to look down on my drowned face. But you have to die with me. What hope there is in life or death you have shown me. I don't know that it is lasting or that it is good for much; but such as it is, it comes from you."

Again the water came rushing over the fallen chimneys, and they looked out in momentary apprehension. But the sudden torrent subsided, and the waters went on rising again slowly as before.

He then quietly proceeded:

"One thinks of life as the life one has known. To-night a glimpse has come to me of something that seems to make life worth going on with. It may be life on the other side of a division; I can't tell. I don't want to be carried back into the old life, but I do want life—the life that I nearly saw just now, when we thought our time was upon us. And I have found you standing with me upon the brink. We do not know each other, you say; we are not friends and can't be. I don't know. I only know that I would neither go on nor back, alone."

Her hand which clung to his arm, trembled and was withdrawn, and the next moment stole softly into his.

They sat quite silent, and the endless night drew on. Memories rose before each of them of hopes and dreams that had once been all in all, and now very small and faint and immeasurably distant. Around them, rising always, surged the persistent waters. Now and again gusts of wind awoke suddenly and brought a sweep of waves over the submerged masonry.

Presently oozing drops began to creep between the chimneys behind them.

"We must go up higher," said the man.

They quitted their sheltered nook, and, mounting, stood upon the platform of brick-work. The wind flung itself upon them in fury. They clung to the chimneys and to each other, and for a few minutes stood so, battling strenuously to keep their foothold. The man cried out suddenly:

"Oh, if there were only some place for you! It is too hard a death for you. I am so sorry for you!"

And even while he spoke the water was up about their feet, snatching and dragging at them.

"I am not sorry. And oh, no! it is not hard; it is the best moment life has ever brought me."

Her voice was blown away as it crossed her lips. It was only because they were uttered at his ear that he could hear her words. And his reply the winds snatched and carried away forever. The time of words was over. There was nothing now but hard-drawn breath, and vain resistence, and then a placid moon shining over a waste of floods.

Why He Would Not Pay.

A few weeks ago a Scotchman came to consult a Wimpole street doctor and began relating the symptoms of his ailment. When he had concluded the physician said:

"The first thing you must do is to stop smoking and the next is to cut off your liquor, and then there must be no more midnight suppers."

"Humph!" ejaculated the Scot. "I dinna like that."

"Well," said the physician, relenting, "if you must have something to eat at night take a few biscuits and a glass of warm milk about an hour before retiring; but no liquor, remember."

"And is that all?" asked the Scotchman, as he arose gravely from his chair.

"I think so," said the doctor. "Of course, I want you to come in to see me again in about a week."

"Well, good-day to ye, doctor," said the patient, as he stepped toward the door.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, my usual fee is £2 2s.," said the physician, as he picked up the note of introduction from his desk.

"Two guineas, and fer what?" asked the Scotchman.

"For my advice," replied the physician.

"Then," replied the Highlander, "I'll naw pay ye a penny."

"And why not, pray?" Asked the doctor.

"Because," replied the Scotchman, "I dinna intend to tak' your advice."

The New Mother.

"Nurse, has the baby had a good dose of castor oil?"

"Yes'm."

"And those hypophosphites?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And the magnesia?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Did you put a poultice on his back?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And a cold compress on his chest;"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And he's no better?"

"No, ma'am."

"How strange! I guess we'd better send for a doctor."

Emma—And, Charlie, dear, would you have really shot yourself if I had refused you?"

Charlie—Indeed I would. I had already sent to four houses for price lists of revolvers.

She—"What are these magazine guns the papers tell about so often?"

He—"Probably it's some gun powerful enough to send a projectile through the advertising portion of the average magazine."

A HAPPY HOME

Is one where health abounds.
With impure blood there cannot be good health.
With a disordered LIVER there cannot be good blood.

A healthy LIVER means pure blood.

Better than Oratory.

One of the most common defects of a recently admitted lawyer is a striving for oratorical display. A successful older practitioner endeavors, on the other hand, to give the jury a heart to heart talk. The ways of an eagle in the air, of a serpent upon a rock, of a ship in the midst of the sea and of a man with a maid are as A B C compared with the methods usually pursued by the twelve good men and true. It seems a trifle odd at first that a dozen individuals who separately are shrewd, sharp business men should collectively be guilty of the most absurd performances, but the fact must be reckoned on nevertheless.

