Secret of Beauty
is health. The secret of health is the power to digest and assimilate a proper quanity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act it's part.

Do you know this?
Tutt's Liver Pills are an absolute cure for sick headache, dyspepsia, sour stomach, malaria, constipation, torpid liver, piles, jaundice, bilious fever, biliousness and kindred diseases.

sank into a seat. He felt he could hear no more, it was all so curious, so startlingly strange. To think that the girl he had left living with her father on the outskirts of a quiet English country town should have developed into this wonderful Princess Zandra, whose beauty was known throughout Europe. And they had loved one another! He had gone abroad with the hope of making a name for himself, of being able to claim her. But ill luck had dogged him, and the time had never come when he could write to her. He had left her free, and as the years went by, bringing nothing but persistent failure, he knew that it was not for him to possess the only thing he counted worth having. Occasionally scraps of intelligence as to the course her life had taken drifted to him. Her father had died, and she had gone to live with a wealthy aunt in London. From stray papers that reached him he learned that her beauty had caused quite a sensation in society. Then at last came the news that she had married a foreigner of great position, Prince Zandra.

He wondered if she ever thought of him—remembered the night he had confessed his love to her. Not a day had passed in those long years of failure but her image had been before him. Now, at length, when he had achieved some slight success, it was too late. All that was left for him was to take the absurd little journey of sentiment.

Early next morning he traveled to Beaulieu. He got out at the railway station and, following the path that led round to St. Jean, passed the fishing village and gained the Point. There he sank down on the ground and gave himself up to his reflections. It was a perfect morning, a cloudless sky, the air soft and pregnant with the perfume of the roses that grew right to the edge of the tiny cliff. Some 30 feet below him was the sea, not a ripple on its smooth surface, the clear blue tints gleaming in the sunshine.

Presently he was aware of a woman gazing curiously at him. The next moment they had recognized one another. She went suddenly pale, and her lips parted in wonder.

"Ralph!" she gasped.

He looked at her mutely. He was face to face with her at last and the blood went throbbing through his veins.

"Yes, just Ralph," he said mechanically.

She held out her hand, and he took it awkwardly.

"And to think it is you after all these years!" she said softly.

Hippesley did not speak. His thoughts had flown back a dozen years to the night when he had left her. An indefinable idea came to him that she, too, was thinking of the same thing.

"I won't lie," he said abruptly. "I am not here by chance. I heard you were on the Riviera, and after all these years I wanted to see you again—just to see you; I had no notion of speaking.

She gazed at him steadily, as if trying to read his thoughts.

"You have loved me all this time?" she asked slowly.

He bowed his head. She turned away with a little sob.

"And you never wrote?" she cried. "Oh, why didn't you write?"

"I was a failure—such an utter failure I could not write to claim you," he said hoarsely. "You did well. I wasn't worth waiting for."

She looked at him, the tears glistening in her eyes.

"What a jumble fate made of our lives!" she sighed.

"It did not matter. You are the Princess Zundra."

"Oh, I am tired—tired to death of it all!" she cried in a tone of utter weariness. "To have to live in an artificial world, among people who are not my people—there is no one left to me now—and to have to begin it all over again," she added in a half sorrowful musing tone.

He understood. He remembered the words he had overheard at the cafe. It was all true, then. She looked up at him quickly, with a smile.

"But you, Ralph; what have you done?" she asked gently.

"For years nothing. Now, at last, I've got a small estate in Ceylon. It's a fair living, while I work hard—not a bad life, too, for a man who has lost his ambitions."

No, not a bad life," she repeated. "A lonely one, though." She gave a little laugh. There was an infinite note of sadness in it. "As lonely as mine has been!"

She lifted her head, and their eyes met. He read something in her gaze—a something that sent him trembling from head to foot.

"My God, Esme!" he cried. "If—if you were not the Princess Zandra!"

He saw her eyes suddenly shine, the color rush to her cheeks.

"Remember only that I am a poor woman again," she whispered; "that I've never forgotten, never could forget"— Her voice died away.

His brain was in a whirl. It seemed hardly possible.

"But the life!" he cried. "Think, after all, you've"—

"I only loved once. It was you I thought had forgotten"—

The low, soft voice came to a stop. They stood looking into one another's eyes.

"Don't send me back to the old life again, Ralph," she murmured.

ICE NOW USED TO ENGENDER HEAT.

The use of ice for heating purposes is one of the most curious devices mentioned in a bulletin soon to be issued by the Weather Bureau on the subject of protecting perishable goods in transportation.

A new kind of car is double-lined and has at each end four galvanized iron cylinders reaching from the floor to near the top. In summer these cylinders are filled with ice and salt, tamped down hard, and it is claimed that a refrigerator vehicle thus equipped does not need any renewal of its stock of ice on a journey clear across the continent.

