WHEN NANETTE BAKES.

When Nanette bakes a jelly cake
She finds the work so serious
She cannot have me near her, for
My presence's deleterious!
The yellow bowl, so big and clean,
In which she mixes flour,
Is lucky, for her plump arms clasp
It fully half an hour!

When Nanette bakes a jelly cake
She puts her whole soul in it;
That's why it is so light and rood—
Oh, would that I might win it!
She whips the eggs till they are pale—
Poor things, they also fear her!—
While I must sit with folded arms
And never once go near her.

When Nanette bakes a jelly cake
She lets me have a sample;
"To feast the gods," I say to her,
"Such food as this were ample!"
And yet my share I'd gladly give—
The prospect makes me dizzy—
For one small kiss from Nanette's lips,
But she?—she's far too busy!

—Jack Appleton, in Lippincott's.

The Deacon Attended a Circus and the Church Kicked.

—:o:—

It was several years ago, but Deacon Spooner is still shivering over his narrow escape. There was to be a circus over at Darby's Ferry, and a good many of the simple people of Jericho calculated on going. The ministers and deacons and other Christian people frowned upon the idea, of course, and Deacon Spooner in particular used all his influence to keep people at home.

Whatever got the matter with him on circus day he himself could never explain, but he got up at daylight and walked seven miles, and when the performance opened he had a front seat. A hundred Jericho people saw him there, but he didn't seem to care. In fact, he appeared to have the best time possible, and he didn't even get conscience-stricken over it when he got home.

Of course such a break could not be passed over unnoticed. When Deacon Tyler heard of ithe called upon the minister, and others, and it was decided to bring Deacon Spooner to book. He got scared about it and wanted to go to Iowa and visit his sister, but he was held on to and put on trial. When asked if he wanted to make a statement he rose up and said:

"I said I wouldn't go to the circus, and I advised others not to go, and whatever got into me I can't understand. I went to bed feeling that circus performances were invented by Satan to trap the unwary, and that my face was set agin 'em like a flint, but I got up at daylight and headed for Darby's Ferry and struck a gait of four miles an hour. I was there when the ticket wagon opened; I was the first man inside the tent."

"Deacon Spooner, does insanity run in your family," asked Deacon Tyler in very serious tones.

"No, it don't."

"Could you truthfully say that your mind was unhinged for the time being? Did you seem to be yourself or somebody else? If you was crazy, of course we can't hold you to blame."

"No, I can't say as I was crazy," replied the deacon. "There was a buzzing in my ears a good deal of the time, but I guess that come from kickin' the bedclothes off and catchin cold. I remember of buying lemonade and peanuts after I got there, and of a feller trying to pick my wallet out of my pocket. No, I don't think I was out of my mind."

"But do you lay it to sinful curiosity?" asked Deacon Williams.

"I guess I'll have to. I'd been hearin' about circuses for the last 50 years and had never attended one. I heard Abner Jones telling about the lions and tigers and elephants and spotted horses, and it didn't seem so sinful as I'd allus thought for."

"But you found it sinful when you got there?" asked Moses Schermerhorn, who rings the bell for prayer meetings and thinks no windmill man can be saved in any shape.

"No, I can't say as I did," slowly replied Deacon Spooner. "That's the amazin' part of it. I had more fun than in chasin' down a wild hog, or in cleanin' out bumble bees, and I did'nt see a single sinful thing. That's my defense—that I come home uncontaminated and untouched. I'm feelin' every bit as good as before I went."

There was a long drawn sigh and a shudder all around, and the minister said:

"Deacon you may tell us what you saw there."

"Wall, the first thing I run up agin' was four elephants. They was flappin' their ears and eatin' hay, and I didn't feel no sinful thoughts as I stood and looked at 'em. Can't a body see elephants and be saved, too?"

"Go on, Deacon."

"Then I took in the camels and zebras and giraffes. I looked at 'em over and over agin', but I didn't boil over and want to swear and fight. Fact is, I felt powerful peaceful over it. Is it agin' me to look at critters with humps and stripes and long necks?"

"But they was connected with a circus," drotested Deacon Tyler.

"Yes, I believe they was, but I couldn't help it. After I got through there, I went over to look at the rhinoceros. By gum but he was a hefty critter. He weighed as much as two cows and a calf. I admit that I felt a little bit sinful when lookin' at him. I made up my mind that if a critter like that ever tackled me in the road at night, I'd bust my suspenders tryin' to knock his horn off. Is it too much to ask that my sin be overlooked?"

"We will hear further," said the minister, who wasn't looking so solemn as he might.

"Wall, they had an ostrich, two alligators, four hyenas, and a sacred bull from India. I took 'em all in and nothin' happened. I didn't even feel like offerin' to bet that I could hoe two acres of corn in a day, as old as I am. If I was hurt by seein' them critters and things, I'm willin' to give in, but I'm sayin' that I don't feel like callin' any one a liar."

"And you didn't feel that you had sinned?" queried Moses Schermerhorn, as he shook his head in a solemn way.

"Not a feel. I even wanted the hosses to go faster and the fellers to flip-flop the harder. When a feller come climbin' around with pink lemonade and charged me 10 cents for a small glass I did wish I had him in a 10-acre lot for about two minits, but the feelin' passed off as soon as I had drunk the lemonade. I guess you'd have all felt the same, wouldn't you?"

The deacon was turned out of the room and the investigating committee went into executive session, and an hour later it had.

"Resolved, That while Deacon Spooner had attended the circus and was liable to feel sinful, he saw the animals first and didn't feel sinful, and is therefore exonerated from all blame and is advised not to do so again.

