A Noble Life Ended.

The people of all the States of the Union—North, South, East and West—have by public meetings, by the official action of Governors, municipal officers and in every conceivable way exhibited their respect for the character of the late President, their sorrow at his death and their abhorrence of the unspeakable crime by which the country has been robbed of his eminent services as its Executive. If the multiplied and innumerable tributes to his memory were collected and published in a series of volumes, few libraries are large enough to contain the books they would fill. Coming from a source which has not been in sympathy with the course of President McKinley's administration upon the recent acquisition of territory beyond the seas, we regard the estimate placed upon his character by the Baltimore Sun, in an editorial from which we have quoted at considerable length on the first page, as expressing, substantially, the light in which he has been regarded by his political opponents. His political and personal friends could not say anything much stronger in his praise.

Church and State, clergymen and laymen, professional men, merchants, mechanics, laborers and, in fact, persons in every walk of life throughout the land have borne testimony to their belief in the purity, integrity, ability and greatness of this victim of anarchy. The columns of the great daily newspapers have been filled with eulogies of the dead President, but all the papers in the land combined could not find space for the publication of every public utterance in his honor. Never before, in the history of the country, has such honor been paid to the memory of a man.

The body of the President was removed from Buffalo to Washington on Monday, by a funeral train the passage of which was everywhere marked with demonstrations of grief. People gathered at the stations along its route in great numbers and stood in silent sorrow as the train sped by. In large cities, where stops were made, immense crowds gathered, bells were tolled and gloom appeared upon all faces.

Mrs. McKinley accompanied the remains, and was once or twice permitted to pass some time alone with her dead, in the car which bore his remains to the National Capitol. Pity for her in her great bereavement is almost as keen as sorrow for the death of her distinguished husband.

The train arrived in Washington shortly before 9 P. M., and the body of the President was at once, under escort, conveyed to the White House, where it lay through the night in the East room, where he had so often greeted, with a friendly shake of the hand, so many of his fellow-citizens.

On Tuesday morning the remains were removed to the Capitol, where funeral services were held in the Rotunda. Bishop Edward G. Andrews, of the M. E. Church, delivered the funeral discourse. Ex-President Cleveland was present at the service, and the throng of people, at Washington, on the occasion, was so great that much inconvenience was experienced by many. The crush was so great that many persons were injured some of them severely. The floral tokens were so numerous and magnificent as to be beyond description.

At 8.10 P. M., Tuesday, a funeral train, bearing the remains, left Washington for Canton, Ohio, where, according to the desire of his bereaved widow, his last resting place will be.

The train reached Canton at noon on Wednesday and the dead President's body was taken to the courthouse, where it lay in state until 6 P. M., when it was removed to the house which had for so many years been the home of the deceased and where he and his now stricken and heartbroken wife exemplified the sacredness and beauty of a true christian married life.

It is impossible to describe the scenes at Canton. During the five hours the body lay in state at the courthouse 50,000 people passed through the building, President Roosevelt and the members of the Cabinet having been the first to gaze upon the dead face of the man so loved, as he lay in his coffin among his old neighbors and friends. Many other thousands were unable to obtain a last look at his features. The town was so crowded that many persons could obtain no lodging and had to walk the streets all night.

After the body had been removed to the home it remained there until Thursday, when it was removed to the First Methodtst Episcopal Church, where funeral services were held.

The closing scenes in this national tragedy were marked by extraordinory demonstrations of grief, not only at Canton, but throughout the world. At Canton there was, first, a procession from the McKinley home, on North Market street, to the church, of which the murdered President was a member. This procession was chiefly composed of men prominent in official life and members of the family. It reached the church at 1.45 P. M., and 15 minutes later the funeral services began.

Rev. Dr. C. Manchester, pastor of the church, preached, and Bishop Isaac W. Joyce, of Minneapolis, offered prayer.

At 3.30 P. M. the services were over and an imposing procession escorting the body started for West Lawn Cemetery. This procession was much longer than the previous one. It included, besides the new President, the Cabinet, Senators and Representatives in Congress, Governors of States and members of the McKinley family, the entire National Guard of Ohio, militia bodies from Georgia and other States, many Grand Army posts, Confederate veterans, civic organizations and a host of others.

A little after 4 o'clock the cemetery was reached. There Bishop Joyce read the burial service and the body was entombed in the public receiving vault. Later it will be buried in the McKinley family lot.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific the country showed its grief. Bells tolled, cannon were fired, funeral parades were held, orations were delivered and there were memorial services in churches. In many localities railroad trains and street cars stopped for five minutes as the church services at Canton began. The telegraph wires were stilled for the same period.

Abroad, memorial services were held in Canada, Mexico, Central and Soutlr America, Europe, China and India. Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral, London, witnessed, perhaps, the most notable of these demonstrations in honor of the memory of this great American.

