aspect of listening. There was a quick tearing, a slight thud, an arrested cry, and broken fragments of ice and woodwork floated upon the dark water over her head.

"What the devil's all this noise about?" muttered Mr. Ankerdine testily as an unaccustomed clamor penetrated to his study and attracted him forth to seek its import.

Before the great hall fire the once breezy drapery of a dinner dress oozing dark pools and steaming lazily, lay his daughter. A stranger, rills of moisture trickling from each fold of his clothing, was chafing her hands and vociferating for assistance. He ceased suddenly as her father appeared, with servants at his heels, and stood back beyond the play of the firelight. Mr. Ankerdine knelt down beside her as she showed signs of recovery.

"I have to thank you for rescuing my daughter, I suppose, sir," he said to the stranger. "The best kind of gratitude is the practical. You must be made comfortable first, and I can din you with words after."

The man had no time to answer. A post chaise dashed up to the porch with a groaning of leather and jingling of harness, a broad shouldered young fellow completely enveloped in a huge wrap precipitated himself rather than got out of the vehicle and gripped the old man by both hands, exclaiming: "How's the gout, sir? And where is Millie—not here to welcome me?"

"At the bottom of the pond but for this gentleman," said Mr. Ankerdine. "I must introduce you when I— Hello!" he gasped in a species of stupefaction, for the gallant stranger had slipped out into the night, and Lieutenant Rigden, his daughter's prospective husband, had started in pursuit.

The first man, stimulated by the slow diffusion of warmth as his limbs coursed with blood again, held his own at first, but was soon captured.

"You must come back with me, M. de Frontignac," said the young sailor. "It is the fortune of war."

"Again the fortune of war?" replied the Frenchman. "A cold fortune at present, mon ami." He fell into step beside his companion without resistance.

"Millie has asked for you," Mr. Ankerdine observed dryiy as the pair reached the house. "She appeared surprised that you should prefer scouring the country at midnight to greeting her. However, each to his taste."

The sailor deferred apologies and led the way to the drawing room at once locking the door and placing the key in his pocket—a maneuver which did not escape the young lady's notice and added a spice of alarm to the shy affection with which she returned her lover's caress.

"Why did you do that, Edward?" she whispered anxiously in his ear. "Is there danger outside, or is that a bad man? I fell into the pond and he jumped in, too, on this freezing night and saved my life, dear!"

"Thank God it was saved, little girl," he replied "But that this gentleman should have been the agent rather complicates matters. We must at any rate thank him, Millie. So first let me introduce in form the Count de Frontignac, captain in the navy of Republican France. Monsieur, I have the honor to introduce my fiancee."

The Frenchman now advanced and bent over the slim fingers extended. "My good luck has not been entirely dead, then, that I could render even so small a service to so gracious a demoiselle," he said.

"Why, you are soaking, sir!" exclaimed the girl. "How wicked you are! He will die!"

"One moment, Millie!" exclaimed Rigden. "There are more important questions than those of etiquette and raiment to be discussed. That this gentleman is brave, you will know from what he has done to-night—more than brave, for he risked almost certain death by discovering himself to save you. But he will be as dangerous to succor. His frigate was captured recently by a British squadron, and he was to be sent, along with the prisoners, to London under escort. I assume he has escaped and is attempting to reach the coast. Millie, this man preserved to me all I hold dear, but—he is one of my country's most active enemies."

"Perhaps you are mistaken," said Millie, with a woman's readiness to escape wide questions by a side issue.

"No mistake here," said Rigden, with a short laugh, "I was one of his captors, and the last time we met was upon his quarter deck."

Millie drew her lover aside and placed her hands on his shoulders. The Frenchman was staring into the fire.

"Edward, you must let him go and help him, too. Is this man's honor or woman's gratitude to drag him back to a dungeon? If so, noble deeds were better unacted and will be if they are to be repaid as we would repay this."

"Listen, Millie," said the young man in a very low voice. "This gentleman is an important capture to lose, and by restoring him to the authorities I am certain of recognition, which means a ship and—a—wife."

"This is what I had begun to fear," she said breathlessly. "You must not let it scale one featherweight in the balance. We owe him my life, and not the broad pennant of an admiral would cover the blot on your honor if you give him up. Edward, can you?"

He hesitated only for a minute, then turned around and said curtly: "Venus has triumphed, monsieur. I will search you to see that no papers are concealed. Pardon me, there shall be no indignity, and duty, which has come out something hardly in this encounter, renders it necessary. Also some clothes are required and food. I will then do myself the pleasure of putting you upon the safest route."

The paper of the people, for the people and with the people.

Honest in Motive, Fearless in Expression, Sound in Principle.

A newspaper is an educator: there are all kinds of educators, but the man who spends money judiciously and liberally is betetr able to impart his knowledge than the man who has little or nothing to spend.

THE SUN is the highest type of a newspaper. The Sun's Special Correspondents throughout the United States, as well as in Europe, South Africa, China, and, in fact, all over the world, make it an up-to-date newspaper.

The Market Reports and commercial features put the farmer, the merchant and the broker in close touch with the markets at Baltimore, Norfolk, Charleston, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other places which are prominent centers.

From now on the news of the world promises to be more interesting than ever before and national and political questions will arise, making probably the most eventful period in the country's history.

This, together with the corps of editors and reporters at Baltimore, Washington and New York, make The Sun invaluable to its readers.

THE MD. COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, OF UNION BRIDGE, Md.,

will hold its opening exercises SEP. 10th, 1901, at 10 A. M., to which all kind friends and patrons are cordially invited.

The M. C. I. begins its session with splendid facilities to accommodate, in first class style, a large number of boarding students, at moderate rates.

The annex erected during vacation furnishes a very large Dining Hall and Gymnasium, above which is an Assembly Hall with seating capacity of about 1,000. The next floor provides new Recitation Rooms; one fine large room will be used as an Art Studio, where classes will be taught according to the most modern and improved methods.

The former Assembly Hall has been converted into a Commercial Department, one room for Type-writing Classes, another fitted up for a Bank; also departments for Book-keeping and Short Hand. It will no longer be necessary for our boys and girls to seek a Business College in the City, as this course will be thoroughly and practically taught by a proficient and capable instructor.

The entire school will be fitted up with most modern sanitary improvements and heated by steam.

You may read about this promising school but since "seeing is believing" come visit us and find out for yourselves.

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,

EDWARD LYNCH.
