former companions in grace miserable. One of these, a great heavy faced fellow named Tom Randall, took Lafe Halloway as his especial target, and on every occasion fired at him taunts and jeers. But the young man went his way unmoved in the pride of conscious rectitude.

Randall never offered his insults in the presence of any of the older or more staid members of the community, for he feard their rebuke, and, too, from them he had nothing to win. They were long and hard tried in the faith.

But before his own satellites he was boldness itself. The corner grocery store was a great gathering place for these fellows, and wo unto the luckless victim who had to pass the place alone. He must go through a perfect fire of raillery.

It is not an easy thing to be the target for the scorn of the petty scoffers of a small town. To say that they are ignorant only means that the weapons of ridicule they use are more blunt and they bruise rather than cut. A cut smarts, but a bruise aches and grows black.

Many a day Lafe went home with clenched teeth and white face. But he made no sign. His mother saw and understood, but she kept her counsel. The ultimate triumph which she believed her son capable of achieving was worth fighting for. If the father understood he also held his peace. The boy had all of the vigorous energy and animal strength which are the attributes of his age and condition in life, and he would have liked nothing better than to turn on his tormentors and give them the thrashing which they deserved. But this he knew to be the very concession which they demanded of him, and so he held his hand.

However, one day, as he was coming down the street toward the grocery, he spied Alice Staniland just ahead of him, and he quickened his steps to overtake her. The usual crowd was standing and lounging about in front. As Alice neared them, Tom Randall, grown desperate with constant resistance, stepped out and spoke to her. Lafe saw the girl shrink away and burst into tears as she hurried on. In a moment, with white face and compressed lips he was in front of Randall.

"What did you say to her?" he asked breathlessly, as the crowd of gazers gathered around.

"None o' yer bus'ness, Mr. Hymnsinger, you hear." There were no more words. Lafe's fist shot out and delivered a blow upon the scoffer's face that staggered him. Another followed hard upon it. Then Randall righted himself and began to reciprocate. He was no mean antagonist. They clinched. They fell and for a few moments that seemed like hours to the tense expectations of the watching crowd, the battle wavered. Then the mass upon the ground began to assume definiteness and it was seen that Lafe was on top. He did not strike his antagonist again, but pressing his face down into the dust, cried hoarsely, "Eat dirt, you beast, eat dirt, and learn to let women alone."

The crowd, ever with the strong and victorious, now jeered and taunted its fallen chief and even danced in the fullness of its delight. Suddenly there was a hush and Lafe felt a hand laid upon his shoulder and looked up to meet the grieving eyes of the old Methodist minister, whose gentle words had led him into the fold of the Church.

"Come with me, my son," said the old man, and his voice was very gentle, but oh, so sorrowful. The boy arose and turned away with his pastor. His antagonist made no attempt to follow him or renew the fight. He slunk into the grocery unobserved, for the crowd was wonderingly watching the old man and the young man as they went away together, and for once it was silent and not altogether comfortable.

"I guess he's backslid at last," said one.

"I ain't so sure about that," another replied. "He wasn't a-fightin' on his own account, an' besides he never cussed none." So, wavering between opinions as to the spiritual status of Lafe Halloway, the crowd broke up into little knots of three and four and so went its way.

The fire had not sufficiently left Lafe's blood for him fully to realize the equivocal position in which he had placed himself. For a time he walked on in silence, which was finally broken upon by the preacher's voice. "I am sorry," he said, "so sorry, for I had hoped and expected much of you." These words brought the boy to himself, but he did not attempt to excuse his action. He simply told the straightforward, unbiased truth as it was. "Before I had time to think what to do, I had done it," he said, "but I don't know that it would have been different even with thought, you know I—we—our family, think a lot of Allie, and it was awful to have that——" His lips tightened again and the blood mounted to his forehead.

The old minister offered no admonition, no advice. He only repeated, "I am sorry, so sorry." But the pressure that he gave the boy's hand as he left him at the gate was warm and tender and fatherly. Perhaps his mind had gone back to his own youth and to the woman that had for a few years brightened his life, but was now sleeping at the foot of an old moss-grown stone in the little church-yard. Memories like this will not let a man be hard.

When he entered the house Lafe saw by the look on his mother's face that the news had preceded him down the street. She and his father sat at supper.

"I know you both know all, mother. Gossip runs fast in this town," he said.

"Yes, my son, I know all; but I hope that you didn't hurt him and that you are not hurt either—physically," she added, sorrowfully.

"Oh, we're both all right that way," he returned. He sat down to the table, but he couldn't eat for the lump in his throat. "I am sorry it happened," he went on, "but you know how it was, mother. It's kind o' hard for a fellow to stand by and see his girl insulted, and then Allie is such a quiet little body. Nobody but a brute would think of troubling her." He could say no more, but, man that he was, burst into sobs.

"My poor boy, my poor boy," cried the mother, "you have been sorely tried." Martin Halloway rose and went over to his son and laid his hands upon his shoulders. "Look up boy," he said, "you did right, and I'd have done the same same thing in your place if it had been me. With a man's arms and a man's feelin's you couldn't have done anything else. I don't believe that the Lord wants his lovers to be walked over roughshod by the children of the devil. I do believe, tho, that 'Christian soldier' means Christian soldier in every sense of the word, and if the man that raises his hand to protect a woman sins against the right, I for one can't see it."

Lafe was braced by his father's words, and comforted by the fact that there was no reproof in his mother's face as she smiled and said: "Don't you think, Martin, it would be better to let Lafe fight his own fight, search his own heart and find out what is demanded of him?"

"You are always a safe adviser, Annie," said her husband. "Lafe, I've given you a few points in the war, but fight the rest out for yourself."

