flash at that moment that Dicky was a man that any girl might be proud to love.

Mr. Stuart-Smith read this in her eyes, and more of which she herself was only subconscious, and of which Dicky was hopelessly ignorant.

"Oh, I don't know Mr. Audley; it seems that there is a good deal in cards. Take poker, for instance. Do you mean to say that there is not a great deal of psychological analysis possible in a game of poker?"

He wanted to put in the time before the dogcart came, and he did not want Mr. Audley even in the back seat. It was easy to pass from poker to the great game of life, and he spoke fluently of the similarity of maxims applicable to each. At the end of it all Dicky said a few words that somehow or other stuck in the girl's memory long after all the rest had been forgotten.

"I know," he said, slowly, "that fellows like me are not clever. I know that others play more brilliantly, more gracefully, don't you know. But—" Here Dicky stopped for a second and for the first time looked Mr. Stuart-Smith full in the face. "But," he continued "when we do play the real game we ante higher than you others, if we only get the chance; they can't make the ante too high for us."

A year later Mrs. Stuart-Smith's mental perspective had entirely changed. Looking back as she occasionally did look back, her engagement, the honeymoon, the few months of domesticity—everything had passed in a whirl of words. A war was going on across the ocean, and Mr. Stuart-Smith was in the very thick of it at home. He talked now more incessantly and cleverly than ever, and his periodical, to which he contributed under the nom de plume of "Megaphone," had become, if not influential, at all events conspicuous. He himself, the megaphone, had been a constant speaker on all sorts of platforms, first in favor of imperial magnanimity and the gospel of peace, and later in favor of imperial authority and the judgment of war. People said he spoke well, and he was pleased and spoke more. It was suggested that he should stand for Parliament a little later, and a by election occurring opportunely enough, he became a member.

She often thought of Dicky now. His regiment was at the front, and she had heard indirectly that he was considered a smart and efficient officer. The fact gave her much pleasure, for the inefficiency of the junior English officers had been a constant topic of her cousin, both in public and private debate.

It was not her day, but several people had drifted in to afternoon tea, including her husband. The latter had discussed the welding together of the empire in phrases on the felicity of which several women had commented with laudatory emphasis.

She felt vaguely that people had been trying to congratulate her upon being married to a molder of the empire, and wondered if she had appeared more dull and irresponsive than usual. In any case she knew it did not matter. Already she had come to look on herself as a foil to a clever husband; a role that gives plenty of time for reflection to people far less preoccupied. But how surprised Dicky, would be! Dicky, who had looked up to her as a superior being; Dicky, to whom a suggestion from her had been as an order of his commanding officers! She laughed a little bitterly as she handed her husband a second cup of tea, but he himself was too preoccupied for conjugal analysis.

"I have another lecture on for the day after tomorrow. Thanks, one lump."

"Yes. What is it going to be?"

"'The English officer as he is, and as he might be.'"

"How interesting! How——" and then for once, as an echo, she found herself faltering.

He himself was a little puzzled on the score of artistic presentation, and her hesitation mildly irritated him.

"Yes, dear, out with it."

"But," she said slowly, "you—you—are not a soldier."

"Oh, as for that, what genuine military critic is? You might just as reasonably ask a man to put up a century against the Australians simply because he presumes to point out what is, and what is not good cricket. Don't you see, dear?"

"I know you always do sound right! But what is the use, for you, I mean?"

Mr. Stuart-Smith entirely misunderstood the last question.

"Well, it keeps me before the public. Besides, one must get at the truth of things, and if the individual shirks the labor it will assuredly be left undone. The mock-modest plea of unfitness is nearly always the cynical gospel of laissez faire. By the bye, dear, I want you to go with Lady Synclair to the ladies' gallery tonight. I'm going to speak."

She did go, and it was very hot, and the legislators talked and talked and talked, and her companion reminded her her husband was really one of them! It seemed to her tired brain that some little side issue of the big war was being discussed, the relief of some frontier village, as far as she could gather. And then suddenly they all became silent, and somebody read a telegram out loud.

The village, it appeared, had been relieved with the loss of eighteen killed (including Lieut. Audley) and forty-six wounded.