The Inquirer, of Philadelphia, suggests the erection of a monument to the late President McKinley, in that city, and offers to head a popular subscription for the purpose with $1000. The Philadelphia Record approves the suggestion and proposes to duplicate the Inquirer's offer, if the suggestion of that paper "shall find a fitting response at the hands of Philadelphians." Such proposals from Democratic sources show the respectful regard entertained for the martyred President by his political opponents.

Judge Stake, on Monday, rendered an opinion against the city of Hagerstown in the case in which the Western Maryland Railroad had a bill for injunction to restrain the Mayor and Council from further prosecuting a suit against the railroad for maintaining stockyards within the city limits. The city contended that the stockyards were a nuisance, and that it fell within the authority of the municipality to suppress them. The court ruled that the yards or enclosures in themselves were not a nuisance; that if the manner in which they were conducted proved offensive to the health of the city the Mayor and Council would have the right to pass all necessary ordinances to suppress the nuisance.

Wm. McKinley.

A multiplicity of words in the editorial columns of the SENTINEL, in praise of the character of William McKinley, late President of the United States, foully murdered by an anarchist, could add but little to the exalted estimation in which his memory will be held by its readers. He was a man possessed of native nobility of soul, developed by a life devoted, first, to the service of God and the Divine Master, whom, with all his heart he loved; secondly, to the happiness of the wife whom he had chosen in his young manhood; thirdly, to the welfare of his fellow-men, and, fourthly, to the promotion of the prosperity and true greatness of the country, which he loved with such ardent devotion. In his christian life he was manly and consistent, in his domestic life an example to be emulated, in his social life genial, kindly and generous, in his public life controlled by sincere conviction and patriotism. The world has never seen a nobler private and public character and the world bears testimony to his goodness and greatness as it never bore testimony to these qualities in another, not even in that of the "Grand Old Man" of England, Wm. E. Gladstone.

Brought to a suffering and painful end by the bullet of an assassin, he was, if possible, more noble in death than in life. His last words should be cherished as a Christian Watchword: "It is God's Way. Let His Will Be Done, Not Ours." He died without fear, as he had lived without reproach.

"Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

President Roosevelt.

Theodore Roosevelt is now President of the United States. He took the oath of office at Buffalo, N. Y., on Saturday. He assumed the high station under most trying circumstances, but he is an honest and brave-hearted American and will meet his new responsibilities with firmness and courage. He has already announced that he will not change the policy of his predecessor and will, for a time at least, retain those of the lamented McKinley's Cabinet advisors who may be willing to retain their portfolios.

That the substantial interests of the country repose confidence in his patriotism and ability to rightly sail the Ship of State, is seen by the slight effect the catastrophe of President McKinley's tragic death has had upon monetary and financial affairs. There has been no panic and apparently no apprehension of financial trouble.

As Governor of New York Mr. Roosevelt exhibited qualities of statesmanship which have had a composing effect upon the public mind. He possesses marked ability and his public experience has been greater than that of some of the Presidents whose administrations were wise and successful and met the approbation of the people. The nation is trusting him and he will not betray the trust.

The resolutions offered by State's Attorney Edward O. Weant, in the Democratic convention, on Monday, and adopted by that body, in relation to the assassination of President McKinley, were alike creditable to their mover and to the convention, for the prompt and hearty manner in which they were accepted. They show that, however wide the differences between American citizens upon questions of public policy may be, there is no difference in sentiment concerning the necessity for the maintenance of the American form of government and for the protection of those who may, from time to time, be called upon to administer it. They show, further, that the personally noble qualities and character of the martyred President are fully recognized by his political opponents.

Abolishing Sectional Lines.

Governor Tyler, of Virginia, says: "President McKinley was crowned by his effort to abolish sectional lines, and his death cements the completion of his cherished work."

"At the peace jubilee at Philadelphia," continued Governor Tyler, "I stood by his side as the blue-coated veterans shook his hand. He turned to me with tears in his eyes and said: 'Now, Governor, if we only had a gray-coated Confederate by the side of each one of these, the day would be rounded and my happiness complete.' I looked him straight in the face and said: 'Do you mean that, Mr. President?' 'Indeed I do,' answered Mr. McKinley, and added: 'To see the entire abolition of sectional lines is the dearest wish I have.' "

Congressman Pearre proposes to introduce bills in Congress with a view to preventing the landing of anarchists, and the deportation of those known to have anarchistic tendencies.

Democratic County Convention.

The Democratic convention to nominate a legislative and county ticket was held in Odd Fellows' Hall, this city, on Monday. The ticket, with one exception—the nomination for sheriff—was made by acclamation and was evidently the outcome of an agreement between the opposing factions arrived at before the convention was called to order. Following are the nominations:

For the House of Delegates—Jesse W. Fuss, of Union Bridge district; Henry J. Hoffacker, of Manchester district; Frank P. Rupp, of Woolery's district; Oliver A. Haines, of Myers' district.

