Some of our Democratic journalistic brethren want to know why strikes occur if labor is generally employed and wages remunerative. By the exercise of a little thought they would discover that labor is governed by the same principle that rules in the commercial world, the law of supply and demand controling prices in large measure. A strike would be suicidal policy on the part of labor if the supply were much greater than the demand for it. But when the work to be done exceeds the capacity of labor to perform it, higher wages may be demanded with some show of success. To get more when you have much is an innate element of human nature.

Mrs. Carrie Nation, of Kansas, is bent on obtaining notoriety. A few days ago, while traveling on a St. Lawrence river steamer, she lectured the male passengers severely on the evils of smoking and followed up her suggestions by snatching the cigars from the lips of a number of smokers. They all bore her assaults good naturedly, except a man named Eugene Foley, who slapped her face and put a stop to her further proceedings in that direction. Mr. Foley is not to be commended for striking a woman and ought to be severely punished for doing so. The law affords him ample protection against Mrs. Nation's interference with his rights and privileges, and he should have invoked its agency in punishing the assault which interfered with their exercise.

The race problem in this country cannot be solved by such processes as have been resorted to by the white citizens of Pierce City, Mo., a brief account of which will be found elsewhere in this week's SENTINEL. The colored people cannot be driven from the country; they are here to stay. They cannot be governed by mob law, such as prevailed in the assaults upon them at Pierce City. Such incidents only serve to awaken in them a desire for revenge which is indulged when a convenient opportunity occurs. Crime, on their part, answered by crime on the part of the whites, only begets further crime. A strict observance of law on the side of the stronger race is necessary to beget respect for law by the weaker. When a colored man, or a white man either, for that matter, violates law let him be punished, and adequately punished, by law. A due observance of this principle would soon produce a marked diminution of crime of all sorts.

Ignoring national issues seems to be the game the Democrats of the United States are playing this year. Following the example of their fellows in Maryland and Ohio the Democrats of Pennsylvania, by their representatives in the convention at Harrisburg last week, declined to consider national questions. This is not surprising. They have twice in succession been badly whipped in the country at large through pinning their faith to the vagaries of Col. Bryan and adopting theories in direct conflict with the opinions of their alleged founder, Thomas Jefferson, while at the same time proclaiming their continued faith in the principles enunciated by the author of the Declaration of Independence. They have nothing to gain by clinging to Populistic ideas in this section of the country, in the State campaigns of this year, hence content themselves with a general expression of devotion to the dogmas of Jefferson. Who doubts, however, that, next year, they will be ready to take up and advocate any course that may seem best calculated to win popular favor? The party that nursed the "Rag Baby," and howled for the unlimited coinage of silver, on a badly depreciated basis, is not likely to repudiate any old proposition, that, advocated, may promise political success.

An explosion, caused by the tilting of a ladle containing 20 tons of molten iron, occurred in a blast furnace at Youngstown, Ohio, on Sunday, causing the death of 8 or 10 men and seriously injuring several others.

An Ohio river steamer was capsized on Tuesday, six miles below Paducah, Ky., and sank immediately, drowning 35 of the 60 people on board.

Democracy and Prosperity Antipodes.

Labor in this country sought to improve its condition in 1892, when employment was general and wages fair, by using the ballot to entrust power in the hands of the Democratic party. Mr. Cleveland went the second time into the Presidency and a Democratic majority in both Houses of Congress was chosen with the expectation that better times would follow. Can any Democrat aver, with sincerity, that the succeeding four years furnished any evidence that Democratic theories were conducive to the welfare of the laboring, farming, or any other interest of the country? Is it not true that Mr. Cleveland's second term was fraught with disaster to every interest except, possibly, that of the money lender? Labor was idle, capital was unemployed, farm products were lower in price than ever before or since, the goods of merchants lay unsalable on their shelves and general financial disaster marked the period.

This condition was relieved when such a change occurred in the use of the ballot, as substituted, in 1896, a a Republican President and Congress for the Democratic Executive and Legislative Departments of the previous four years. Of that there is no manner of doubt, since a period of unexampled prosperity has followed the change. Labor is generally employed and at very decidedly more remunerative wages than marked the time of Democratic sway, farm products command fair prices, manufactures flourish and all classes are prosperous.

