A Great Man Dead But Not Forgotten.

As one passes through the cemetery at Mount Pleasant Methodist Episcopal Church, near Gamber, Carroll county, Md., he may read on a tombstone the name of a great man—John C. Nutting—who died about a dozen years ago. It is said "a good man never dies." So John C. Nutting lives in the memory of many today.

In this age, to be great, a man must first be good; honor, virtue and character are essential elements in the basis of our enduring superstructure of fame. By these high standards we measure our illustrious men. So by these we are proud to estimate the stature of John C. Nutting—dead though not forgotten. A great man in character, in sincere love of boys and girls as well as of men and women. He grows in our esteem.

Of his early life we know but little, and that by reflection. Some sixty odd years ago he came from Vermont to Maryland and began his career as a public school teacher. We remember having heard him relate the story of the events which attended his examination for teacher in the public schools in this county. Two questions, possibly all that were asked then, will suffice to show the character of the examination fifty or more years ago: I. "In what direction is the north pole from the south pole?" II. "How much is a third and a half of a third of ten?" He passed the examination and was appointed teacher of the school at Louisville, this county, and boarded at the home of Samuel G. Harden. It seems, as far as we can learn, that he ouly taught in four schools in the county during these fifty years—Louisville, Finksburg, Fairmount, and Mahlon. It was my privilege to be a scholar under him at the former and latter places. My mother, who is now seventy years old, attended his school at Louisville nearly fifty years ago. Mothers and fathers, grandparents of today, were his pupils in the years that are gone. Indeed, we may add, nearly all the grown folk of the lower part of this county were his students "yesterday." The community's noblest families sent him their sons and daughters. His pupils fill the high places of Church and State, and today we recall at least four ministers and a State Senator, everyone of whom has been flogged by him, and others who are holding positions of trust, of whom we can speak words of praise. Weems tells us, "That Washington learned his A. B. Cs. of one Dale, and the rural schoolmaster lived to boast that he between his knees laid the foundation of the great man's greatness." So there are those today who can boast that from the life of this great man—John C. Nutting—the foundation of a noble life and character was laid. Thus we look for the source of this master's influence over the boys and girls.

Teaching was not only a profession with him, but a matter of great "business." Viewed in its aggregate, to him it was oceanic and sublime. He saw what every successful teacher must see if he would be a teacher in the largest sense of the term. It is not sufficient to know how to unfold the course of study, but the teacher must touch every student or his time is wasted. With a prophet's vision John C. Nutting "yesterday" saw the men and women of "today." We see today what he saw yesterday—that the government of the Church and State rests upon the shoulders of the boys and girls of today who will be the men and women of tomorrow, and that the moral aspect of this country depends largely upon the moral training of the youth, and, we add, this in a very large measure depends, or is dependent, upon the teachers of our public schools. True, the teacher should see that the pupil pursues the prescribed course of study, but the teacher that teaches the text book alone has lost the ideal, or has never gained it, of a public school teacher. Ethics, manners, sociability, art, and a little theology are wholesome and congruous. The Church and State, may I not say, have a right to determine that conscientious teachers be employed to instruct the youth of our land, and that no avowed skeptic or infidel be allowed to instruct them, since his fundamental idea is antagonistic to the ideal of the Church and State government. There is much danger in education without some mixture of religion and morality. While religion is not the primary object of the public school, yet we give praise to the teacher who reads a lesson from the word of God, and at the beginning of the day offers prayer to the Most High. The teacher ought to teach the child to believe in God, and in the reality of the religion of our Saviour, Jesus Christ. The youth of today is exposed to great dangers. The teacher ought to have reverence. It is a thing of beauty when the child learns that his instructor reveres the Most High.

Another characteristic of the teacher is to create the atmosphere of his schoolroom. It is of little importance how much children learn, but it is of great importonce what and of whom they learn. Thus the teacher's personality is in his work the determining element. He must be the luminary of his room or school, beaming love and truth within its walls and the greater of these is love. Where love is manifested truth is sure to follow. His pupils are, in a sense, his family, that is in a very large measure their future life will depend upon the principles inculcated in youth. The teacher stands between the little and the great, between the rich and the poor, no respector of persons, impartial to all. Who can wholly say what possibilities are in the children of our public schools. Awkward, heedless and willful many may be, but they are to be the representatives of the Church and State to-morrow. May they move in such an atmosphere as pervaded the schools in which John C. Nutting taught. Even to this day he lives in the memory of a multitude—not only as an eminent and masterful teacher, but a christian. To him religion was life; it was the power of God within, with its external manifestations. His soul beamed with love and interest for boys and girls whom he instructed. He was a member and a class-leader of Mount Pleasant Methodist Episcopal Church for many, many years. His influence was felt far and wide. Impressions for righteousness were stamped upon the hearts of his pupils.

He now sleeps in the cemetery at Mount Pleasant Church; dead, but not forgotten; no inscription upon his tomb-stone, save his name and date of his death. But his example, like the light of a star extinct, still traveling downward from the sky, lies upon the great man's path. Well and worthily might he be numbered with the great teachers of our land, whom we delight to honor.

"Gone, but not forgotten."

Hicks' Forecasts for April.