A story is told of two farmers who were returning home, one of them from jury duty in a neighboring town. "Lawyer Smith is a great orator," said one—"a perfect Daniel Webster. My, how I hated to decide against him the three cases he tried!"

"How about Lawyer Joncs, who was on the other side?"

"Oh, shucks! Why, of course, he wins all his cases. I heard every one of 'em, and they were the simplest things. He just explained things to the jury. He didn't have to do any hard talking at all. You couldn't help but agree with him."

Odd Things Sold In New York.

Drinking water is sold by the barrel to tramp steamers, sailing vessels and pilot boats.

Kisses may be bought occasionally at church fairs

Reduced gentlewomen sell their social influence, acquaintanceship and knowledge of good manners in the guise of chaperons.

Superstitious persons buy relics of prisoners condemned to death, and abnormally curious persons buy personal belonging of notorious prisoners from jail employees.

Astrologers and fortune tellers sell rabbits' feet, madstones and moonstones.

Hairdressers and ladies' maids are frequently offered money for locks of hair from the heads of famous society beauties and popular actresses.

The big hotels sell unspoiled scraps of food to cheap restaurants.

Florists sell four leaf clover for good luck.—New York Press.

England's First Railroad.

The traveling on the first railroad in England was not very comfortable undoubtedly. The coaches were at first only coupled with chains, as wagons are now, so that they jerked the unfortunate passengers nearly off their seats at starting and clashed violently against each other when the driver put on his brake. When fairly in motion, if the speed was any but the slowest, the very short wheel base produced a pitching action so trying that if the journey had not been a short one it would have seriously affected the popularity of the railway as a means of passenger transit.

His Tide of Fortune.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men," said the man who habitually quotes Shakespeare, "which taken at its flood, leads on to fortune."

"Yes," replied the man who had married an heiress, "I remember the tide that led to my fortune well."

"What tide was that?"

"It was eventide, and we were sitting in the garden."

"Hardacre stuck a horseshoe over his barndoor for luck. Lightning struck the barn, burnt up the stable, two wheat fans, lots of farming implements, and the whole year's crop.

"Reckon that shook Hardacre's belief in horseshoes?"

"Not by a long way! Say' he's going to have horeshoes put over both doors and all the windows when he builds another barn."

"Really! Hope he don't believe there's luck in 'em yet?"

"He ought to. If I could get ten thousand dollars' insurance on an old barn and a corn crop, I'd believe in 'em, too."

Here is little Johnny's composition on "Men:" "Men are what women marry. They drink and smoke and swear and have ever so many pockets, but don't go to church. Perhaps if they wore bonnets they might. They are more logical than women and also more zoological. Both men and women have sprung from monkeys, but the women certainly sprang farther than the men."

She—Women may gossip sometimes, but they have better control of their tongues than men have.

He—You are right. Men have no control whatever of women's tongues.

Little Willie—Say, Pa, what is a luxury.

Pa—A luxury, my son, is anything you happen to want when you haven't got the price.

She—Is she a business woman?

He—Yes.

She—What business is she interested in?

He—Everybody's.

When a man will kill himself because a woman refuses to marry him it is conclusive evidence that the woman was right.

The inquisitive party—"What is your favorite health food, Colonel?" Colonel Corkright—"Rye, suh."

Some men get so tired doing nothing that they can't do any kind of work.

To be always wanting what we haven't got is to be continually poor.

When a woman marries a man to reform him it serves her right.

Letter to John E. Eckenrode
WESTMINSTER

Dear Sir: Good yarn: How we got our agent at Delhi, N Y.

Gladstone & Paine were agents for ——; we mustn't tell names. We wanted 'em. Paine was painting his big Colonial house. Said it took 10 gallons of white for the trim.

We sent him 10 gallons and said: if you get it all on, no pay; if you have any left, return it and pay for the rest. Agreed.

He returned four gallons and took the agency. Four or five years ago. He knows now that his old paint was and is adulterated; that's why it took ten gallons to equal six of ours.

Go by the name; there is but one name to go by: Devoe lead-and-zinc.

Yours truly

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.
MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:
Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome couch, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
