THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

that minute, all right," he answered grimly. "Whoever lays his hand on one of these prisoners dies right here!"

Perhaps it was the sheriff's reputation for marksmanship, perhaps it was his perfect confidence in his own mastery of the situation; at any rate no man approached the prisoners. On the contrary, the circle around them quietly widened. The burly Kentuckian broke the silence.

"Boys" he cried jovially, "reckon we ain't needed hear. This county's pretty well fixed to get along—the sheriff can shoot neahly as well's his wife can sing. Less be gettin ovah the rivah."

Shcriff Ballantyne's face brightened and his boyish laugh rang out.

"Tra-la, gentlemen!" he said. "You Kentuckians are the best judges of shooting in the world and I'm flattered."

"We know a fine woman, too, sah. We surrendah to the song, sah, not to the gun." And with gallant lifting of slouch hats toward the balcony he and his comrades—twenty or more—turned into the black throat of Main street where it descends between the bluffs of the Ohio.

After this the mob melted rapidly away. Twenty minutes later the streets were deserted and the summer night so still that Mrs. Ballantyne heard the Kentuckians singing "Jesus, lover of my soul" as they road homeward across the river.

A Domestic Strike.

He was a working-man delegate, and he never tired of talking of strikes. He held that they were justifiable, and he was prepared to demonstrate that it was perfectly proper to strike to secure any desired result. He told his wife so, and she seemed to agree with him. She said it appeared to be the easiest way of enforcing a demand. And that night when he came home he found that the table was not set.

"I want a new dress," she said, when he asked her what the trouble was.

"I know. You've been bothering me for that dress for a month," he said. "But how about supper?"

"There isn't any," she replied. "This is a strike."

"A strike?"

"Yes, a general tie-up. I've been trying to secure a peaceable settlement of this trouble for some time, but now I mean to enforce my rights."

"Mary, do you dare?"

"Oh, don't talk to me in that way! If I can't get you to arbitrate, why, I've got to strike. I don't care if it does block the wheels of trade."

"But, Mary, you don't understand!"

"Oh, yes, I do! I've made my demands, and they've been refused. A strike is all that there is left, and I've struck."

"But your demands are unreasonable."

"I don't think they are."

"You're no judge."

"You're the judge of your demands when you strike, and I'm just as good a judge as you are when I want something. It's of no use talking; this strike is on."

She folded her arms in a determined way and he subsided. It was perhaps half an hour later when he looked up and asked:

"Mary, is the strike still on?"

"It is still on," she replied.

"Aren't you hungry?

No; I saw that I had something in the treasury before the strke was ordered."

"Meaning the pantry?" he asked.

"Meaning the pantry," she returned.

"I believe I'll get a bite," he said.

"It's locked," she replied. "The reserve is to be used simply to keep the strike going. You can't touch the striker's resources."

"Be careful Mary," he said warningly; "if I shut off the cash ——" She laughed and nodded toward the pantry. "I can stick it out a week," she returned.

Five or ten minutes later he proposed that they compromise on the basis of ten dollars.

"Twenty," she replied firmly.

"But that means ruin," he protested. "I can't afford it."

"That's your business," she answered. "I offered to arbitrate once."

It was ten o'clock that night when he finally gave in, and somehow he felt that he had experienced a new phase of the strike business.

ON WASTE OF COAL.

From New York Tribune.

"How many men or women know the amount of coal really sufficient to keep a fire in a grate, furnace or stove?" asked an experienced housewife. Not one in a hundred. Yet this question of supplies ought to be one of the first things learned in domestic management. Half a ton of nut coal is ample to keep a fire night and day in a No. 8 kitchen range for a month in winter. From three-eighths to one quarter of a ton is all that should be used in a fall or spring month, and this does not mean poor, stunted fires. It is enough for all cookery and general warmth, and to use more means ignorant waste.

"A cylinder stove heating a room 16 feet square and 10 feet in height will call for the same amount of larger coal. When strong fire is needed, in cold weather, a mixture of egg and nut coal is good in range or close parlor stove, using the finer coal to start the morning fire and egg coal for the charge to last half a day. A small furnace, keeping the ordinary tenroom house comfortable night and day in all weather, can be run with an average of one ton of hard coal a month the season through, which means less than a ton for the milder months, and something more in bitter midwinter. Half a cord of split kindling in six-inch lengths will be enough for six months of cold weather with good usage.

"This looks impossible to the easy-going housekeeper, whose cook throws a huge scuttleful of coal on the range three times a day, and whose furnaceman has a commission from the coal dealer, or whose head of the family doesn't know any more about such matters than usual. But personal experience for years proves the allowance correct. It simply includes knowing how.

"In the weather a clear fire is economy. The ashes are to be thoroughly cleared by shaker and poker from range and furnace the first thing, unless a strong draught of a windy night has burned the fire almost out, when the grate must be carefully shaken, leaving a bed of ashes to hold the live coals, which are to be kindled up with half a dozen pieces of kindling wood, two inches thick, and a small shovel of fine coal, with open draughts. As soon as the coal is red and burning well, in five or ten minutes a shovel of egg is added. If in a hurry to heat the house up, make the furnace fire with egg coal, and when well lighted close the back draughts. When all the layer of coal is alight close all dampers and draughts, so that the heat will stay in the house instead of going outdoors. In carelessly tended fires three-fourths the heat from the fuel goes up the chimney. This is speaking of hot air furnaces of the good old kind, which some knowing people still stoutly aver are the only method for heating private houses.

