Fooling With a Panther

"When I was a lad of ten," says Silas Smith, an old pioneer of Wisconsin, "my father removed to this State from New England and settled about three miles from Madison. The place was a village then, and a small one at that, and I remember once seeing a deer running down the main street with a dozen dogs after him. The road from the village to our clearing was little better than a path. There were only two farmers having oxen and wagons, and so there was little use for roads. Just at the edge of the woods outside of the village was a log barn belonging to a storekeeper named Roberts. That was the last building we passed going home, and the first one come to as we entered the village clearing. From that stable to my father's house, three miles, there was only one break in the forest, and that was only a ten-acre clearing.

"After having passed over the route several times with my father, I was permitted to travel it alone when anything was wanted from town. After a time I could have almost followed the trail with my eyes shut, and I had no fear of the wolves and panthers I heard talked about, because I was told that no wild beast ever attacked people by daylight.

"It was one of the first days of October that, as I was about halfway through the woods on an errand to the village, and the time being mid-forenoon, a panther sprung from the limbs of a large beech under which I was passing, and alighted upon the ground beside me. There was not even a growl to warn me of his presence, and he dropped down beside me as softly as a cat and as good natured as a rabbit.

"I had never heard a panther described, and, while I suspected this was one I was not sure. He jumped into the path ahead of me, and began to zigzag back and forth across it, purring all the time like a cat, and seeming to be highly pleased when my legs rubbed against him. I was a bit frightened at first, but after a few minutes I made up my mind that it was some animal that would not hurt me. and then we had a romping time. I would clap my hands and shout 'sick 'em!' and the panther would go skurrying here and there like a young pup, sometimes rolling over and over on the leaves, and again making such leaps and bounds as excited my admiration. When we came to a level piece of ground I ran a race with him, and when he got into the path ahead of me I seized the tip of his tail and hung on and laughed until the woods rang. On two or three occasions, as the panther was gamboling about me, he made a clean spring right over my head.

"It was only when we reached the edge of the village clearing that I suspected the identity of my visitor. The near presence of other human beings seemed to anger him, and he snarled and growled and tore at the earth with his claws. I patted him on the back and smoothed his fur, and he began purring again and was soon restored to good nature. He trotted along side of me about halfway to the barn I have mentioned, and then slipped away into some fallen timber.

"I had been quite badly frightened for some minutes, and now seized this chance to make off. My movements were hastened by an ominous growling from the timber, and I walked off at a fast pace, and was within a few steps of the barn when I heard a fierce scream, and turned my head and saw the great cat bounding toward me. The door af the barn was partly open, and without an instant's reflection I sprang inside and closed it. Before I could have counted twenty the panther was at hand. Luckily for me it was a strong rough door, made of slabs and well put together. The beast made terrible efforts to get in, and his sharp claws made the splinters fly as he set them into the wood. There was no inside fastening, and I had to brace with all my might to prevent his ingress. He was now worked into a fury, and I believe every hair on my head stood on end as I fought to keep him out.

"When the panther found that he could not get in by the door he sprang upon the roof. I heard him as he alighted on the shooks, and facing about, I saw there was a square hole in the roof, left for a chimney, never built. There was nothing to prevent him from leaping down, and this was just what he intended to do. I saw his shadow as he peered over the edge of the opening, and I was allready as his lithe body alighted on the floor. In two winks I was outside and had the door pulled to, and again he was foiled. He was mad and no mistake, and, although I was a young boy and almost upset with fear, I had sense enough left to be on the watch for him. The eaves of the building were so short that standing by the door, which had a button on the outside and an old strap on the inside to pull it to, I could see the ridge pole. In two or three minutes I heard the clatter of claws as the beast went up the logs, and the moment half his body showed through the opening I changed my position to the inside. He came down the roof, sputtering and growling, and again made a fierce attack on the door. I was too much for him, and he again tried the roof and the chimney hole. He came down and I went out, and he went up and I came in. He was at the door, snarling in a way to send shivers up and down my back, when I heard the report of a rifle, and directly two men came running up. The shot had been fatal, and the panther was dead. The men were going to the woods to hunt, and, although close at hand, the panther had not noticed them. There was at that time a bounty of twenty dollars, I think, on a panther's scalp, and, while the men claimed that, they gave me the skin, to reward my part of the adventure."