The difference in conditions in the two periods referred to has not been accidental. It is the result of well defined causes. Under the Democratic administration manufactures languished because manufacturers feared to venture into an unprotected field. Labor was underpaid because labor was not in demand. Farm products were reduced in price because many of the people were idle and were forced to economize in the consumption of such products, and merchants were unsuccessful because the people were without money to buy their wares.

When Democratic newspapers, therefore, advise labor to employ the ballot to right inequalities in wages—meaning that this can be accomplished by investing the Democratic party with political power—it is only necessary to contrast the condition of labor under the rule of the two parties during the last decade. If Democratic rule wrought disaster not only to labor, but to every other interest of the country, and Republican policy brought prosperity to the laborer, the farmer, the manufacturer and the merchant, it would be the height of folly to return to the state which brought the former condition into existence. Democratic success and prosperity do not go hand in hand in this country.

This is the logic of fact and it is true. Why then should the people strengthen the hands of Democracy by investing them with power in local and State affairs? And then, too, there is not a local interest in Maryland that did not receive more valuable assistance when the Republicans were in power, for a short period, than it is experiencing from the party now in the ascendency. The best interests of the people were promoted by Republican success, in State and Nation, and it would be the part of wisdom to keep that party in power in the Nation and to restore it to power in the State.

Let Democrats Answer.

ED. SENTINEL: A taxpayer (not a politician) wishes to know who was responsible for our last extra session of Legislature, what was the cost of said session and subsequent enumeration in this State, and whether thereby our taxes were raised, and, if not, would not the saving of that amount have enabled our State officials to reduce our State taxes to a corresponding amount?

Yours,
A HARD WORKING TAXPAYER.

George Riley, the walking boss at Ridgeville tunnel, who killed John Ryan, a sub-boss, on the night of August 12 and fled, is still at large. Riley is described as a man about 45 years of age, medium height, grayish mustache, rather stout, weighs about 165 pounds and right hand gone. He sometimes wore an iron hook on the stump of his right arm to take the place of the missing member and sometimes an artificial hand. The authorities of Frederick county are offering a reward for information that may lead to his arrest.

Gen'l. Louis Victor Baughman.

Unless the good people of Frederick are alert and keep a sharp lookout upon our handsome and genial friend, Gen'l. Baughman, there is great danger of his going into a sudden collapse because of his fear and dread of negro control in Maryland.

When forty years ago our enthusiastic friend turned his back upon Frederick City, with all its captivating social allurements, and went South to get his rights by fighting against the Union and his state, doubtless then, in the exuberance and freshness of youth, he felt and believed, as some others did, that one Southern gentleman was equal to and could easily overcome and whip five of Lincoln's hirelings or Yankee mudsills.

He no doubt fought bravely to make good his belief, and went through campaigns and battles enough in the rebel army to have that illusion most effectually dispelled and demolished. After the lapse of all these years, it is pitiable to see this old grizzled veteran quaking in his shoes, and with somewhat enfeebled frame, striding forth like Peter the Hermit, of old, trying to sound a bugle blast whose clarion notes would rally and put new life and enthusiasm into the officeholding veterans of the Gorman and Rasin phalanx.

If General Baughman alone (of all the gallant men who went from this State to serve under the stars and bars) is scared and afraid of the negro ghost which, in his declining years, his vivid imagination has conjured up; if he has so reversed his old time opinion that he now believes that one colored man can vote, overcome, and control more than six white voters in Maryland; and if the General's desire would be to spend the remainder of his days in peace and profound quiet, in Arcadian simplicity, in a healthy, invigorating and beautiful region, far removed from the hurly burly, the perplexities and devious method of politicians; if he would live in the midst of, and in intimate association with, an honest, industrious and prosperous people, where the trust octopus does not exist, and will never show its hydra-head; where an exclusively white Democracy is purely Jeffersonian, and in the past was accustomed to, but under the election law passed at the extra session, will not again be able to vote for the hickory tree, opposite which was Erin's harp, attuned to Jackson and Liberty, where more than 200 Democratic majority is given by tickets voted crisp and clean as they come from the printer's hands; if he would spend the autumn of life in a blessed region; then we can advise and confidently recommend "Myers' District," in this county, to him as an ideal locality, where neither on its lofty hill tops, along their gentle slopes, in its beautiful valleys, by Pipe creek's rapidly flowing stream, in the grateful shade of its dense and stately forests; nor as he pensively rambles through its green meadows or beside the babbling brooks, which in the sunshine flash and gleam through them like strands of silver, will his placid wanderings be disturbed by a negro phantom, much less by a shadow cast across his path by a single colored man. There he can hold sweet communion with nature, muse and philosophise to his heart's content and in pathetic and resonant tones, aglow with fervid eloquence, proclaim:

