SUNDAY, JUNE 9.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICE AND SERMON.

According to custom on Baccalaureate Day the opening exercises began at 10.30 Sunday morning with the entrance of the students to the rostrum of Alumni Hall, singing Luther's Battle Hymn, "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," as a processional. The effect was never more impressive and pleasing. When the entire body of the under graduates had reached the platform they stood with open ranks, while the members of the faculty and graduating class marched through to the front, when all gathered en masse and sang the inspiring hymn with great fervor, following it with the Te Deum Laudamus. The exercises were continued by the audience uniting with the faculty and students in repeating the Lord's Prayer in concert; hymn, "Lead On, O King Eternal;" prayer by Rev. Dr. W. R. Graham; singing, "Holy, Holy is God the Lord" ("Elijah"), by the Choral Society; the Commandments, led by Rev. J. W. Reese, Ph. D., with responses by the students; the Psalter, led by Rev. J. A. Price; the Apostles' Creed, in concert, the congregation uniting; the Gloria; singing, "And Then Shall Your Light" ("Elijah"), by the Choral Society; Scripture lesson, Rev. C. S. Slagle; hymn, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," and the baccalaureate sermon, by Rev. Thomas H. Lewis, D. D., president of the college. The sermon was a vigorous and powerful protest against a common tendency of this age and in this country, to which it was particularly applied by the able executive of the college, who is never lacking in boldness of speech in giving expression to his convictions on subjects of everyday interest.

President Lewis spoke on "Making Haste to Be Rich," using Prov. 28:20, "He that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent," as the basis of his sermon. He said, in part:

1. It is not a sin to be rich. The Bible abounds with consolations for the poor, but it nowhere classes the posession of wealth among sins. It says "the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil;" that "they that will be rich fall into many a snare;" and it gives us a vision of a rich man in hell. But the business of making money, and the fact of having money are, in themselves, honorable and praiseworthy. The Bible has its appropriate warning for all classes, the rich among the rest. But there is no Biblical warrant for that type of socialism which classes the rich with criminals and attempts to array society against them. On the other hand it may be a sin not to be rich. Men who squander wealth in dissipation, or live in poverty because they despise labor and selfdenial, are not innocent. Wealth represents diligence, perseverance, energy, intellectual supremacy; and when it has been secured by means of these, is a badge of honor, entitled to our respect. Wealth is a powerful agent of progress, both material and spiritual, and because a good rich man can do more good than a good poor man, when their goodness is equal, wealth may be lawfully coveted and honorably rewarded. It is written that Jesus loved the rich young ruler, that he brought salvation to the house of rich Zaccheus, and that "he made his grave with the rich in his death."

2. It is not foolish to be innocent. In Scotland they call a natural fool an innocent. And men of the world often reveal their contempt for purity, uprightness and harmlessness, the character that refuses to prey upon men's weaknesses or disadvantages or misfortunes, by the peculiar emphasis with which they declare such a person to be an innocent. Now we ought to bring this word out into the open and try it by the most candid criticism. Henry Clay's assertion that he had rather be right than be president, awoke great contempt among politicians, who saw no reason why he might not have struggled for the Presidency and taken chances to be right or to get right afterwards. So it is with getting rich. Men who are conscientious are called stubborn or cranky; men who have scruples are called squeamish; men who protest against common practice and artifices of business are called "holier-than-thou people," a most uncomfortable, uncongenial folk.

What is the secret of this contempt of innocence? Surely there is such a thing as right, and surely men are not wholly given over to the love of wrong! By no means. Every man draws the line somewhere. But two reasons prevail with men in this matter. 1. They give most consideration to that which presses hardest upon them: The grind of poverty is an awful, concrete reality, while the beauty of an innocent soul is an abstraction. 2. "Because judgment aglinst an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the hearts of the sons of men is set in them to do evil." And I think we will find these two combined into the settled conviction of men about moral distinctions. When the stress of our wants is relieved, or when we judge the acts of another person whose wants we do not feel we are apt to be more severe. And when we see a punishment visibly attached to an action we can feel more easily a moral condemnation of the act. Hence every man draws the line where his own wants cease and where visible punishment begins. Up to that line everything is innocent, beyond it everything is disgraceful.

This therefore is the point of these remarks. However foolish one man's standard of innocence may appear to another man every man has his own standard. There is even honor among thieves. To be innocent according to one's standard may not be a very high attainment, may be, in fact, a species of depravity. But to be wrong, judged by one's own standard, is to be lost in the lowest hell. * * *

3. A man may be both rich and innocent; but if he is forced to choose between these, his choice of riches will be his own undoing * * Whatever may be our estimate of the value of wealth, and none of us ever despises it, yet we never think of it as moral value. * * *

It is hard for a poor young man to make a fortune, but it is harder for a rich young man to make a man of himself. There has been dedicated recently in this country a Hall of Fame designed to perpetuate the memory of our heroes and great men. Last month the tablets of some sixty of these immortals were unveiled, and not one of them had been born rich or became famous by riches. * * * * If you would live in the memories of men you must be something and do something and not simply own something.

We do not believe that they that will be rich "pierce themselves through with many sorrows." We want to try if we may not get all the pleasure of wealth and escape all its judgments. But the rich know better. They know that the greatest millionaire is only the greatest care-taker.

On the other hand the judgments visited upon those who despise innocence are not visionary, but work themselves out in punishments worse than stripes and imprisonments. So that if a man chooses wealth and succeeds, he only chooses care and much sorrow, for these are part of wealth's rewards. Whereas, to choose innocence and fail is only to love what money can buy and to gain the lasting supremacy of the best and highest in us.

