Poultry Yard Notes.

The market weight for broilers is about three pounds per pair.

Don't carry poultry around by the legs with their heads hanging down.

The American breeds of poultry are the money-bringers in the poultry business.

Poultry raising, conducted as a business, on strictly business principles, will result in a good profit.

Too many people start in the poultry business about where they should be after three or more years experience. Money will buy many things, but not experience

Plant some millet for feeding the young chicks next spring.

Regularity in the care of poultry pays. System is always a source of economy

A barrel covered with brush in the field makes an ideal nest for turkeys. Have both heads of the barrel out. If the turkey hen sits there, see that a fine screen is put up nights to keep away night-prowling enemies.

Rape makes excellent green food to give to the yarded fowls. Plant a few rows of rape up to the middle of summer for the fowls.

Sunflowers can be grown in out-of-the-way places. The seed are good for the poultry in winter and are said to put a gloss on the plumage.

Cornmeal mixed with cold water into a "dough" is not a good feed for young chicks. In warm weather it will swell, heat and sour in the craw before it can be digested, causing indigestion and bowel troubles. Mix with boiling water to a crumbly consistency and then there will be no trouble.

Feed the young chicks the first week or two on clean feeding boards. First scatter a little clean sand or sharp grit, then scatter the food over the grit.

If you use small yards for the hen and brood—that is, a lath or wire run—move to fresh land every other day.

Keep the drinking water vessels clean and out of the sun.

Arrange so the chicks can get in shady places at will.

Feed early and late should be the rule with growing chicks.

Whitewashing the window panes of the henhouse in summer will keep out much heat.

American bred hens lead all others in the Australian egg-laying contests. There is talk of a similar contest being inaugrated in this country and all foreign countries being invited to send competing hens. The hen that won the prize in Australia was of Brown Leghorns, rosecombed, owned by a woman in Nebraska.

An exchange says: A fertile egg generates heat, an infertile egg does not. Do not, therefore, let thermometer lie on latter in incubator. Better use two or three thermometers as checks on each other. The clear, infertile eggs when thoroughly cooked, make good poultry food.

Sentence Sermons.

Grumbling is the child of greed.

Sincerity is never self-conscious.

Sin is never healed by humoring it.

It takes all of life to know all of love.

Faith is the greatest force in the world.

You cannot feed the soul on frozen truths.

Style is no substitute for sterling strength.

The life that does no good is guilty of much harm.

Character may be sold, but it cannot be bought.

Some people fear to try lest they should succeed.

The hope of this world is in the hard things we have to do.

As soon as a man is good enough he is no longer any good.

Character is what we are when we haven't time to calculate.

People who borrow trouble are always ready to lend advice.

The devil needs to do nothing for the man who has nothing to do.

No man moves this world until he is profoundly moved himself.

—From the Chicago Tribune.

In a small way wine may be made from cherries, when quite ripe, by pressing the pulp through a hair seive. Then to every gallon of juice add 2 pounds of granulated sugar, stir all together and put into a cask, filling it completely. Leave the bunghole open until fermentation has ceased, then rack off the contents into a perfectly clean cask and bung up. After three to six months the wine is ready for use and may be bottled.

"My good man," said the stranger, "can you direct me to the best hostelry in this town?" "Well, I dunno as we have any of them here just now," replied the native; "but Ike Springer's runnin' a mighty good livery stable back of the Grand Central Hotel."

"We are told to cast our bread on the waters!" said the young wife.

"But don't you do it," said her husband. "A vessel might run against it and get wrecked."

"I've been thinking of starting in business for myself. I wonder if there's any money in poultry?"

"Oh, yes. My wife found a dime in a chicken's gizzard once."

"He proposed to her as a joke."

"Yes?"

"Well, she accepted him. He does not regard himself as a humorist any more."

Reginald—"What is the correct thing in dogs these days, deah boy?"

Freddy—"Dog biscuit, of course."

A FACT ABOUT THE "BLUES"

What is known as the "Blues" is seldom occasioned by actual existing external conditions, but in the great majority of cases by a disordered LIVER.

THIS IS A FACT which may be demonstrated by trying a course of

Tutt's Pills

They control and regulate the LIVER. They bring hope and bouyancy to the mind. They bring health and elasticity to the body.

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.

For Business Women.

The following little list was compiled some years ago, says the Buffalo Evening News, by a young girl just starting on a business career. It has proved an invaluable help to her, she says, and so she gladly "passes it on" to any one who is interested:

Be honest.

Don't worry.

Be courteous to all.

Keep your own counsel.

Don't complain about trifles.

Be loyal to your employer.

Don't ask for vacations.

Be business-like, not womanish.

Be prompt—a little ahead of time—if possible.

Be neat and attractive, but unobtrusive in your person.

Take kindly criticism in the spirit in which it was intended.

Do the very best you can each day and every day, so that when there is a chance for promotion you will not only be "called, but chosen."

An Ailment of the Feet.

Poetry is at last classified. The Washington Post tells a story of some children who were discussing the perfections and usefulness of their respective fathers.

"My father's the best man in the world," said one little girl. "He is a minister. He makes people go to church."