Advantage of Smallpox.

Have you had smallpox? If you have and you have recovered from the terrible disease without your eyesight or hearing being seriously affected, as is very often the case, you may congratulate yourself that smallpox attacked you, for you will probably, barring accidents, live considerably longer and enjoy better general health than if you had never had the disease.

It is a remarkable fact—one of nature's peculiar compensations—that people who have suffered from smallpox generally live longer than people who have not. Why this should be the case there is only an unproved theory to explain, and the theory is that the microbes which go to make smallpox, being very powerful and pugnatious, swallow up the microbes of many other diseases which they find in the systems of the persons they attack; hence, by contracting smallpox severely you stand a good chance of elminating from your system other diseases which would seize upon you at sometime or other, and, likely enough, prove fatal.

At the same time it must be admitted that smallpox is not scheduled as a preventive medicine, and the number of persons it either kills, maims or inflicts with mental incapacities is probably greater than the number of persons whose lives it prolongs.

At the same time it is a fact that the disease, though one of the most terrible known to medical science, does you a deal of good if you are capable of throwing it off without suffering after-effects of a more serious character than being pitted with the queer little marks it almost invariably leaves behind to distinguish its victims.

The Seventeen-Year Locust.

State Entomologist J. B. Smith, of Jersey, predicts an unusually bad plague of the 17-year locust next year, and has issued a bulletin to the fruit growers and farmers of the state that it will be unwise to put out any young fruit trees this fall or next spring because of the danger of total destruction. He describes it as the twenty-second brood of the periodical cicada which made its last appearance in 1885 and did much general damage. The locusts coming lay their eggs in slits made in the trunks, branches or twigs of the trees, and invariably cause serious injury to the young trees. The growers are cautioned not to trim fruit trees too closely, and, if possible, to do no trimming at all. It is also considered wise to do no budding or grafting.

It was the morning after he had been "detained at the office on business." Dearest," she said sweetly, "I want you to give me a frank and truthful answer to one question." He was glad to get off so easily, and yet he feared the question would be a corker. "Certainly, my dear," he said. "What is the question?" "I want you to tell me," she said, impressively, "whether you will be home to dinner or to breakfast." He was home to dinner that night.

There are two counties in North Carolina, Mitchell and Yancey, in which there is not a negro inhabitant. No negro has ever been permitted to settle in these counties. Yet it is a little singular that they are the banner Republican counties of the state, and at the last presidential election cast 3,040 Republiban votes to 1,445 Democratic.

THREE OLD SAWS.

If the world seems cold to you,
Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comfort hide from view
Winters that deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan,
"Ah, the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a wilderness,
Go build houses in it!
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to din it?
Raise a hut, however slight;
Weeds and brambles smother;
And to roof and meal invite
Some forlorner brother.

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till rainbows span it!
Breathe the love that life endears,
Clear from clouds to fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver;
Show them how dark Sorrow's stream
Blends with Hope's bright river.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the affection for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,

EDWARD LYNCH.

ONCE IS ENOUGH TO SEE

Gustave Dore's portrait of Dante is worth seeing—once. But once is enough. Some such look you notice on the faces of those who have suffered, and still suffer, much physical pain; people subject to rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, periodic headache, lumbago, or pain from some old lesion. This pain habit puts its marks on them, as the custom of handling ropes crooks a sailor's fingers; or as too much riding of a bicycle stamps a worried expression on certain faces. No wonder people said of the Italian poet as he passed along, "There goes

THE MAN WHO NEVER LAUGHS."

The complaints above named all yield to the action of Benson's Porous Plasters, and quickly too. Not only those, but colds and coughs, kidney and liver affections, all congestions and muscular strains, diseases of the chest, asthma and all ailments which are open to external treatment. It is frequently said that Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master. It cures when others are not even able to relieve. For thirty years the leading external remedy. The old-style plasters, as well as salves, liniments, oils, etc., have little or no efficacy as compared with it. Use it. Trust it. Keep it in the house. Ask for Benson's Plaster; take no other. All druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

Health Value of Scents.

Science at present shows a tendency to turn back to some of the beliefs of the ancients regarding scents centuries ago. Scents were accounted more than luxuries.

