has settled his first and final account in said estate in said Orphans' Court and that under said account he holds in his hands the sum of $8,646 50 which was distributed as follows:

"Residue of estate as follows: All the rest and residue of the estate to the Board of the Presbyterian Church Rooms located in the year 1892 (date of will) at number thirteen hundred and thirty-four Chestnut street, in the City of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, the sole residuary legatee, as follows:

In cash, - - -	$8,429.34,
Collateral tax, - -	216.16,
Release, - - - -	1.00.
	$8,646.50

That said testatrix in the residuary clause of her said will provides as follows: "I give and bequeath all the rest and residue of my estate, if there be any, to be applied to the use of the Board of the Presbyterian Church Rooms, located in the year 1892 A. D. at number thirteen hundred and thirty-four (1334) Chestnut Street in the City of Philadelphia".

That no such body or corporation as "The Board of the Presbyterian Church Rooms" was located at No. 1334 Chestnut Street in the City of Philadelphia in the year 1892 when said will was executed or prior thereto, but that there was at said date and prior thereto and now is a corporation located at said No. 1334 Chestnut street in said City by the name of "The Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication and Sabbath School Work" which claims it is the devisee intended to be named in said residuary clause and is entitled to receive and be paid the said sum of $8,429.34, the residue of said estate.

That said Executor believes that a doubt and uncertainty exist as to the proper party or corporation entitled to said residue and therefore prays that said Court will construe said clause and distribute said fund under its jurisdiction.

That said Testatrix never had any children or descendants; that she left neither father nor mother, brother nor sister, nor descendants of any brother or sister surviving her; that her nearest kindred who survive her are the descendants of Mary Elizabeth Furguson, who intermarried with Cumberland Ferguson; Margaret Frances Paxton, who intermarried with Samuel Paxton; Ann Dayhood., who intermarried with James M. Dayhood; Litticia Dayhoff, who intermarried with Samuel Dayhoff; Eleanor Banks, who intermarried with Thomas Banks, and Hugh Francis Ferguson, sisters and brother of John M. Ferguson, father of said testatrix, all of whom are now deceased, but the names and residences of said descendants of said sisters and brother of said John M. Ferguson are unknown to said Executor.

It is thereupon, this 17th day of January, A. D. 1901, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll County, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Carroll County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 18th day of February, A. D. 1901, give notice to the non-resident and unknown defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court by proper officer, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 11th day of March next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off of me. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.