"In Myers' district he can stretch refrain,
No black ghost its peace embroils;
All are men of the white's most choice
Rich mussen lobe" and not despoil.
No negro men its borders roam;
No black man its votes defile,
All are whites to the manor born
In Myers' district every time.

War prevailed on the colored people of Pierce City, a town of about 3000 inhabitants, in the south-western corner of Missouri for fifteen hours, on Monday and Tuesday last. A Miss Gazelle Wild had been wantonly murdered by a colored man, and suspicion fell upon William Godley. He was promptly lynched. Then the mob began a war upon the other colored people, whom they drove from the town. French Godley, grandfather of William, was shot to death and an aged colored man named Peter Hampton was cremated in his home, which, with other houses inhabited by the despised race, to the number of four or five, were set on fire and burned. It is said to be doubtful whether the man Godley, charged with the murder, was guilty. The war on the helpless blacks only ceased when all except a few railroad porters had fled the town. Past crimes committed by negroes are quoted as the cause of the savage uprising, and the determination that hereafter no member of the race shall be permitted to remain in the town.

While several young ladies and gentlemen were rowing on Lake Royer, near Buena Vista and Pen-Mar, on Sunday last, their boat was capsized and Miss Mary Finafrock, of York, Pa., was drowned. Her body was recovered on Tuesday. A coroner's jury investigated the accident and on Thursday rendered the following verdict:

"The said Mary Finifrock came to her death on the 18th day of August by the capsizing of a boat on Lake Royer, in Washington county, the capsizing of the boat being due to criminal carelessness by one Frank Rinehart, and so the jury say that the said Frank Rinehart willfully and feloniously did kill and murder the said Mary Finafrock."

Rinehart resides at Smithburg. He denies that he rocked the boat, but all the other witnesses examined testified that he did.

Eight colored men employed on the improvements to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, near Mt. Airy, visited that place on Monday night and became hilarious and disorderly. They did not attack or interfere with any of the citizens but made things lively by loud yelling, firing pistols in the air, &c. Warrants were issued by Justice Frank C. Lewis for their arrest and Deputy Sheriff Trayer managed to get four of them into custody. Justice Lewis committed them to the county jail for the action of the grand jury and they were brought to prison here on Tuesday night. Their names are Baxter Patterson, W. M. Buckner, Debney Whick and James Montgomery.

Sixty-five persons were lost by the sinking of the Alaskan steamer Islander, off the coast of Alaska, on Thursday, 15th inst. The steamer ran into submerged ice and went down in a short time. The passengers aboard numbered 107 and the crew 71. The lost belonged in about equal proportions to passengers and crew. Most of the passengers were residents of the Pacific coast.

Lightning struck the works of the Atlantic Oil Refining Company at Point Breeze, Philadelphia, on Monday afternoon, causing a fire which destroyed the works, entailing a loss of upwards of $500,000. Several explosions occurred, one of them of a gasoline tank, by which five men were killed. In the other explosions about 100 persons were more or less injured, 15 of them seriously.

Five tons of dynamite stored in a round house exploded at Herkimier, N. Y., on Monday night, killing twelve or thirteen members of a Central Railroad bridge gang who were occupying a car on a side track nearby. Much property was damaged by the explosion.

Tobacco and Cigars. I think I know them all out on loose Coffees; at least the public says so. Try my 15-cent Coffee. It is taking the place of Moca and Java in many families. I also have added to my stock a full line of feed, such as screenings and Cracked Corn. No trouble to show goods. All goods delivered free.

Give me a call.