The girl leaned back in her seat, pressing her hands tight against her forehead to avoid fainting. When she recovered complete consciousness, laughter—ironical and sympathetic—resounded from both sides of the House.

Somebody was making an amusing speech, and her husband was leaning eagerly forward to catch the points. But Dicky—her Dicky—was already forgotten. Instinctively she knew that her husband was going to speak. Yes, yes, he had risen; he was speaking now. Of course, he couldn't listen long. She closed her eyes, and tried to realize it. So Dicky had played the real game at last. Dicky had talked to his half-company under a withering fire. No, they couldn't make the—what was the word?—they couldn't make the ante too high for Dicky! But would these others ever, ever stop talking? It seemed to the girl's dazed brain that all England was being lashed into foam of rhetoric, and that the pressure was too strong for her. But Dicky, she told herself, had died a quiet, fearless gentleman. It didn't matter much what they all said or did now. And then it came home to her that she would sacrifice the whole House—everybody, everybody—to find herself back again one year ago with Dicky beside her waiting for the answer her lips had never given him.

"Well, Lady Synclair; well, Violet, I rather flatter myself that I went. It will read well, too, if the newspaper fellows only caught it. My voice—oh, I say, Violet, what's the matter? Not wool-gathering are you?"

"I was thinking," the girl responded' as she rose from her place.

"What are you thinging?"

"That they couldn't make the ante too high for Dicky."

Be Polite.

John G. Shedd, millionaire and partner of Marshall Field in the dry goods business, talked to 500 men in his employ and gave them the keys to success:

"The man who is not polite is 99 times out of 100 a failure.

"High moral character is the best commodity a business man can keep in stock.

"You can't be a good salesman and be a liar.

"I wish there was no such thing as tobacco in existence.

"You can't aim too high, and be sure to pull the trigger before you get wobbly.

"Breathe pure air. Associate with good companions. Drink plenty of pure water and nothing that will intoxicate. Take plenty of wholesome exercise. By a little training you will have an outfit which will take you far on the road to success in business.

"Learn how to save. Give the money you are spending for tobacco and drinks to your wife to put in the savings' bank. Don't even invest your savings for the sake of the income. It's very dangerous.

"The big head is the worst disease that ever attacked a young man.

"The fellow who only thinks ordinarily and does not much care, will never get anywhere.

"Don't lose your temper. Let the other fellow lose his.

"Those who in their youth have found themselves really in need of earning their daily bread have been those who have made the successes in life."

A Case of Tact.

Many a man has been helped out of a difficulty by his wife's tact and ready wit. A popular Philadelphia clergymen tells the following on himself: One day he saw coming up the steps a woman whom he was not anxious to meet. So he said to his wife: "Now, my dear, I'll run upstairs and escape until she goes."

After about an hour he guiltily tiptoed to the landing and listened. Reassured, he started to go downstairs, and, while doing so, called out over the banister: "Well, my dear, has that old bore gone at last?"

The next instant a voice from below caused a cold perspiration to bedew his ministerial brow and rooted him to the spot.

Then came a response that sounded inexpressibly sweet to him. It was the voice of his wife, who replied: "Yes, Doctor, she went away over an hour ago, but here is our old friend, Mrs. Jenkins, whom I am sure you want to meet."

The peach crop in Western Maryland and in the adjoining counties of Pennsylvania is almost a total failure this year. Some orchards that last year produced from 500 to 800 bushels of fruit will not yield 50 bushels this season. Some growers are selling their crops on the trees at $2 per bushel, while others are hauling the fruit into the towns and selling it at $2.50 per bushel.

The best place to criticise your neighbor is in front of your own mirror.

How He Found it Out.

"What do you want, little boy?" asked the druggist.

"Say, mister," said the boy, who had been wrinkling his face, scratching his head, and rubbing his right foot up and down his left leg in the effort to remember something that had escaped him, "what's the name of that place where we've got so many soldiers?"

"Fort Sheridan?".

"No; it's a good deal furder away than that."

"The Philippines?"

"That ain't just it, but it's somewhere around there."

"You don't mean Manila?"

"Manila! That's right. I knowed I'd get it after awhile. I want a bottle of Manila extract for flavoring' ice cream. How much?"

