WESTMINSTER, - MARYLAND.

W. L. W. Seabrook, - Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1901.

After doing about all the harm it could the Maryland Legislature adjourned on Thursday. The disfranchisement and census bills were passed. Also a sewerage bill for Baltimore and a bill to renumber the wards of that city, Several other bills of general and local interest were passed. Our Democratic friends will probably find, in the end, that they have spent $100,000 of the taxpayers' money to make the State solidly Republican. They are likely to be "hoist with their own petard."

Aguinaldo Captured.

Aguinaldo is a captive in Manila. He was caught by Gen. Frederick Funston, of Kansas, who with several other officers, six veteran scouts and a company of picked natives carried out a very hazardous plan for the purpose. Aguinaldo's hiding place, in Northeast Luzon, was divulged by natives at Manila, to whom he had written, denouncing the Filipinos who had taken the oath of office. Then Gen. Funston conceived the daring plan which resulted in the capture. With the few American officers and men, accompanied by the native scouts, he went by the steamer Vicksburg to a point on the coast from which the party proceeded to the place where they found the noted leader. The native scouts, according to the plan, passed themselves off as insurgents who had captured Gen. Funston and his party and were taking them to Aguinaldo. They found him and then turned the tables by making him a prisoner and carrying him to Manila. The risk was great as there was danger of treachery by the native scouts. But they were faithful and the dangerous rebel leader was taken. There were, previous to this, abundant evidences that the insurrection was practically at an end. This capture confirms it. It is not yet known, of course, what disposition will be made of the insurgent chief.

Consequences to be Feared.

In an editorial article published February 9th, in relation to the then projected extra session of the Maryland Legislature, the SENTINEL said: "The proceeding, however, may lead to Federal action that will not only apply to Maryland but to all the Southern States which have practically withdrawn the right of suffrage from the colored people." The SENTINEL deprecated such a result, but sounded a note of warning to the machine Democrats of Maryland, as to the effect of their proposed action upon the political interests of the South. That the warning was timely may be seen by the opinions of leading public men in relation to the subject. It is strongly intimated that, if Mr. Gorman should be elected to the United States Senate by a Legislature chosen under the disfranchisement law, strong opposition to his admission to that body will be developed, and Mr. Barrows, of Michigan, who is chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, is quoted as saying:

"The Maryland law will very probably compel Congress to take action on the disfranchisement laws. It cannot be denied that there has been in the past some indulgence and toleration of the efforts of certain states in the South to avoid negro domination. But in Maryland we have the case of a great state disfranchising 50,000 citizens in order to give one political party the control of the legislature of the state. There is no fear in Maryland of negro domination. That is not the excuse for the law. Certain Democrats seek to control the state, and to accomplish this purpose a sufficient number of the opposite party are to be disfranchised. It is nothing more than this.

"At present the question is presenting three interesting phases: The effect disfranchisement has on the basis of representation in the lower House; the propriety of accepting senators in Congress who have been elected by legislatures selected after a large number of voters were disfranchised, so that the legislatures would be favorable to certain men, and the public policy of permitting political parties to disfranchise a large number of their opponents to maintain their dominant position in the states. These are no longer sectional questions."

In the same vein, but in a more emphatic manner, Representative Dick, of Ohio, is reported to have said:

"The Republicans cannot fail to take cognizance of the political thefts which have taken place in North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi, and recently in the State of Maryland. Unless drastic action is taken as soon as possible we may expect West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky and almost every other Southern or border State where Democrats have control to adopt the disfranchisement method of perpetuating their party in power. There is no telling where this thing would stop.

"In Maryland there was no danger of negro domination in public affairs, and the race question, therefore, cannot be made the excuse for the denial of the right to vote to 50,000 Republicans, both black and white. The purpose, plainly, was to deprive the Republican party of the right to exercise an influence in the political affairs of the State. I am heartily in favor of the passage of a bill which will reduce representation of all these States both in Congress and in the Electoral College to an extent proportionate to the number of voters disfranchised."

It is to be apprehended that the disposition to take some such action as that suggested by Mr. Dick is growing, and there is no doubt that it has received fresh impetus from the course of Governor Smith and the Maryland Legislature. It is to be regretted, but these gentlemen cannot plead that they were not aware of the possible effect of their actions upon the subject alluded to. They were evidently moved by selfishness incarnate and were indifferent to the consequences which they might bring upon other States for which they make loud professions of friendship.

An important Decision by Judge Reifsnider.

A dispatch from Annapolis to the Baltimore Sun, on Wednesday, says: "A decision important to oystermen throughout the State was rendered by Judge Reifsnider, in the Circuit Court for Anne Arundel County, in a habeas corpus case in which five oystermen from Calvert county were interested, having been arrested by Deputy Commander C. E. Martin and fined by Justice of the Peace John N. Davis, of Annapolis, for a violation of the law governing patent tong, or rakes in the bay after the close of the dredging season. It was a test case, in which Capt. James W. Dixon, master of one of the boats, was plaintiff. From the testimony it appeared that at the close of the dredging season a number of boats fitted out with patent tongs, an invention of Senator Marsh of Calvert county, occupied the waters left by the dredgers. Judge Reifsnider held that the patent tongs was in part a form of dredge forbidden, and that a great injustice was done licensed tongers, as well as dredgers, if such instruments are used upon the waters of the bay without a license. The point has been agitated among oystermen for years, and Captain Dixon and the others charged, and whose names have been published, will have to answer in court for the alleged violation.