"Mine is the best," piped up another. "He's a doctor. He makes sick people well so they can go to church."

Three or four more enlarged upon the benefit the world derived from their fathers, and it finally came the turn of a sweet, blue eyed little girl.

"My papa's the best of all," she said. "He's a poet."

"A poet!" said another, joining the group. "Why, a poet isn't a profession! It's a disease!"

Pointed Paragraphs.

Reputation is sometimes more valuable than character.

A luxury is something that only a lucky man can afford.

Silence is probably considered golden because gold is so scarce.

Any girl who thinks of bleaching her hair should try to keep it dark.

A lot of people who grace the show window really belong on the bargain counter.

A Kentuckian who was boring for oil got disgusted and quit when he struck water.

A bachelor may have no excuse for living, but the average married man has to dig up two or three excuses a week.

Nothing is calculated to jar an eligible girl like a young man who talks about his money but says nothing about matrimony.

Things Not to Do.

To contradict your friends when they are speaking.

To say smart things which may hurt one's feelings.

It is bad to make remarks about the food at dinner.

To talk about things which only interest yourself.

To grumble about your home and relatives to outsiders.

To speak disrespectfully to any one older than yourself.

To be rude to those who serve you either in shop or at home.

To dress shabbily in the morning because no one will see you.

To think first of your own pleasure when you are giving a party.

To refuse ungraciously when somebody wishes to do you a favor.

The Sluggard In After Life.

In our family of five boys there was never one who jumped out of bed until he was pulled out or dabbed with a wet sponge.

Yet here is the faithful record of the five sluggards:

Aged Thirty—Manager of large manufacturing works.

Aged Twenty-seven—Doctor; medalist with honors.

Aged Twenty-three—M. A. at eighteen years old; now going up for his last half of his final for LL. B.

Aged Twenty—Student in medicine; carried all before him in every exam.

Aged Fifteen—Head boy of his school.

Yet every one of us was called lazy, and every one will to this day at any time, morning, noon and night, enjoy repose when he can snatch it.

"They say," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that Mr. Faddlethwaite, who used to belong to our church, has become an agnostic."

"Is that so? Josiah used to take his lunch at the same place he did down-town, and he says he often warned him that he'd get it if he didn't give up eatin' so fast."

The Bridal Gown.

There is an ancient ryhme, which gives good advice in regard to the color chosen for the bridal gown. It runs:

Married in white,
You have chosen all right.
Married in gray,
You will go far away.
Married in black,
You will wish yourself back.
Married in red,
You'd be better dead.
Married in green,
Ashamed to be seen.
Married in blue,
You'll always be true.
Married in pearl,
You'll live in a whirl.
Married in yellow,
Ashamed of the fellow.
Married in brown,
You'll live out of town.
Married in pink,
Your spirits will sink.

A Quaker had his house broken into by a burglar and several valuables stolen. He did not inform the police, however, but kept the affair to himself.

The following evening a neighbor remarked to him: "I am sorry to hear of your house being robbed, Mr. Fry. I hope that your loss is not heavy?"

"Friend," said the Quaker, "thou must know the extent of my loss as well as I can do since thou art the first to mention it to me; hence I know thou art the burglar and I will trouble thee for my property." He got it.

A schoolmaster one day asked the dunce of the school some very simple questions in arithmetic. He was surprised to find that he got the right answers, and when he had finished he said to the boy, "Correct; sit down."

"Now," said the schoolmaster, "see if you have sense enough to ask me some questions."

The boy pondered for a moment, and then said: "Please, sir, what would three yards of calico cost if cotton was two pence a reel?"

"I think you take me for a fool," said the schoolmaster.

"Correct; sit down!" returned the boy.

At a funeral in Glasgow a stranger who had taken his seat in one of the mourning coaches excited the curiosity of the other three occupants, one of whom at last asked him:

"Ye'll be a brither o' the corp'?"

"No, I'm no a brither o' the corp'?"

"Weel, then, ye'll be his cousin?"

"No, I'm not that!"

"Then ye'll be at least a frien' o' the corp'?"

"Not that, either. To tell the truth, I've no been weel mysel', and as my doctor has ordered me some carriage exercise I thocht this wad be the cheapest way to tak' it."

The lady arose and drew her boa tighter. "Then your answer is no?" she said in husky tones.

"My dear lady," the man remarked in his gentlest manner, "I told you eight years ago that I could not marry you, and I have not changed my mind."

The lady paused in the doorway.

"I will see you again in four years," she said.

Mamma—"My gracious! What on earth has happened to you, Willie?"

Willie—"Boo hoo! It's all your fault. I've been playing with that new boy."

Mamma—"What, that little Quaker boy?"

Willie—"Yes, and—boo hoo—you said Quakers never fight."

Dolly—"What do you do when you are writing a letter and make a blot?"

Madge—"If it's to Charlie, I draw a ring around it and call it a kiss."

Mistress—"Why have you set the alarm for 12 o'clock?"

Bridget—"Shure, that's for the bread to rise."

Always aim a little higher than the mark—if the mark is a dimple in her chin.
