Hicks' Forecasts For May.

The storm diagram shows that a Venus period of disturbance is central on the 4th of May, and that its disturbing power lasts until near the end of the month. This means that all the regular and reactionary periods, until after the middle of the month, will be prolonged and intensified by the Venus influence.

Without modifying causes unknown to us, the first week in May will bring many active, if not dangerous storms. The Vulcan, Mercury and Venus influence all combine to render this a danger period. The Vulcan and Mercury periods are central together on the 3rd and the Venus period is central on the 4th. About the 1st to 3rd look for change to very warm, starting in the west and spreading eastward. The barometer will fall to very low readings and from about the 3rd to 6th violent storms will pass eastwardly over most parts of the country. This is a time when tornadoes are very probable, making it wise to heed all indications of coming storms, and taking such precautionary measures for safety as may be reasonable or practicable. Heavy downpours of rain and hail, with great electrical displays, will most likely attend these disturbances. Behind these storms, look for high barometer, west winds and gales, and sudden changes to very cool. Frosts need not surprise any in all central to northern sections of the country.

Reactionary storm conditions will return on the 8th, 9th and 10th, bringing a return of high temperature, low barometer, great humidity, and more storms of greater or less violence and danger. All through this part of May the solar focus is central along the Middle States, extending east and west and daily cycles of heavy thunder and rain storms often occur for many successive days, culminating in a wide and sweeping series of storms. Such will probably result at this reactionary period, lasting perhaps into the regular storm period which is central on the 14th. If a sudden high barometer develops behind the rain and thunder storms about the 10th, regions to the northward may look for frost.

About the 14th look for change to warmer, the barometer will again fall to low readings, and another series of rain, wind and thunder-storms will take up their eastward march across the country, culminating on and touching the 14th, 15th and 16th. At this as well as other May periods, if the air is warm and humid, with low and falling barometer, no gathering storm should be allowed to approach without careful watch on the situation. There is no use in trying to conceal the fact that tornadic storms are possible and probable, and a little common sense watching and planning or the lack of such, will run into matters of life or death in such critical moments.

Great and sudden revulsions from warm to unseasonably cool are characteristics of the Venus perturbations, and when these Venus periods fall in the month of May, the wildest electrical storms are often followed by surprising changes to cold and frost. More or less of such phenomena will be realized during all the first half of the present month. Make it your business to watch and see if such influences are not apparent during much of the present month.

The next return of storm conditions will be from the 20th to 23rd. See if marked change to warmer, falling barometer and more active storms of thunder and rain do not spread progressively over the country from west to east during the days named. The crisis of these storms will fall on and touching the 22nd and 23rd. If your barometer is very low—a thing most likely at this time—accept the indication as a warning of dangerous storms and govern yourself accordingly. Another change to quite cool for the season will come with the high barometer behind these storms. See if it doesn't.

The last storm period for the month is central on the 26th, covering the 24th to 29th. This period will come in with rising temperature, the barometer will fall decidedly in all western parts by the 26th, and during the 27th, 28th and 29th, most parts of the country will be touched by active storms in their eastward sweep across the country. If by any means dry, hot, brassy weather, with earthquake and seismic disturbances, should take the place of electrical storms in the early parts of the month, this last storm period may bring a daily cycle of very severe storms. No harm can come of watchfulness and reasonable safeguards against possible danger. In every probability danger and death will visit some towns and localities this month, and the sections most frequented by tornadoes are now so well defined that no town or family should be overtaken wholly by surprise, especially when it is clearly indicated by the astronomic conditions that we are passing through a tornado period.

As to the general outlook for May, we believe that it will be up to, or above the average in warmth. There will be much bright and pleasant weather between the periods of severe storms. Excessive rainfalls, with destructive hail storms in many sections, may reasonably be expected, though these rainfalls will be largely confined to central, western and southern sections. All parts will have moisture sufficient for present needs, but large areas will approach the summer period, verging on to drouth conditions.

The cheapest Watches that ever were sold,
Made of pure metal, both Silver and Gold;

So cheap and beautiful for all to behold;
To see these fine goods 'tis really a treat,
And in quality and price they cannot be beat.
Now Clocks, my dear friends, I sell them so low,
A 10-dollar bill will buy a whole row;
Now facts are facts, come see for yourselves
The beautiful goods in case and on shelves.

Made of good metal, both Nickle and Gold;
We will test your eyes gladly, without any fee,
So you will always be happy, because you can see.
If your glasses get broken, disabled or bent,
We'll examine them freely, without costing a cent;
If, of new frames or lenses you stand in need
We can furnish them for you, Yes, Indeed.