Poultry Pointers.

Laying hens must have meat or milk.

Always feed some whole grain at night.

Early hatched chickens usually make the best breeding fowls.

Feeding a little at a time and often is better than overfeeding at any time.

A liberal use of ground bone will correct the tendency to laying soft shelled eggs.

Keeping fowls on hard floors will frequently cause swollen feet and legs. They must have some loose ground to scratch over.

Turkeys must have a good range to be profitable. They are insect eaters by nature and need a good range in order to thrive well and grow economically.

After the ducks and geese are through laying, the feathers should be picked regularly. The time to pick them is when the feathers are ripe and before the fowl begins to lose them.

Policemen of the Seas.

Revenue cutters are the policemen of the seas. They have regular beats to patrol along the coast, looking for vessels in distress, suppressing smuggling, illicit seal hunting and mutinies. They also enforce quarantine regulations, examine ships' papers, supply lighthouses, and act as life savers, ambulance corps, fire departments, and messenger boys generally for the goverment at sea.

The first revenue cutters were built at the order of Alexander Hamilton when he was Secretory of the Treasury, and except in war time, when they are subject to the authority of the navy, they are still under Treasury Department orders. Strange to say, however, it is in times of peace that revenue cutters fight their hardest battles. They save many lives, and property that is estimated at many millions yearly. Their name gives little idea of the great and varied service they render the country.

The Boy and the Farm.

Teachers and farmers, teach the boys and girls to be honest and upright in every sense, but by all means teach them to work. It won't hurt them to do a little farm work. Send them to college if you can, but let's keep all the boys and girls on the farm that we can, and then the farmer's interest will be looked after better. We will have better schools, better churches and better society. Insist on trying to keep the boys on the farm after they have received their education. They can keep the farm books and will lend an air of intelligence to the town. We need more educated people on the farms, when we will have less boys and girls going to the cities from the farms.

Live Stock Quotations.

Giraffes—High; good demand.

Monkeys—Lively.

Tigers—Uncertain.

Hippopotami—Opened well; closed with a slump.

Kangaroos—Went up and down all day.

Snakes—No re-tail market at all.

Leopards—Some spots report good buying.

Tortoises—Quiet; some snaps offered.

Crocodiles—Opened nicely; some traders bitten at the close.

Camels—Quiet; stock carries too much water.

Lions—Roaring trade all day.

Snails—Sluggish.—From Life.

One Thing Unbroken.

Standing over the shattered remains of their last Dresden china statuette, the exasperated mistress said to the awkward servant:

"Is there anything you haven't broken since you have been with me?"

"Yes, mum," replied the servant. "I have yet to break my record for destructiveness."

A country vicar discovered not long ago that one of his male servants was in the habit of stealing his potatoes. He mentioned the fact to his curate, "of course you must remember what the Bible says: 'If any man take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also.'" "I see," mused the vicar. "Well, in this case, as the man takes my potatoes, I'd better give him the sack."

"Love is blind," said Mr. Meekton, regretfully. "That's nonsense," replied his wife. "When a girl falls in love with a man she sees magnificent qualities in him which none of her family can make out, and which become wholly obscure even to her in the course of a year or so."

Jack.—"I have a chance to marry a poor girl whom I love, or a rich woman whom I do not love. What would you advise?"

George—"Love is the salt of life, my friend. Without it all else is naught. Love, pure love, makes poverty wealth, pain a joy, earth a heaven,"

Jack—"Enough. I will marry the poor girl whom I love."

George—"Bravely spoken! By the way, would you—er—mind introducing me to the rich woman whom you do not love?"

A hard head may go with a tender heart.

Overcome evil with good rather than be overcome with evil.

Solitude is as necessary to the soul as companionship is to the character.

"Is there any real advantage in being a millionaire?" asked the philosopher. "There is," answered Dustin Stax. "You can wear your old clothes without exciting comment, which is a great economy."

It is stated in the Pennsylvania anthracite region that the amount of coal mined this summer is the largest in the history of the trade. A rumor comes from the same State that a strike will be stirred up for political effect in 1904. Schemes in this line of business should be marked for identification by the people.