The storm period which was central with the full moon at the close of March will extend into the 1st and 2nd of April. Storms of rain, wind, low barometer and high temperature, will have given place to snow, rising barometer and much colder in all western sections as April comes in. Cold, northerly winds, with frost and freezing northward, will follow about the 1st to the 3rd, progressively from west to east. If frost reaches far into central to southern sections at this time, our readers should not be taken wholly by surprise. Careful and impartial observers must have discovered that the Easter full moon is almost invariably attended and followed by severe and disagreeable squalls and boreal weather. The present case we believe will prove no exception to the rule. Plants and tender vegetation should be protected against the probability of killing frost during the first three or four days in April.

About the 4th to the 6th falls a reactionary storm period, during which time falling barometer, change to warmer, with more rain and storminess will be probable. Hail storms will be most natural at all the April disturbances, and sudden drops of temperature should not surprise any one after all well defined storm movements.

The Vulcan storm period, central on the 10th, will bring a series of pronounced storms. The culmination of these storms will fall about Sunday the 10th to Wednesday the 13th. Look for high temperature, low barometer, with rain, hail and thunder progressively from west to east, on the 11th, 12th and 13th. Rapid rise of barometer and change to quite cool will follow behind the storms, but a reaction to storm conditions will suddenly return, and from the 15th to the 17th it will again become very warm, progressively, the barometer will again fall to low readings and decided storms of rain, hail and thunder will occur along paths of low barometric pressure. The sudden revulsions of Venus from hot to cold will be felt at this time and at each disturbance during the rest of the month. Tornadic disturbances should be apprehended, if very low barometer, high temperature and abnormal humidity prevail at this time.

A regular Vulcan-Venus perturbation will be central on the 21st extending from the 19th to 23rd. The barometer will drop low and the temperature rise very high as this period progresses, resulting in many vicious thunder and hail storms on and touching the 21st, 22nd and 23rd. The normal tendency to April thunder showers will grow into decided and far-reaching rainstorms, with dangerous winds and possible tornadoes during the progress of these disturbances. The inevitable change to much cooler, with frosts general over central and northern sections, will follow up the western flanks of these storms. Late snow squalls need surprise no one, as the high barometer follows low areas at these April periods.

One of the most decided, and perhaps violent storm periods of the month, extends from about the 26th to 29th. This period is nearer the center of the Venus disturbance, is in a Mercury perturbation, with Moon on the celestial equator, in perigee and full. We warn our readers to watch the baromeartic conditions and storm developments at this time. Very general and severe storms are more than probable. This is a time when destructive hail storms are almost a certainty in very many sections. Abnormal down-pours of rain will also visit central to southern regions. The month will go out with high barometer, cold winds and frosty nights northward.

The Boy Who Won't Work.

What to do with that boy that won't work? Before we could give an opinion we should want to know what sort of a boy he is. Maybe he has a naturally inventive and mechanical turn of mind; maybe he is a bookworm and would rather read Shakespeare and ancient history than to plow corn; maybe he is in love with nature and must be needs hunting birds' nests, chasing butterflies or bugs or watching the clouds and sunsets when he should be picking up potatoes. If the boy is built this way, don't lick him and jaw him, but have a little horse sense and do your best to help him along the line of work and study which most interests him, but if he is one of the kind who is simply lazy, with a natural inclination to rob orchards and melon patches, smoke cigarettes back of the barn and with a marked love for yellow backed dime novels, 'pon honor, we believe that a good hickory switch, his dad and the boy can be got into an active conjunction none too quickly. We have come across many men who, arrived at mature years and occupying useful and honorable positions in society, were free to admit that they owed much to good lickings judiciously administered at the right time. There is no sort of use or sense in a man raising a lazy, worthless son. Nine times out of ten he is that sort just because he was not well trained and because his dad set him a bad example. Every boy will at first take his father for a pattern, and if you are a no 'count sort of fellow your boys will be that way, too, unless they have a mighty good woman for a mother, and often she can't save them. You man with a boy to train, just preach less and practice more.—Exchange.

Care of the Eyes.

Up to 40 years of age, bathe the eyes twice daily with cold water.

Avoid reading when lying down or when mentally or physically depressed.

When the eyes are tired, rest them by looking at objects from a distance.

Old persons should avoid reading much by artificial light; be guarded as to diet, and avoid sitting up late at night.

Avoid stimulants and drugs which affect the nervous system, especially when they are known to exert an injurious influence.

After 50 years of age bathe the eyes morning and evening with water so hot that you would wonder how you would stand it; follow this with cold water; that will make them glow with warmth.

Do not give up in despair when you are informed that a cataract is developing; remember that in these days of advancing surgery it can be removed with little danger to the vision.

Letter to J. W. Shunk.

WESTMINSTER

Dear Sir: A big mill-owner, Spartansburg, S C, wanted 5,000 gallons of paint, and bought by price; paid 5 cents less than ours; got a "lead-and-zinc" paint; but the lead was sulphate of lead, not carbonate. Sulphate costs about half; and covers about half.

That paint was adulterated about six times as much as the 5 cents paid for. He "saved" 5 cents; and it cost him 30.

Oh no; it cost him more than that; we forgot the labor. Can't work it out exactly; don't know how long it'll wear.

Short-measure besides; that alone was twice as much as his "saving" 5 cents.

It was thin, too; some loss there; don't know how much.

There was too much dryer in it. The maker made something on that; he didn't.

Taking it altogether, he didn't make much by that 5 cents.

Go by the name; and the name is Devoe lead-and-zinc.

Yours truly

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