And Lafe determined to.

The fight was not long in beginning. All that night the young man's mind was in a turmoil of doubt. What had he done? Where did he stand? To what degree was he culpable? These thoughts harassed him and kept him tossing, sleepless, upon his bed, wrestling with his doubts as of old Jacob wrestled with the angel. The morning brought with it no decision and tired, silent and disturbed he went to work. His father had kept his promise and was letting him fight his battle alone.

The night for class-meeting came around, and Mr. and Mrs. Halloway, as was their wont, began early their preparations to go, but Lafe did not move from his chair. Seven o'clock came, and with his hand on the door Martin Halloway turned to his son and asked, "Not coming to class-meeting, eh?" "Not to-night, father," answered the boy, and his parents passed out.

Lafe had been the shining light of the class-room since his conversion. The older members were wont to greet him with a murmured "Bless the young soldier," or "Help him grow in grace," as he rose to recount his brief experience of the Christian life. He thought of all this, and of the pleasure he took in the meetings and then asked himself if in his first real battle he must fall out of the ranks. Once he rose, took up his hat and stood irresolute. Then he laid it down again, sinking into his chair and covering his face with his hands. When his parents came home, he had gone to bed. They could not tell him of the expectant look in the old minister's face as he caught sight of them, and of the look of disappointment which followed as he noticed the vacancy in their pew. Nor could they tell him of the tender prayer in which the old man pleaded earnestly, almost plaintively, for light and guidance to the young of the flock. But that night at their own bedside they remained longer upon their knees, and when they arose and looked into each other's faces, the eyes of both were moist.

LET US SMILE.

The thing that goes the furthest toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most is just a pleasant smile.
The smile that bubbles from a heart that loves its fellowmen
Will drive away the clouds of gloom and coax the sun again.
It's full of worth and goodness, too, with manly kindness blent—
It's worth a million dollars, and it doesn't cost a cent.

Wedding Anniversary.

A delightful surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hughes, at their hospitable residence, "Flint Ridge," near Hood's Mill, on Saturday, 30th ult.,—it having been the 48th anniversary of their marriage—by their children. The guests arrived at 10.30 A. M., all in a crowd together, with baskets of good things to satisfy the inner man. They had a jolly good time together until all were invited to the dining room, were a sumptuous dinner was served, after which they returned to the parlor where social conversation and singing were enjoyed and where they became witnesses of the baptism of two children of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Hughes. After spending a pleasant day the guests departed for their respectives homes wishing the host and hostess many happy years together. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Brown, of Howard county; Mrs. John R. Hughes, of Freedom; Mr. and Mrs. Burgess W. Hughes, near Hood's Mill; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Ridgely, near Sykesville; Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. C. Hughes, of Flint Ridge; Mrs. Lewis E. Brown, of Baltimore; Rev. H. C. Febrey, of the M. E. Church South, Freedom; Rev. P. C. Frank and Herman Brown, Joseph, Maurice and James Hughes, John Burgess, Robert and Philip Ridgely, and Herbert Sheppard.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

In the days of 'wild cat' money in the West, the Ames shovels were used as currency. They were as stable as gold; their price did not vary a cent in twenty years. The very name of Oliver Ames & Son, was a synonym for honesty. It was current all over the world.

On the same principle Benson's Porous Plaster is the universal standard external remedy. To say it is a "good" plaster does not describe it; it is the best possible plaster. For every disease in which an external remedy is available, Benson's Plaster is used almost as a matter of course.

Benson's Plaster quickly relieves and cures where other modes of treatment are either exasperatingly slow or have no good effect whatever. Coughs, colds, lumbago, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lame back, etc., are at once benefited and soon cured.

Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters have none of the curative virtues of Benson's. More than 5,000 physicians and druggists have commended Benson's Plaster as a remedy in which the public may have implicit confidence; while, in a comparative test with other plasters, Benson's has received fifty-five highest awards. Beware of substitutes and cheap imitations.

For sale by all druggists or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

NOTICE TO Water Consumers of the Westminster Water COMPANY.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Westminster Water Company, held on Saturday, March 23, 1901, it was

Resolved, That upon all water licenses commencing May 1st, 1901, there shall be a reduction of twenty per cent., providing said license is paid at the office of the company on or before said May 1st.

If unpaid before June 1st said license shall bear interest from said June 1st, until paid.

It was also resolved that, commencing May 1st, in all households the water license of which amounts to $10.00 or more, annually, a meter will be placed.

It was further resolved that until otherwise ordered this company will introduce into all homes not now using water the necessary pipes, and basin for same, and connect the same with the mains of the company without charge, as also to perform all minor repairs on same without charge to the landlord or tenant.

Any additional plumbing of whatever kind or character will be performed at actual cost of labor and material.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

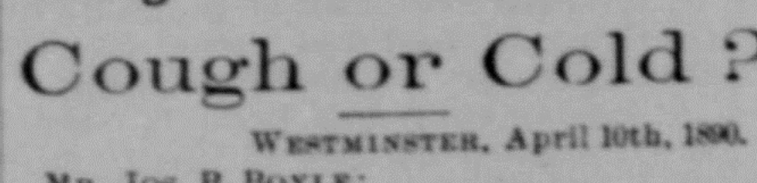

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.

WANTED.

Having bought the Smallwood Creamery, of Mr. E. B. Arnold, I wish to say to the farmers of the community that I am prepared to handle 10,000 lbs. of Milk daily, and will pay the highest market price therefor, on or before the 15th of each month.

I ask the co-operation of the farmers. I know, from twelve years experience, that I can do you more good than you can have done for your dairy product in any other way. I would be glad to have any of the farmers call to see me to acquaint them with the business. Will furnish cans at wholesale price.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.