"I shall not be content until we see our son making $40,000 to $50,000 a year," said the fond mother.

"My dear," answered her husband, "what do you want him to be, a jockey or a prize-fighter?"

"Pa," said the boy, looking up from his book, "what does a man's 'better half' mean?"

"Usually, my son," replied his father from behind the evening paper, "she means exactly what she says.

He—"And so your answer is final. You will not be mine?"

She—"Never! But pray, don't go and blow your brains out."

He—"If I had any brains I should not have proposed to you."

Anxious Wife—"Oh, doctor, I am so glad you came. My husband is worse—he seems to be wandering in his mind." Physician—"Oh, don't let that worry you. He won't have to go far to reach the limit."

Rrodick—"Did you enjoy Mrs. Ticker's reception?"

Van Albert—"No, indeed. The men talked shop and the women shopping."

Willis—"Hawkins used to say that he wouldn't marry the best woman on earth." Wallace—"Well, he married, didn't he?" "Yes, but he kept his word."

"Williams, have you named the baby yet?"

"Almost. We've got the two grandmothers to agree to arbitrate the case."

FACTS

Are more stubborn than figures—Buy your FERTILIZERS only from responsible dealers, who guarantee you QUANTITY and QUALITY.

TALK IS CHEAP

Do not be deceived. Nothing is more susceptible to adulteration than Fertilizers, therefore give your orders only to LEGITIMATE DEALERS who pay Licenses and Taxes, thereby lessening your burden, and then only where analysis and weight is guaranteed under forfeiture of bill sold. Only the dealers who are willing to do this are worthy of your trade.

All our brands of FERTILIZERS have Pure Bone Base, the fertilizing properties will not give out during the growing season, as many quick acting articles do, but will mature the crop and leave the soil in an improved condition. All our brands are put up in 167 lb. bags for convenience in handling, unless otherwise ordered.

DISSOLVED S.C. ROCK.

We offer this as a strictly high-grade Rock—guaranteeing 14 to 16 per cent. Available Phos. Acid. The State chemist gives us a commercial value of $18.42 per ton—the highest of any Rock sold in the state. Our sales last year were unprecedented. Can furnish you with the strongest testimonials from the leading farmers of Carroll and Howard counties. Its drilling condition is perfect.

Price, $9.50 Per Ton.

"Special Mixture" for Wheat and Grass.

We ask your special attention to this mixture. This is our sixth season to offer this brand, with increased sales yearly. The cost per acre being so little above S. C. Rock, many farmers are using it instead of Rock, claiming they get a fourth larger yield, and that their land is left in much better condition. We guarantee every ton to contain 800 pound Pure Animal Bone.

Being composed of Dissolved and Raw Material, it is a great favorite, on account of its lasting properties; furnishing an abundance of nourishment and sustenance the time it enters the soil. When your grain is heading, the raw material has become dissolved, and its effects are felt just at the season it is wanted. It is in splendid drilling condition, and highly recommended.

Price, $16.00 Per Ton.

"Monacacy Special."

To those who want a cheaper goods than our "WHEAT and GRASS MIXTURE" we offer Monacacy Special." This brand, too, has Animal Bone Base, though does not run as high in Ammonia.

Price, $14.00 Per Ton.

Martin's Dissolved Slaughter House Bone.

It is richer in Soluble Phosphoric Acid and Ammonia than any similar article in the market.

Owing to its great solubility, it is easily assimilated and supplies an abundance of nourishment and sustenance for the full development of the growing crops.

It is more reliable in action and more lasting in its effects than Peruvian Guano, yielding a healthful stimulation without any injurious after effects.

Price, $24.00 Per Ton.

Martin's Fine Ground Bone.

Made only of Slaughter House Bones. Contains a larger percentage of Ammonia and Bone Phosphate Lime than any other brand in the market.

We do not steam or bake our bones, or otherwise treat them so as to destroy the animal matter, which is rich in ammonia. Purity guaranteed.

Price, $26.00 Per Ton.

Bone and Potash Mixtures, 2-10 and 3-12 Goods.

Muriate of Potash, Tankage. Remember all our goods are guaranteed under forfeiture of bill sold.
