ED BY INDIANS.

y of the Early Days in

old Indian hunter laid down per saying: "I've been amused tily to hear some folks discussing threatened outbreak among the skins, the coolness with which ey talk of such and the sneaking ympathy they've got with the devils. I'd just like to take such and give them just a month's residence on the plains when the Indians are holding councils and breathing out fire and murder and worse. I tell you, I'd hear mighty little talk of sympathy then and see precious little coolness. But it takes us, who have gone through such, to know the horrors of an Indian war, the terrors threatening not men alone, but women and children—aye, the very baby in the cradle. I don't believe in people's hair turning white with trouble and anxiety, for mine would be as white as cotton if such would do it. Especially once did I have a fearful experience with redskins. Want to hear about it?

"Well, it was in 1848, and I'd been out trading among the Flatheads and the Nez Perces for nearly two years off and on, when one day I caught on to a scheme the Flatheads had got up to raid a little settlement near to where Canton, Nev., now stands. There were three families living there, and the plan was to wait until the men went to Carson City for provisions, when the women and children were to be killed and the cattle run off by one party, while another waylaid the men on the way back and murdered them. I was up about Winnemucca when I got hold of this, and set off for Canton as hard as I could go, but the men were gone by the time I reached the settlement, which was called Ridley's camp. I had reason to fear the Indians were only a few hours behind me, and we had to move quickly. Our only chance was to hide out in the mountains till they left the neighborhood or to work our way as best we could by night to Carson City.

"It was useless to think of saving the men, so I just kept that part of the business to myself. There were in all 13 of us, two women and their seven children and three little chaps, whose mother had died the week before, and me. The first thing I did while the women were getting ready was to stampede the cattle and horses to keep the Indians from getting them; then, as we started, I shut up the houses to keep the redskins as long as possible there before they found out the people had run away.

"We made the little creek called Snake river by daylight, and after reconnoitering I made the whole party wade out to an island in the middle, which was about 20 by 30 feet and covered with flags and rushes and some stunted willows. Here we lay all day, for the most part down on our stomachs under the brush. Of course we could build no fire or move about, so we ate the cold victuals the women had brought along, and I dipped up water in my cap. Twice parties of Indians stopped not a hundred yards below where we were to water their horses, but judging from their actions I knew they did not suspect any one was near them, but were probably on their way to Ridley's. They did not linger, but rode on at once, much to my relief, for all the time they were within hearing I am sure I did not draw a breath a minute for fear one of the children would cry out, when we would have all been massacred, but the poor little things, with the exception of a child a few weeks old, were too badly scared to stir or speak unless bidden, and as for the women, they put any man I ever saw to shame with their calmness and courage.

"When night came, we struck out for a line of hills lying about five miles away, where I counted on finding a cave, or at least a hiding place. Of course I and the women and the larger children could have made it without difficulty, but being obliged to wait on the little ones and to carry them every half mile or so we were nearly all night getting to the nearest hill. We'd gone about a mile when low down on the horizon I saw a dull glow and knew the Indians were burning the camp and that they'd be on the trail in a little while. When we got to the hill, I could see nothing like a cave and while it was pretty y wooded there was no place to where the Indians would not spy directly. I was looking about me en I caught a glimpse of a black ear running around a rocky spur bout half way up the hill. I followed just in time to see her go tumbling or climbing down a sort of gash in the earth, which I knew must be her den. Without stopping I jumped after her and found myself in a little cave about 10 by 10 feet, but with another larger one leading away toward the center of the hill.

"The bear began to growl when she saw me, and I saw, too, when my eyes got accustomed to the dim light, that she had two cubs in the den with her, which she was going to defend. So, aiming as carefully as I could, I fired at her, breaking her skull, after which I killed the two cubs and transferred my party to the cave. The last of the cold meat and bread was then eaten, and the women and children, creeping into the larger division, which was, however, only about four feet in height, went to rest. But I was too anxious to rest, so I hoisted myself out of the cavern and climbed to the top of the hills to see if I could see ought of the Indians.

"Several times it seemed to me that I saw a band moving along the line of the horizon, and while the specks might have been cattle, I thought it best to stay where we were all that day, that night and the next day. Our great trouble was water, which had to be brought from a spring on the other side of the hill, and as only a small quantity could be brought at a time, my cap being the only vessel had, the children especially suffered a great deal. At last one of the women discovered a flat rock with a hollow dip in the middle which would hold about two quarts or so, and I kept this filled as a cistern. I ventured that night to roast a piece of the bear in a hole in the ground, which change of diet was a welcome one. I never passed such a time since I was born, for I dared not sleep an hour for fear of a surprise, and the weight of responsibility I felt, with those poor helpless creatures on my hands was simply awful.