"Careful firing insists on having all the ashes sifted twice over, the first time with the common coarse screen of half inch mesh, which leaves the cinders ready for use, after picking out the slag. The second time the ashes are run through the screen of quarter inch mesh, which takes out a lot of cinder scales the size of 'buckwheat coal,' useful for keeping fires at night or when strong heat is not needed.

"All glassy, stony pieces are to be picked from the cinders with gloved hands or claw tongs. Then dampen the cinders either with a spray from a fine watering pot or by sprinkling with a whiskbroom dipped in a basin of water. Dampen but do not wet the cinders, coarse and fine. When the breakfast fire is needed and the house is warm, put on range and furnace a charge of fresh coal three or four inches deep, open draughts five minutes to let the smoke pass off and the coal catch fire; then cover with an even layer of cinders, and cinder scales on that, and close draughts. A well-made fire should keep from four to ten hours without replenishing. On mild days, with little wind, a fire so tended will last till night, and so made up at 10 o'clock in the evening will keep all night. If clinkers form in the furnace throw in scrap zinc and they will fuse and drop when the fire burns well."

Good Things to know.

To make a scrap book get a pencil tablet and a bottle of mucilage and paste the receipts in it.

When you step on a nail or when your finger hurts and you can't see any swelling nor nothing on it, take a raw potato, grate it and put it on the sore. It will take all the fever out of it. When the poultice gets dry put a fresh one on.

To make a good liniment take a pint bottle and put one ounce of gum of camphor and one ounce of turpentine into it and fill it up with alcohol. Shake well and it will be ready for use. It is good for cuts, swellings, sprains, stiff joints, bruises, toothache, headache, etc. Whenever you have the headache rub this linament on the forehead and the temples. For toothache rub it on the gums and tooth.

A good name is more to be prized than great riches, but its much the same thing on a check.

Isn't it strange that we never know what we can do until someone does it for us?

A FACT ABOUT THE "BLUES"

What is known as the "Blues" is seldom occasioned by actual existing external conditions, but in the great majority of cases by a disordered LIVER.

THIS IS A FACT which may be demonstrated by trying a course of

Tutt's Pills

They control and regulate the LIVER. They bring hope and bouyancy to the mind. They bring health and elasticity to the body.

A Georgia Revival Hymn.

Oh, sinner, heah de bugle,
En de bangin' er de drums;
Is yo' rifle cocked en ready—
Ready w'en de fightin' comes?
Sojers er Zion,
Sojers er Zion—
De moon blood red,
En de sun fall dead—
Is you ready when de fightin' comes?

Oh, sinner, heah de cap'n,
End de kunnel on parade;
Is you got yo' papers ready—
Ready fer de war brigade?
Sojers er Zion,
Sojers er Zion—
De moon blood red,
End de sun fall dead.
Is you ready when de fightin' comes?

All of One Family.

While the Christian Endeavorers were in Boston recently holding their anual convention many incidents occurred provocative of mirth. Among the stories told to them was one concerning a peripatetic of the barefooted variety and a farmer who was also a church deacon. The deacon was taking lunch under his own vine and fig tree and unto him the peripatetic said:

"Sir, I'm very hungry."

"You haven't been shaved," replied the deacon.

"No, but I'm very hungry."

"You're very dirty into the bargain."

"Yes, but I'm very hungry."

"Well, can you say the Lord's prayer?"

"No, I can't."

"Will you say it for a piece of bread?

"I will."

The deacon started in with "Our Father," at the same time cutting off a slice as he enunciated the words. The tramp repeated, "Our Father," then suddenly asked;

"Did you say 'Our Father?'"

"Yes, Our Father.'"

"Stop a moment," continued the dirty man. "You mean your father and my father."

"I do," answered the deacon.

"Then we are brothers," triumphantly proceeded the unshaved.

"We are."

"Then, for our father's sake, cut that bread thicker and cut it quicker."

Women Engaging in all Callings.

The industrial sphere of women is constantly enlarging, and of late years women have been invading every line of employment. From the returns of the last census it appears that out of 203 separate occupations reported there are only eight in which women workers fail to appear. It is not surprising that there are no women among the soldiers, sailors and marines of the United States government, yet there are 153 women employed as "boatmen" and sailors.

Women have not yet invaded the ranks of the city fire departments, still not less than 879 women are returned in the same general class of "watchmen, policemen and detectives."

There are no women street car drivers, though there are two women "motormen" and 13 women conductors.

Women have not as yet taken up the employment of telegraph and telephone "linemen," yet 23,500 of them are operators for these companies.

There are no women apprentices and helpers among the roofers and slaters, yet two women are returned as engaged in these employments.

There are 126 women plumbers; 45 plasterers; 167 brick and stone masons, 241 paper hangers, 1,750 painters and glaziers and 545 women carpenters and joiners.

No women are returned as helpers to steam boiler makers, but eight women work at this industry as full mechanics. There are 193 women blacksmiths, 571 machinists, 3,370 women workers in iron and steel, 890 in brass and 1,775 women working in tin.

"What is your name?" inquired the justice.

"Pete Smith," responded the vagrant.

What occupation?" continued the court.

"Oh, nothig much at present; just circulation' round."

"Retired from circtulation for thirty days," pronounced the court dryly.

"This is my new colt. After he's properly broke he'll be a flyer." "Indeed? You should call him Bill, or, better still, Five-Dollar Bill." "Nonsense! That's a ridiculous name for a horse." "But it's appropriate. Did you ever see anything go faster after it's broke?"

Nothing is too small to escape the notice of the country editor—not even the man who tried to get his paper for nothing.

Lazy men are like theories. They seldom work.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1900.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome couch, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