Alas! what we are not afraid of is the wasting of our fine powers in sordid employments, the numbing sense of isolation from all spiritual sympathies, the decay and destruction of all that distinguishes us as souls, the punishment of a dead heart and a distorted moral sense, and a vacant mind.

4. The spirit and the methods of getting rich at the present time are in conflict with the best interests of men and with God's order, and must bring punishment.

Men have always desired riches and have always striven for them. But in the main the desire has been such an impulse to industry and frugality that much good has resulted from it. * * * But now the eagerness for riches is not necessarily and not generally an eagerness to work, to be economical, and to save. In fact it is hardly possible to say any longer with absolute literalness that men work to get rich, and many would laugh at the suggestion of the olden time that "making money" means to produce something of value to exchange for money. Making money in these days means getting money and we do not concern ourselves about who made it. So the modern eagerness for wealth is rather destructive of industry than the contrary. * * *

We have almost brought ourselves to the point of despising honesty because it is slow. He who cannot get rich quickly is as miserable as he who cannot get rich at all. The result is that the main business of men to-day is speculation. * * * All trades, all professions are on the street buying what they don't want and selling what they haven't got. A few preachers and teachers and other moral fossils cry out against this sort of thing and tell young people that work is the only honest way to get rich. But it is Mrs. Partington against the Atlantic ocean. When a youth sees a man walk across the floor of the exchange and make twenty-thousand dollars in twenty seconds you may preach to him about work if you can catch him, but he is going to try the twenty second plan first. Fathers and managers and employers cannot give themselves up to speculation and expect to keep their children and employees satisfied with work. It would be very fine, no doubt, to keep the multitudes raising wheat and corn so as to give the few a chance to corner it, but the trouble is to corner the cornerers. Even the multitude learn after awhile the difference between getting bread by sweating and by betting.

Closely allied to this, if not its legitimate offspring, is social gambling. (Here the preacher quoted from a sermon of Rev. Dr. Huntington in relation to social gambling in New York, and then continued):

We haven't gone quite so far as this in our rural communities yet, but we are following bravely on. The columns of country newspapers are seldom without notice of the operations of card parties where distinguished ladies reap a harvest of gold brooches, silver spoons, clocks, mantelornaments and other valuable that are not made nor bought, but won, by the same cleverness that has landed so many unfortunate gentlemen in jail; who were too stupid to know the difference between vulgar gambling for money and refined progressive euchre for money's worth.

The preacher then, in graphic language, described the character of the punishment which must inevitably follow the practice of these methods of getting rich. These, he said, in substance, are increase of human selfishness, the blunting of moral perception, producing inability to discriminate between right and wrong, &c., and the various phases of these consequences were portrayed with great force and effect.

Dr. Lewis concluded his sermon by reading a letter from a former student of the college, which contained a touching tribute to the memory and character of the late Rev. Dr. J. T. Ward, its first president and one of the purest, most saintly, most loveable men ever known in this community.

At 8 P. M., Sunday, the annual service of the Christian Association was held in Alumni Hall, and was conducted by Rev. P. H. Miller, D. D., pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, who used the Lutheran evening opening service on the occasion. "As Pants the Heart," (Crucifixion), was sung by Miss E. V. Harris and the Choral Society; prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. H. L. Elderdice; the hymns, "Sun of My Soul, Thou Savior Dear," and "Soldiers of Christ Arise" were sung by the congregation, and the sermon was preached by Rev. Frank M. Bristol, D. D., pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. Church, Washington, D. C. It was an eloquent and interesting discourse and was heard by a very large audience, probably more than a thousand people having been present. At its close the Choral Society sang "O Lord, Most Merciful" and the service was closed with prayer and the benediction by Rev. W. R. Graham, D. D.

Three youths were drowned in Leonard's abandoned quarry, on Garrison lane, near Gwynn's Fall, in the vicinity of Baltimore, on Wednesday. They were: Arthur Kalbfleisch, aged 14, son of Lieut. Kalbfleisch, of the Baltimore police; Arthur Barkman, aged 19, son of Joseph B. Barkman, and Edmund C. Sheets, son of Charles F. Sheets, all of Baltimore. Their bodies were recovered on Thursday. It is strictly moral in ton and character and not one word said or done t offend the most fastidious lady or gentleman The features this year are better than ever. one of the most prominent is the renowned Takezawa Royal Japanese Troupe (eight people), these dexterous Orientals appear in many amazing acrobatic and novelty acts, all gorgeously embellished with unique and costly paraphernalia and costumes typical of their native land. Another great card is the introduction of Prof. John White's conclave of trained animals, which comprises several Arabian horses, twenty-five dogs, goats, mules and monkeys, all marvelously trained and exhibiting exploits and tricks out of the ordinary line. Then there are many big aerialistic acts, clever lady gymnasts, up-to-date clowns, jugglers, wire walkers and sensational specialists of every kind. Seats are provided for five thousand persons, uniformed ushers are in attendance to look after the wants and comfort of patrons. The street parade will leave the show grounds on the morning of the exhibition promptly at eleven o'clock. The exact day and date here is one day only, FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

A GOOD COUGH MEDICINE.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says Druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by W. Scott Zepp, Druggist, Westminster.

Do not forget the festival at the Frizellburg hall to night. Berries and cream.

SEVEN YEARS IN BED.

"Will wonders ever cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. L. Pease, of Lawrence, Kan. Women suffering from Headache, Backache, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Fainting and Dizzy Spells will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed. Only 50c at Shaw Drug Co.

Mr. W. S. Whedon, Cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work. For sale by W. Scott Zepp, Druggist, Westminster.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.
MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:
Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