For Sheriff—Francis A. Crawford, of Franklin district.

For County Commissioner—Daniel J. Hesson, of Taneytown district.

For County Treasurer—John E. Masenhimer, of Manchester district.

For County Surveyor—M. T. Yeiser, of Myers' district.

The convention was called to order by Benjamin F. Crouse, chairman of the county central committee, and T. Herbert Shriver, of Union Mills, was elected chairman, and John J. Reese, of this city, secretary. Mr. Shriver, on taking the chair, suggested that before proceeding to the business of the convention it would be appropriate to take some action in relation to the assassination of the honored head of the Nation, and requested that resolutions to that effect be submitted for consideration. State's Attorney E. O. Weant responded to the request by offering the following and moving their adoption. Several voices were heard simultaneously seconding the motion, which was put by the chairman and unanimously adopted by the convention:

While the specific duties of the convention are the nomination of candidates for the House of Delegates of Maryland and county offices and for the selection of the official body for the management of the affairs of the Democratic party in Carroll county, we, as representatives of the whole body of Democrats of the county, are not unmindful of the tragic occurrence at Buffalo, N. Y., on the 6th inst., which brought death to the honored Executive of this great country. We view with abhorrence at all times the crime of assassination, but the crime of Leon Czolgosz was one of peculiar enormity. His victim was the chief Executive of a free people, who had been freely chosen by them to execute the laws which they themselves, through their representatives in Congress, had enacted; and the blow which fell upon him was a blow upon the entire body of the great American Commonwealth. The crime was committed by a representative of a cause utterly subversive of all civilization, and which, triumphant, would reduce the human race to the condition of wild beasts. We abhor and detest it above measure and favor the adoption of means by which it shall be crushed and destroyed, utterly, in the land consecrated to the maintenance of freedom and the rights of man.

We recognize that, while Wm. McKinley became the victim of this detestable organization because he held the first office in the land, by the will of the people, the widespread and universal mourning of people of all parties and all creeds, is greatly augmented by the nobility of his character as a man, and the patriotic purposes which, we sincerely believe, always actuated him in his public acts. He was always honest and true to his convictions of duty and though we differ with the political principles which he entertained and do not endorse the policies of his administration of public affairs, we fully accord to him integrity of purpose and sincerity of conviction in the course pursued by him as the Federal Executive.

His private life was above reproach and his virtues, in all the walks of life, conspicuous and shining. His devotion to the happiness, and comfort of his frail and delicate wife was a beautiful exhibition of the pure love of a true man for a pure and lovely woman. To this bereaved partner of his life we tender our deepest sympathy and trust that these expressions of veneration and regard for her noble husband, by this convention of his political opponents, may help to mitigate in some slight degree, at least, the poignancy of her great sorrow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, signed by the officers of this convention, be transmitted to Mrs. McKinley.

A committee on credentials was then appointed, and reported all the districts represented by properly accredited delegates. The convention then proceeded to nominate the ticket already named, and but four names were submitted for the House of Delegates. The formality of a ballot was dispensed with, and they were declared the choice of the convention. They are said to be friendly to Mr. Gorman.

For sheriff several names were placed in nomination, but before the ballot was taken all except Mr. Crawford, of Franklin, and William H. Wilson, of Manchester district, were withdrawn. The vote was 60 for Crawford and 5 for Wilson.

For county commissioner Mr. Hesson, of Taneytown, and Jesse Crumbacker, of Union Bridge district, were placed in nomination, but the name of Mr. Crumbacker was withdrawn and Mr. Hesson was chosen unanimously.

For county treasurer the names submitted were those of John E. Masenhimer, of Manchester, and Francis L. Hann, of Hampstead. The latter was withdrawn and Mr. Masenhimer was nominated without a ballot as a candidate for a third term.

M. T. Yeiser was nominated for county surveyor without opposition.

The convention was apparently harmonious, but there was an undercurrent of ill-feeling which had its manifestation when the districts reported the choice of their delegates for members of the county central committee. The delegates from Hampstead, and also from Union Bridge, had considerable difficulty in reaching an agreement. Following are the members of the committee:

BRAIN-FOOD NONSENSE.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at W. Blindness

IS A POSSIBLE RESULT OF DOING WITHOUT

when they are needed. It is needless to say that incorrectly fitted glasses are harmful. Do not postpone having your eyes tested. It may prove that your eyes are good, or, if they are imperfect, may save you great annoyance. Our many years of study and experience in fitting glasses are at your service.

Jewelry Wisdom.

It certainly is far from wise to buy Jewelry wherever you see Jewelry for sale.

The imitation looks like the genuine at first. The wise way is to come to us. Then you'll know what you are buying.