The remarkable point, however, is that the cars is iced are winter just the same, for the purpose of preventing freezing. Ice is normally at about 32 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is very reluctant to give up this temperature. Hence when it is zero weather outside the cylinders of relatively warm ice act as stoves, helping to keep up the thermometer inside.

Another novel device, by which ice is employed for protiction against cold, consists in throwing upon the car, when the weather is near zero point, a stream of water which promptly freezes and forms a complete coat all over the vehicle. This prevents radiation of heat from the car, and so tends to keep up the temperature inside. It is a plan frequently adopted in the transportation of bananas, which are particularly susceptible to cold. Fruit of this kind is put in paper bags, and covered with salt hay, when the temperature is dangerously low.

Large shippers of fruit in the South have found out by experience that it does not do to take fruit, especially peaches and cantaloupes, and load it upon the cars without chilling it first. Accordingly one railroad in that part of the country is about to establish at the largest shipping points along its lines, cooling rooms, in which the perishable merchandise may be put for a while before sending it on its journey. Oranges on the trees will endure 26 degrees for an hour or two, but in four hours will freeze inside. One recommendation made by the Weather Bureau in regard to lemons is that in large hotels and other places where quantities of them are used for lemonade and other purposes, they shall not be taken from the cold storage room to a heated room, but shall be squeezed in the cold storage room. They lose quality quickly after being taken out of cold storage.

One curious fact that has been ascertained is that perishable produce, such as fruit and vegetables, will stand a lower temperature when the car is in motion than when it is at rest. No theory has been suggested to account satisfactorily for this phenomenon, which is certainly interesting. It is suggested by the Weather Bureau that growers may derive suggestions of the utmost value from the weather reports and predictions, thus avoiding the shipment of their goods when a cold wave in winter or a hot spell in summer is imminent. They ought to learn at what points on the railroads transportation is liable to be blocked by snowdrifts, and from the United States Geological Survey they can find out as to the altitudes of regions traversed by shipping routes. Of course the temperatures encountered in crossing mountain ranges are apt to be much lower than in the valleys.

The use of paper for protection against cold is increasing very much, and its effectiveness in this way is wonderful. Fruit wrapped in heavy brown paper will endure 15 degrees more cold than without it. Potatoes are sometimes packed in barrels lined with paper, and when the weather is unusually severe the barrels are covered with paper also. Clams and oysters are similarly shipped in barrels, to keep them from freezing, and cars for transporting perishable merchandise are quite commonly lined with paper. There is said to be nothing like it to keep out frost. Eggs, shipped in crates with separate pasteboard divisions and covered with a layer of oats chaff, will endure a very low temperature. It is observed, by the way, that pickled eggs are injured by cold more quickly than fresh ones.

Thick or fat clams or oysters do not freeze as readily as lean ones, and oysters, kept in their own liquor in tight barrels, will not spoil if frozen in transit. When clams or oysters in the shell are frozen, they should be thawed gradually in a cool place. Oysters in the shell can be kept two months in a dark place when the temperature is a little above freezing, if they are sprinkled from time to time with ice water. It has been noticed, by the way, that clams and oysters in transit through a snow-storm do not freeze as easily as when the weather is fair. Fish may be kept sound and marketable for thirty days after being caught, provided that they are cleaned soon after capture. They are shipped by express in barrels with ice, or by freight in casks or boxes on wheels.

Ever so many little points of value have been ascertained by shippers of perishable produce through long and costly experience. For example, it is now known that sweet potatoes and turnips must not be put together, because the proper temperature for the former (60 degrees) is too high for the latter and rots them fast. Potatoes do best in double-walled cars, heated by stoves to keep out the frost. Thirty-two degrees will not injure them for eating, but will prevent them from sprouting in the spring. On the other hand, all sorts of tree seeds, including peach, plum and walnut, sprout better in the spring if frozen in the winter. Bulbs, such as tulips, lilies, and hyacinths, are not injured by a temperature below zero.

Food products in cans or glass must not be shipped when the temperature is below freezing. A well ventilated, dry cellar is the best place in which to store apples, potatoes and vegetables generally, the temperature being from 35 to 45 degrees. Apples are made unfit for use by freezing if they are allowed to thaw gradually. Tropical fruits in storage should be kept at from 60 to 70 degrees. Mineral water exposed to temperature below 30 degrees soon spoils. Beer may be shipped in an outside temperature of 10 degrees if the kegs are packed in hay or sawdust and fresh stable manure.

The Use of Birds.

