Kicked to Death by a Horse.

Mr. Milton Mackley, farm foreman for Mr. R. W. Walden, at Bowlingbrook, Mr. Walden's great racing stock farm of a thousand acres, at Middleburg, died on Friday night of last week from injuries inflicted by the kicks of a horse. The accident occurred on Wednesday previous to Mr. Mackley's death. The horse that kicked him was a recently purchased farm animal and was not considered vicious, but was unaccustomed to the method of feeding pursued at the Walden farm, having previously been fed from an entry at the front of the stall. On the day of the occurrence a forest fire was threatening the buildings on the place and all the men employed were engaged in fighting the flames. At feeding time Mr. Mackley volunteered to feed the stock and entered the stable in which the new horse was kept, for that purpose. He carried a large basket of corn, which, as he approached, touched the horse, which immediately began to kick viciously. The corn was scattered in every direction and Mr. Mackley was repeatedly struck by the hoofs of the animal on the stomach and breast. He finally crawled past the horse to the front of the stall, and managed to untie the halter, when the animal ran out of the stable. The injured man was taken to his home and all that medical skill could devise was employed to save his life, but without avail.

Mr. Mackley was about fifty years old, and a splendid specimen of physical manhood. He was a model farmer and had been foreman at Bowlingbrook for many years. Mr. Walden will not be easily able to fill his place with as capable and efficient a foreman. Deceased was a son of the late Jacob Mackley, of Middleburg, and a nephew of Ex-Councilman Emanuel Mackley, of this city. He leaves a widow, four sons and two daughters. Two of the sons reside in Indiana and the other members of the family at Middleburg. Funeral services were held on Tuesday, after which the remains of the deceased were interred in the burial ground of the M. E. Church at Middleburg.

A Miniature of Admiral Schley.

A few friends in this city, of the artist, Miss Frances Louise Thomson, of Washington, D. C., had the privilege, a few days ago, of seeing a miniature portrait of Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, just painted by her, and for which he gave her sittings at her own studio in Washington. The Admiral, in this picture, is shown in full dress uniform, and it is the only picture of him, of any kind whatever, in which he thus appears. One of the prominent characteristics of Admiral Schley is aversion to personal show or parade, and he strongly objected to having his portrait painted in a garb showing the highest insignia of his rank as an American naval officer. But he is a relative of Miss Thomson, and yielded to her persuasions, first to sit for the portrait, and then to have it done in full uniform. In doing this he accorded her the distinction of being the only artist in whose studio he ever sat for a portrait. And right royally has she rewarded him by producing a perfect likeness, without flattering or idealizing its subject. The writer remarked this at once and so said to the artist, who stated that in her art truth is the first consideration. In this portrait of Admiral Schley she has been perfectly true to nature and has reproduced his features exactly as they appeared, tanned by exposure to southern winds and sun and with their expression in absolute perfection.

Apart from its integrity of portraiture the painting is a superb work of art. Miss Thomson is winning distinction in that branch of art and her friends are justly very proud of her skill. She has been a severe student and her excellence has appeared to all her instructors. Among these was Howard Helmick, probably the most eminent of his class in this country.

Miss Thomson is a daughter of Mrs. Julia C. Thomson, of Washington, D. C., and the late Thomas D. Thomson. She is a niece of Mrs. George W. Albaugh, of this city, a granddaughter of the late Alfred Troxell, first president of the First National Bank of Westminster, and of the late Judge John Thomson, of Taneytown.