Before washing red table linen add a little borax to the water.

Black calico will look like new if rinsed in very strong bluing water.

After washing wooden bowls, rinse thoroughly, dry in the air, but not in the sunshine, or they will crack and warp.

Dipping fried opsters in a mayonnaise before rolling them in cracker meal gives them a delicious flavor not obtainable in any other way.

Orange fritters make a delicious accompaniment to a breakfast dish of boiled ham.

Erase finger marks from polished furniture by rubbing with a chamois leather moistened with vinegar and water. Afterward polish in the usual way.

You can make an excellent shoe-polish at home by mixing lamp-black and cosmoline in about equal proportions.

Fried cakes made with brown sugar will keep moist longer than when made with white sugar.

Rancid butter boiled in water with a pinch of charcoal, will be divested of its rancidity and may be used for cooking purposes.

The addition of lemon juice to the water in which rice is boiled will increase the whiteness, and the grains will readily separate thus treated.

If the wringer is placed on the top of the clothes for a few minutes before use, it will prevent the rubber from giving way, especially in cold weather.

To sweeten barrels which have held meat or brine, fill half full with sweet hay, and pour upon it boiling water. Cover closely and let it stand till cold.

A sponge large enongh to expand and fill the chimney, after having been squeezed in, tied to a slender stick, is the best thing with which to clean lamp chimneys.

A piece of chamois skin bound on the edges, shaped to fit the heel and kept in place by a piece of elastic rubber, worn over the stockings, will save much mending.

Mixed with red lead or slaked lime, india-rubber forms an exc-llent cement; and when incorporated by means of heat with naphtha, coal-tar and shellac, it is transformed into a glue of utmost tenacity.

Save pieces of string as they are brought into the house, tie them together and wind into balls. Use these for knitting dishcloths and you will find them much more serviceable than any other kind.

Do not meddle with fire, but if, by any accident, your clothing catches fire, try to have enongh presence of mind to throw yourself on the ground instead of allowing the flame to travel upward to your face and head. But few lives would be lost by fire if this direction could be remembered and carried out.

Mrs. Bridely—Do you ever have any doubts about the truth of what your husband tells you?

Mrs. Badger—Never! I know he couldn't tell the truth if he tried.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a jointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a Store therefore I have no opposition. Is you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome couch, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,

Preserving Eggs.

For the information of our readers who may wish to put down a few eggs for their own use, we take the following from a bulletin issued by the Rhode Island station:

Of the different methods tested in this series of experiments the old way of using slaked lime and salt brine proved to be very effectual, and has the advantage of being inexpensive. It is also not difficult to practice.

For a period of a few weeks only, smearing the eggs with vaseline may prove an effectual method of preservation. In the place of vaseline almost any clean, greasy substance may be used.

For a period of a few months only, packing in dry table salt is worthy of recommendation.

Of all the substances experimented with, the water glass solution proved most worthy of commendation. The experiments showed that the water glass solution could be reduced 3 per cent. and still retain its preserving qualities. It can be obtained at most druggists at from 40 to 60 cents per gallon, is easily manipulated, and the solution may be repeatedly used. The eggs should be completely immersed in the solution, and if any eggs float, an inner cover which will sink them below the surface of the liquid should be used. In several tests where the eggs were placed in stone jars, inverted saucers were used for this purpose. The expense for the water glass at even 60 cents per gallon would amount to about two-thirds of a cent for a dozen eggs. Of course this does not include the expense of the jar or other receptacles, which may be of stoneware, glass, or even wood.

Not All Work.

Some people act as if the only object in life is to work and make money; get all out of themselves and their families that they can, and take as little out of the world's great storehouse of happiness as possible. They don't appear to realize that sometime the world with all its activities will move right on without their aid. This being trne, had they not better stop now and then, before they have to, and look on and see how the world will get along without them?

The world will not know that they have stopped to rest by the wayside, and while they are resting they can take in the beauties of the world all about them; can hear the birds sing; see the flowers bloom, and see what a grand world they have been living in and did not know it. Besides they will live longer if they stop and rest a little, and they will get a little of the happiness, peace and enjoyment it was intended to bestow upon them, but which they have thus far missed because they had failed to comprehend the aim and end of life.

"Well, my man," said the visiting physician of a Dublin infirmary to a patient, "how do you feel this morning?"

"Purty well, sorr," was the reply.

"That's right. I hope you like the place?"

"Indeed and I do, sorr!" said the man. "There's only wan thing wrong in this establishment, and that is I only get as much mate as wud feed a sparrow."

"Oh, you're getting your appetite, are you?" said the doctor. "Then I'll order an egg to be sent up to you."

"Arrah, docther," rejoiced the patient, "would you be so kind as to tell thim at the same time to sind me up the hin that laid it?"

The Proper Way.

A Saffron Walden man recently kissed his sweetheart about forty times right off the reel. Tears came into her eyes as he stopped.

"Arthur," she said sadly, "I fear you love me no longer!"

"Don't I, though!" said Arthur as he pulled himself together for a fresh effort. "Now, shall it be kiss pathetic, sympathetic, graphic, paragraphic, Oriental, horizontal, intellectual, paradoxysmal, quick and dismal, slow and unctious, long and tddious, devotional, or what?"

"Yes, Arthur," she said; "perhaps that would be the best way."

Nell—I saw Jack kiss you last night.

Belle—Really? But you didn't see me kiss him, did you?

Nell—No, but I——

Belle—oh, what a pity! You missed the most thrilling part.

"Angelina Lingerlong has adopted a little baby."

"What for?"

"Oh, as a scathing rebuke to mankind in general, I presume."
