Wonderful Changes in a Century.

While aware of the stupendous changes in the past century, comparatively few fully realize that the year 1903 cannot be reckoned with as an ordinary new year. A single year nowadays achieves as much forward movement as formerly was accomplished in a half a century. 1803, says the Tribune Farmer, the farmer was creeping around his harvest fields on his knees cutting down his crops by hand. He laid each sickleful down as he went, and then gathered it up by hand, to be bound into bundles, and once more by hand tossed it upon his wagon. Today he travels about his harvest fields on his reapers driving his horses, while machinery does his work for him. In 1803 there was not one mile of railroad on the globe. The farmer did not even know of such a thing as a European market for his corn or his wheat, or for anything else, except for his tobacco and his cotton. In 1903 the whole world has become an open market and a single neighborhood. The farmer trades by telephone, and knows the market prices at Liverpool or Canton at his breakfast table. He sends his wheat across the continent at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The trolley comes to his door, and promises soon to take his wagons directly to market.

In 1803 Thomas Jefferson was President of sixteen United States, the original thirteen, with Georgia, Tennessee and Kentucky added. The only industry recognized was agriculture, and Jefferson insisted that the prosperity of the new nation depended upon keeping agriculture at the front. During the steam age, which began about 1803, manufactures became the petted industry of the government, and by 1870 had so outstripped agriculture that the latter was 50 per cent. behind its relative in 1830. A terrible depression followed, which is now almost entirely forgotten in an age of agricultural prosperity.

In 1803 it was said of the goosequill that the pen was mighter than the sword. In the hands of Franklin and Jefferson it certainly ruled the world. In 1903 the poet and the statesman, as well as the warrior, ply the steel; the pen has passed away before the alphabetic miracle of the typewriter. During the age of city building the town accumulated the inventions of the age. Now the farmhouse has the telephone, typewriter and free mail delivery. Art and music will soon belong to the rural school as fully as to the city school.

In 1803 labor and capital had not been so far differentiated as to create a contrast. The growth of factories and of factory towns accumulated wealth in centres, and left the country in the rear. The farmer was compelled to content himself with animal power, while the cities had steam power. Today the new power, electricity, is a distributive force, and belongs to the farmer as well as to the town. In 1803 no one in the United Stats had burned a scuttle of coal or seen a steamboat or a railroad. In 1903 the farmer rides on the railroad, built by the money of the millionair, has forgotten how to heat his house with wood, and is planning to light his homestead with electricity. Ten years from today electricity, perhaps will be distributed as a motive power to do the work in the farmers' barns and houses, as well as to carry his grain to market and his wife to her shopping.

In 1803 the United States meant a little strip along the Atlantic coast. It now means fifty States instead of fifteen, covering one-half the continent, and already the controlling factor in the world's politics. Our market extends across both oceans. Two-thirds of our exports consist of agricultural products, feeling their way into the heart of Africa, the heart of Asia and commanding the markets of Europe. The Yankee is in every harbor of the globe, and the products of American soil and industry are everywhere at a premium. Behind our prosperity are the common school and honest homes. It is recognized that our prosperity depends upon agriculture.

Once more the noblest occupation of man is tilling the soil. The enormous city is no longer the pride of the people, and to drop into one of its cracks is no longer the highest ambition of the countryman. The free air of the country, and green fields grow to be more attractive than the smoke and narrowness of brick walled streets. All hail, agriculture! The year 1903 must do its share in making farm homes more attractive, farm work more endurable, and giving to the country not only its natural advantages, but those artificial advantages, which have made the town attractive.

The Flickertail State.

North Dakota is attracting all kinds of Attention.

From Canda, N. D., Paper.

No state in the union today is attracting more attention than the "Flickertail." The eyes of the United States look upon us as the coming state and well they may, for North Dakota is now producing more wealth per capita than any state in the union. The value of our property amounts to $400,000,000. Of this sum the farms are valued at $165,000,000; 500,000 cattle are valued at $15,000,000; 356,000 sheep, valued at $15,000,000, while the value of our swine reaches $900,000.

The schools of the state have property amounting to $3,000,000, with the school land endowment of $50,000,000 and railroad property valued at $92,000,000.

The splendid state of North Dakota has more than its share of wealth. To be sure it has no millionaires nor has it any stricken with poverty. The population of the state in round numbers is 400,000, its wealth $400,000,000, including capital invested in the state lands, etc., making an average of $1,000 for every man, woman and child. This may seem large, but the facts are capable of demonstration, and no other state can make such a showing.

The name Dakota is derived from a tribe of the Sioux who made North and South Dakota their headquarters and is composed of what is a part of the great territory west of the Mississippi river and which was purchased of France in 1803 by Thomas Jefferson for $15,000,000. It is well for us to bear in mind that this event is to be celebrated in St. Louis in 1904 with a centennial exposition.