"Late on the second day, when I climbed the hill for a last look, I saw a small band of Indians not more than an eighth of a mile away. They did not number more than seven, but were armed and in full war dress and were heading straight for the hill. Dropping on all fours, I ran as fast as I could for a mouth of the cavern and scrambling down, soon had the women and children crouched up in the far end of the larger division, where no shots fired into the smaller could reach them, though I hoped the Indians would either pass by altogether or fail to find us if they halted. Silence then was an absolute necessity, and the woman impressed this on the children. I then went back and by clinging to one of the bushes swinging across the entrance to the cave peered out to see what the redskins meant to do. I could see they had struck our trail and suspected we were somewhere about, for they dismounted and, scattering, began to search the woods.

"As they drew near our hiding place I dropped down into it and cocked the guns the women had brought and my own trusty rifle. I suppose my frequent goings in and comings out had left some trace, for they seemed to notice the entrance at once, and presently I saw a head peering over. The dim light of the cave might have prevented the owner from seeing me, but as ill luck would have it, the infant child I spoke of wailed out just at this particular moment. The cry was stifled in an instant, but it had been heard, and the head craned over further, while another and another popped over. I was crouching down as close as I could, but hearing the click of a trigger I knew concealment was no longer possible and blazed away. Two screams told me a couple of heads had been hit, and the third disappeared. I heard a voice shouting for the others to come up and could distinguish the tones of a colloquy being held, though without hearing what was said.

"Presently a lighted torch was flung into the cave, but I had retreated into the farther one, and, nothing being visible, the Indians were nonplused, and I heard one cry out that there was nothing there. Another retorted angrily that some one had killed Blue Water and Leaping Turtle. This was followed by a patter of shots on the floor of the cave, one of which, rebounding, struck one of the children on the breast, but, though the bullet imbedded itself in his skin, the plucky little fellow did not utter a sound. As their firing still produced no effect, the Indians did not know how to account for matters, and presently one of them was imprudent enough to stick his head over the edge, but I made no move, and they held another council. It was evident that they feared to enter the cave, not knowing how many lay concealed within it, and at last they hit on the very plan I had been dreading.

"A lighted torch was thrown over, and a quantity of leaves and moss was pushed after it, but their amiable intention of smoking us out failed, owing to the dampness of the leaves and moss and my having deluged the earthen floor of the cave with all the water we had on hand. Seeing this fail they summoned up courage to enter the cavern, and as we saw the five forms leap into our hiding place we opened fire on them. I killed my man instantly, and so did Mrs. Ridley, who immediately let a duskey devil who, screaming, rushed upon her, have the full contents of the other barrel in his breast. The other woman missed her aim and the next moment was in the grasp of one of the Indians, but before I could come to her rescue her son, a boy of 12, had flung his arms around the redskin's neck and, hanging on his back, kept him from striking, when the woman, picking up a tomahawk, struck him a tremendous blow on the forehead. He dropped like a log crushing the boy beneath him. The remaining Indian, seeing his companions fall, made a break for the entrance and was just climbing out when I caught him and, firing, brought him down with a broken arm and a ball in his side.

"Seeing him helpless and thinking him dying, I did not shoot again, but went back to the women, whom I found shrieking with excitement. I quieted them and congratulated them on their courage, which, however, was entirely gone as soon as the call for it was over. I rolled the Indian off the boy, who was considerably bruised by the weight of the dead body, but otherwise not hurt. The wounded Indian I found to be an old acquaintance of mine, and, seeing he was dying rapidly, I did not disturb him. He told me that finding Ridley's camp deserted, the main party had gone back home, but that suspecting me of having warned them, some of the young hot bloods had followed us to be avenged on me. They were pretty certain that I was the only man in the party, but did not know but that others had joined us.

"Well, we took possession of the ponies and were able to travel much more rapidly, though had it not been nearly desperate to think of walking in our exhausted condition I would not have risked riding them, for a man on foot has 20 chances on the plains to one the mounted fellow has. We reached Carson City without further adventure, though starvation and thirst and fatigue were our constant companions, and there found the woman's husband and the other man, who were just starting home. I had to get a doctor to give me something to quiet my nerves, for for eight days and nights I had not slept more than 30 minutes out of every 24 hours, and even after all were safe I could not quit listening for noises."

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of