Odorous herbs, notably vervain, warded off the evil eye. The Mosaic ritual is full of hyssop, nard and frankincense. Greece set cinnamon gates to its elysium, and surrounded it with a scented river a hundred cubits broad, which souls swam thro' and theaeby purged themselves of earthly grossness.

Pliny records eighty-five remedies derived from odorous rue, forty-one whose base was mint, thirty-two balms from roses, twenty-one from lilies, bulb and bloom, and seventeen medicaments strong in the virtue of violets. Thus it appears that the violet cure for cancer is among the very new things that surface science. ed because they were so very old

Now, say various experts, one must choose and use perfumes with an eye, or rather, a nose to health. So it is worth while to set down the properties attributive to various perfumes.

Pure violet essence is said to be especially suitable to nervous people. But it must be obtained from the flowers themselves, not the chemical imitations. Chemically derived perfumes are irritant, poisonous even, to persons of especially sensitive constitution.

True flower scents are obtained in three ways: First, by spreading fresh blossoms upon glass thickly smeared with pure grease, letting them stand in the sun, and as they wilt replacing them until the grease is as fragrant as the flowers; second, by repeatedly infusing fresh petals in oil; and, third, by infusing them in ether, which is then distilled to a dry solid.

As this solid sells for $250 an ounce, it is easy to understand why the ether process, though far and away the best, is not commonly used. But the scented grease and the essences made by steeping it in pure spirits are never cheap. After all the scent possible has been extracted from the grease it is still fragrant enough to make the very finest perfumed soap.

All the citrene scents, bergamot, neroli, orange-flower water—are refreshing, and in a degree stimulating, if properly used, some animal base is essential—musk, civet or ambergis.

If the base is too strong it makes the flower-scent curiously instant. People who feel themselves faint in a crowded room, are often the victims of several scents simultaneous attacking their nerves. A single odor, no matter how strong, after awhile deadens the olfactory nerves, whereas a combination keeps them active.

Hay fever, which, it is believed by some, arises from the irritant properties of fine odorous pollen yielded by grass and weed fields, is in a way a type of perfume action. Scent particles in general are not strong enough to set up violent ills. None the less, they have their effect. Witness the refreshment of lavender water when one is faint from heat or crowding. Lavender is peculiarly suited to high strung temperaments. It is soothing as well as refreshing, without being unduly stimulating.

Jasmine should always be used pure. Alone it tones and braces the whole system, but in almost all of its compounds is singularly depressing. Neroli is one exception. Jasmine and neroli together in faint essence make the scent of scents for all who have hysterical tendencies.

Animals That Hang Up to Sleep.

There is one animal which lives entirely in trees but is able to maintain its position during slumber without the least exercise of muscular force. This is the sloth, common in the forests of tropical America. Its long claws are so bent that they hook over the branches and allow the creature to hang upside down like an animated hammock. Curiously enough, the hammock appears to be a South American invention, and is universally employed by all the Indian tribes of the Amazons. Perhaps the primitive human dwellers in this region took to sleeping in hammocks after observing the habits of the sloth.

The great ant-eater, which is both a kinsman and fellow-countryman of the sloth, has an enormous tail which it uses in a very remarkable manner. I recently saw two of these animals lying together asleep, and they had arranged their tails so cleverly that their whole bodies were hidden from view. Moreover it was evident that this caudal coverlet would afford excellent protection from the weather, for the central solid part of the tails acted as a kind of ridge-pole over the highest part of the sleepers' bodies, so that the long fringes of hair sloped downward on each side like the thatch upon a roof.

Like the sloths, many kinds of bats sleep suspended by their hooked claws without any muscular exertion whatever. Some of the large fruit-eating bats of the tropics, which do not sleep in holes like the species common in southern latitudes, but which hang in numbers to the branches of trees in the open air, adopt a position which it would be difficult to beat for economy and comfort. Gould's fruit-eating bat, common to the warmer parts of Australia, suspends itself upside down by one hind foot, and wraps its body in the ample folds of its wing membranes which extend right down to the ankles. Its shoulders, to which the membrane is attached, are humped up so as to act as eaves to shoot off the rain, and when asleep it draws its head under their shelter and nestles its nose under the warm fur of its chest.