The bird has his use in the world, just as well as the man, and the legislature that spares him from being the target of the idle person will learn the approval of all right-thinking men, says Success: The farmer who kills birds because they peck at his fruit should remember that those birds do not care for fruit in any of its stages. When he drives away the swallows they follow the reaper, believing that they are eating grain, he probably is not aware that the birds eat only the worms and insects disturbed by the machine. When, again, he kills the birds because they infest his grain fields, he probably does not know that it is these birds that catch the field mice that are the real devourers of his grain.

There is no country in the world which holds so much gold in its treasury as does the United States now. Russia, Germany, England, France and other countries, known as great money powers, have held from time to time amounts of commensurate values in their treasuries, but at the present time the United States has them all beaten by a large margin. The gold fund in the Treasury now amounts to $501,469,468. The highest figure ever attained by the fund was reached on April 24, when it stood at $502,173,119. There is no significance in the falling off since, which is something less than a million dollars. When it is considered that six or seven years ago the fund stood at less than $50,000,000, the exact amount now held can be better appreciated. The gold fund at present in the Treasury is made up as follows: Reserve fund, $150,000,000; held against gold certificates, $283,441,989, and the general fund, $68,027,479. This total includes both coin and bullion, and the average fund held during the last month has been the highest in the history of the government.

Arrangements have been made at the Navy Department for the establishment of a model camp of United States marines at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, and orders have been issued to send there a company of 40 marines and nine non-commissioned officers, commanded by Capt. Harry Leonard, the gallant marine officer who lost his arm at Tien Tsin while carrying a wounded brother officer off the field under a heavy fire. In addition to establishing the camp, the marines will be employed in guarding the exhibits of the Navy department.

Governor Durbin, of Indiana, has received a letter from Springfield, Ill., stating that the body of Abraham Lincoln will be removed from the temporary vault in which it has been resting, to the crypt in the new monument which the company is constructing, some time during the present month, and that the stone of which the temporary vault is composed will be shipped to Spenser county, Indiana, to be used in constructing a foundation for the monument in honor of Nancy Hanks Lincoln, the President's mother.

Announcement has just been made in Washington of the engagement of Miss Vivian Sartoris, granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, to Archibald Balfour, a barrister of London. Miss Sartoris, who made her debut three years ago, is the elder daughter of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, and is one of the belles of Washington. She is 22 years old, is a tall, graceful brunette, bearing little resemblance to the Grant family.

A beautiful woman needs no letter of introduction.

A good-natured friend is sometimes an enemy in disguise.

Never judge a man's character by one good or bad action.

A woman doesn't have to be good-looking in order to look good.

Jes' a-Foolin'.

—:o:—

She sez to me: "I wisht you would
  Jes' quit all time a-teasin' me.
Fr'm morn till night it seems that you
  Dont' fer a minit let me be.
Go 'way now, feller! Let me 'lone;
  I never liked you much no how."
But say, she smiles when she sez that,
  She's jes' a-foolin', I'll allow.

I go to see her Sunday night:
  She allers sez she doesn't care
If I don't come, but why has she
  Them bran'-new ribbons in her hair?
An' why's she got her best dress on?
  Jes' tell me that, an' tell me now;
But still she sez she doesn't care,
  Still jes' a-foolin', I'll allow.

T'other night I told her straight
  I loved her, an' you orter see
That little flirt jes' tip-toe up
  An' give the sweetest kiss to me.
Ah m m-m! 'twas sweet, but still she said
  She didn't like me much nohow,
An' then she laffed an' squeezed my hand—
  Still jes' a-foolin', I'll allow.

RIGHT UP TO DATE.
(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

These are days of records and of the beating of records. Benson's Porous Plaster, for quickness of action and thoroughness of cure, has no records to beat except its own.

Benson's Plaster, always the best, always the leader, is to-day better than ever. It sticks to the skin but never sticks in its tracks. It marches on.

The people not only want to be cured but cured quickly—and Benson's Plaster does it. Coughs, colds, lumbago, asthma, bronchitis, liver and kidney complaints, and other ills approachable by an external remedy, yield to Benson's as ice does to heat.

Neither Belladonna, Strengthening or Capsicum plasters are to be compared with Benson's. People who have once tested the merits of Benson's Plaster have no use for any other external remedy.

More than 5,000 physicians and druggists (and a thousand times as many non-professional persons) have called Benson's Plasters one of the few (!) home remedies that can be trusted.

Fifty-five highest awards have been made to it in competition with the best known plasters of Europe and America. Better proof of its merits is inconceivable. Be sure to get the genuine.

For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States, on receipt of 25c. each.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?
WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.
MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:
Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough. I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!
I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it cheaper than if bought by the roll, and it only profits one jobber; and if there be two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a poker pup nine days to get its eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two prices instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. I am sure I can't save you money, come and see me and bring a sample of your wall and see my paper and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.
L. GLADHILL,
jun-28-tf Westminster, Md.