The following estimates of the crops grown in 1901 give an idea of the enormous resources of the state.

	Bushels.
Wheat	54,739,990
Oats	21,179,988
Flax	16,981,057
Rye	283,510
Corn	1,989,761
Barley	1,736,439
Potatoes	2,013,893
Hay (tame) tons	359,280
Hay (wild) tons	1,500,000

Much more could be said about the value of poultry, cattle, hogs, and sheep, but it suffices to say that poultry raising is conducted with great profit and that the native grasses afford pasturage for thousands of head of live stock annually.

When it is considered how cheaply a cow can be kept and the good returns received in cash each month from patronizing creameries and especially the certainty of results, one need not be surprised to learn that the creamery industry has rapidly forged to the front in North Dakota and that the amount of cream delivered to our rapidly increasing number of creameries is doubled each year. A cow can be kept in good condition here on one-third of what it costs in any of the eastern states, while our transportation charges, including all commissions, to New York city are less than three cents per pound for butter.

The Thistle of Scotland.

From Every Other Sunday.

There is no thistle so interesting as the common purple thistle of Scotland. To be sure, it is neither a handsome nor an agreeable flower in itself; but it is the national flower of Scotland, and we must honor it for that reason.

And this is how it chanced to become the national flower of Scotland: Once upon a time many hundred years ago, the Danes made war upon the Scots, and invaded the country. The Danes did not believe in making war upon an enemy in the night. But on this occasion they turned aside from their usual custom, and dearly did they pay for it. As they were creeping noislessly and unseen one of their number stepped upon a thistle. Its sharp prickles pierced his bare foot, and made him cry out with pain.

His cry awoke the soldiers of the Scotch army. They sprang to their arms, and drove back the Danes with great slaughter, and so saved Scotland. From that time the thistle has been the national flower of Scotland. It has been engraved on the coins of that country.

Over the gate of the now ruined palace of Linlithgow, where Mary Queen of Scots was born, the thistle, with this motto, is engraved: "Touch me who dares."

The early mention of the thistle as the badge of Scotland is found in an old poem called "The Thrissel and the Rois," which would be written now "The Thistle and the Rose."

"He had three days of grace left in which to pay the note, and he moved at once to the arctic regions. I wonder why?"

"Well, you know the days there are six months long."

Take No Substitute.

THE PRICE WE PAY.

:o

Freedom ever was dearly bought,
By gold and silver and lives of men;
In travail of soul her gifts are sought,
In perilous marches by moor and fen,
By the desolate reaches of lonely years,
By the slow, salt droppings of widows' tears.

Ever for freedom the price is great,
And paid must be to the utmost coin,
Who serves at her altars, serves the State,
With heart of heart and with ache of loin.
Nay, and all need to make them free
Are men bond slaves for liberty.

Yet who would hold his dearest back,
And who would count his loss but gain,
When conquering, white on her upward track,
Stern freedom comes, to break the chain,
To light earth's darkness, to light earth's gloom,
To make earth's desert places bloom.

In cold and nakedness and thirst,
In heat and fever and wounds and strife,
We bid her foemen do their worst,
For freedom is heaven, freedom, life.
Whatever the price, that price we'll pay,
And God be thanked for the dawn of day.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

Please Stop My—What?

"Times are hard, money is scarce, business is dull, retrenchment is a duty. Please stop my—" Whiskey? "Oh, no; times are not hard enough for that yet. But there is something else that costs me a large amount of money every year, which I wish to save. Please stop my—" Tobacco, cigars and snuff? "No, no—not these; but I must retrench somewhere. Please stop my—" Ribbons, jewels, ornaments and trinkets? "Not at all. Pride must be fostered, if times are ever so hard; but I believe I can see a way to effect quite a saving in another direction. Please stop my—" Tea, coffee and needless and unhealthy luxuries? "No, no, no; not these. I cannot think of such a sacrifice; I must think of something else. Ah, I have it now. My weekly paper costs me eight cents a month, one dollar a year; I must save that. Please stop my paper; that will carry me through easily. I believe in retrenchment and economy.

* * *

The year 1902 was remarkable for the number of large gifts by individuals to colleges, universities, libraries, museums, and charitable institutions. In the United States alone the sums of $500,000 and upward contributed by will or gift aggregate $35,630,000. The gifts and bequests which have been made in sums of $100,000 and upwards, but under $500,000, to educational institutions, numbered thirty-two. The largest gift to charity was $15,000,000 by W. S. Statton, Colorado Springs; and the next largest gift for charity was $4,000,000 by John M. Burke, of New York city. The total of Mr. Carnegie's gifts, chiefly for public libraries, is $3,438,500. Since the year 1898, Mr. Carnegie has contributed toward the establishment of 258 libraries in different cities the total sum of $19,630,050. Mr. J. D. Rockefeller's gifts for the year to universities, colleges, churches and charity amounted to $5,131,000.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.
