The wind moaned about the building. The rustling, rushing sound stirred not alone the outward air, it beat not only on the cold bare walls, it rushed over other things than the blackened, deserted streets.

With downcast head sunk forward he sat and did not note the passing minutes. The wind seemed to bring a flood of memories to his mind. They came in a ghostly procession and beat against his heart and brain. They passed, but one silent figure remained. Its serious, sober eyes reached and passed the stony barrier to his heart. He saw the same clear, searching eyes roaming over the orchard fields where the sunset glow had just faded away. He heard the clear, sweet voice, "I'll not always have you, Bennie."

Again he looked at the figure, but the clear eyes were closed now and on the face a sweet smile lay. "O Da!" he murmured, "If I had only kept my word!" * * *

They went back together to the old home, and Da was laid beside her father and mother. * *

To-day when Ben and his wife come back from their noble work in New Orleans, no flowers are sweet enough for little hands to put on Aunt Da's grave. M. M. C.

Kissing Mother.

A father, talking to his careless daughter, said: "I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast; and when your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face.

"Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath, and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in those skirmishes with the rough old world. And then the midnight kisses with which she routed so many bad dreams as she leaned above your pillow, haveall been on interest these long, long years.

"Of course she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of work during the past ten years, the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours, and yet if you were sick, that face would appear more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear old face.

"She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands, that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late!"—"Ladies' Home Journal."

A combination that has never been fruitful of good results is that of trying to grow an exposed garden and poultry at one and the same time. No hen on earth can refrain from scratching in the very inviting beds nor can she resist the nice green morsels as they appear in the garden. A garden is all right and so are hens, each in their separate places, but the combination cannot be made without ample fencing. Either the hens must be fenced in or out—in the pens or out of the garden. It is better to fence the garden than the hens.

A patch of sunflowers will afford plenty of shade, in the absence of anything else, and the seed will provide good feed for them in the fall of the year.

Save a small amount of unthreshed grain for the poultry. You will save the thresher's bill on it, and the poultry will even pay you a nice profit for the privilege of working it over for their own benefit, by an increased supply of eggs, and thriftiness and growth among the flock. Wheat is the best for this purpose, but rye and oats are also excellent. If so desired, you can select some of your poorest grain for this purpose, as the main object is to furnish the poultry with some interesting employment. Save enough of the unthreshed grain to furnish one good-sized bundle for every thirty hens in the flock daily. Whole grain can with advantage be scattered among the straw. It will prevent the greedy ones from glutting themselves, while the small and weak ones have a chance to get their share of the grain.

A soft corn can be cured by wearing habitually a piece of cotton wool between the toes, changing the cotton daily. Tincture of arnica, applied on a piece of cotton wool, is also said to be an excellent remedy. Another receipt says that turpentine will cure the soft corn.

Good Resolutions.

I will be neat.

I will do honest work.

I will be master of myself.

I will keep my mind clear.

I will learn to love good books.

I will not even shade the truth.

I will be punctual in all things.

I will never spend more than I earn.

I will not acquire another bad habit.

I will not let my temper control me.

I will be cheerful and enjoy harmless fun.

I will read my Bible and pray every day.

I will be agreeable and companionable.

I will not become habitually suspicious.

I will "do right though the heavens fall."

I will know well some honest business.

I will not write a letter when I am angry.

I will not overrate nor undervalue myself.

I will not be a whining, fault-finding pessimist.

I will neither work or play half-heartedly.

I will be courteous to old people and to women.

I will deserve confidence whether I get it or not.

I will not meddle with what does not concern me.

I will be an avowed servant of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I will keep my eyes, ears and heart open to the good.

I will never let another person lead me to act like a fool.

I will not break an engagement nor a promise if I can keep it.

I will not engage in any questionable amusement or employment.

I will exert myself in all honorable ways to make and keep friends.

I will, when I undertake a thing, be sure I'm right, and then stick to it.

I will not waste the next ten years, the most important of my whole life.

I will keep myself physically clean, mentally alert, morally pure and spiritually alive.—'The Cumberland Presbyterian.'

Whose Bees?

It is a common belief that the stray swarm of bees belongs to the man who discovers them and that he may enter upon the premises of other parties and take possession of them. It is also believed that the finding of a bee tree gives the right to cut down such tree and take the honey, no matter upon whose lands it may be found. The supreme court of Iowa has rendered a decision to the effect that bees are not like wild animals, since they have a local residence at times and belong to the person on whose property they have stored their honey. The forest as well as the cultivated field belongs to the owner thereof, and he who invades it is a trespasser.

To beautify the skin bathe the face with hot water before retiring. Dry it patting with a soft piece of old linen. Rub well into it a good face cream or lotion, and with the finger tips begin the work. Pass the middle fingers on each hand over the top of the eyelids, from the outer corner toward the nose; then bring it back and pass it along the under lid to the nose, down the sides of the nose to the nostrils, and thence across the cheeks to the ears. A little practice will make you very proficient in this. Use a rotary motion of the finger-tips at the corners of the eyes and mouth to erase any lines made there by laughing or other facial expressions, and smooth out the coming lines in the brow, as you would creases in velvet, by rubbing crosswise. In the morning bathe the face with cold water, in which a few drops of simple tincture of benzoin have been dropped.

To pass by a farm and behold a flock of one breed of well-bred fowls speaks volumes for the owner. A flock of well-bred fowls constitutes a silent advertisement of what it is and what its owner is. We would rather have a hundred hens in our yard all alike, as to breed and quality, than to have a brand-new pump in the well. Anybody can buy a pump who has the money.

JOB Printing of all kinds done promptly at reasonable prices. Call for estimates.

The Boy On The Farm.

Have you got a boy? Does he get up early, milk cows, feed team, cattle and pigs? Does he take the team and plow or drag, or rake, or mow all day? What are you doing for him? Do you give him anything at all except his board and clothes and a little schooling in winter? What inducement do you offer him to stay with you and help you on the farm?

Suppose that instead of enforcing your legal claims to his services until he is of age, and thus disgusting him with farm life, and paving the way towards an unloved, neglected old age for yourself, you do the fair thing by this boy. Give him something for his own, let him be earning and saving a little money. Don't deny him the opportunity of an education if he desires one, for an ignorant man is surely going to be placed at a fearful disadvantage in the coming years; give him the best team and the best tools to work with and encourage him by kind appreciation. The reason so many boys leave the farm disgusted is because they are treated like little slaves by selfish, avaricious parents. You can treat a boy like a horse, or an ox, but the horse or ox will not run off, and the boys can and will, and we don't blame them.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,

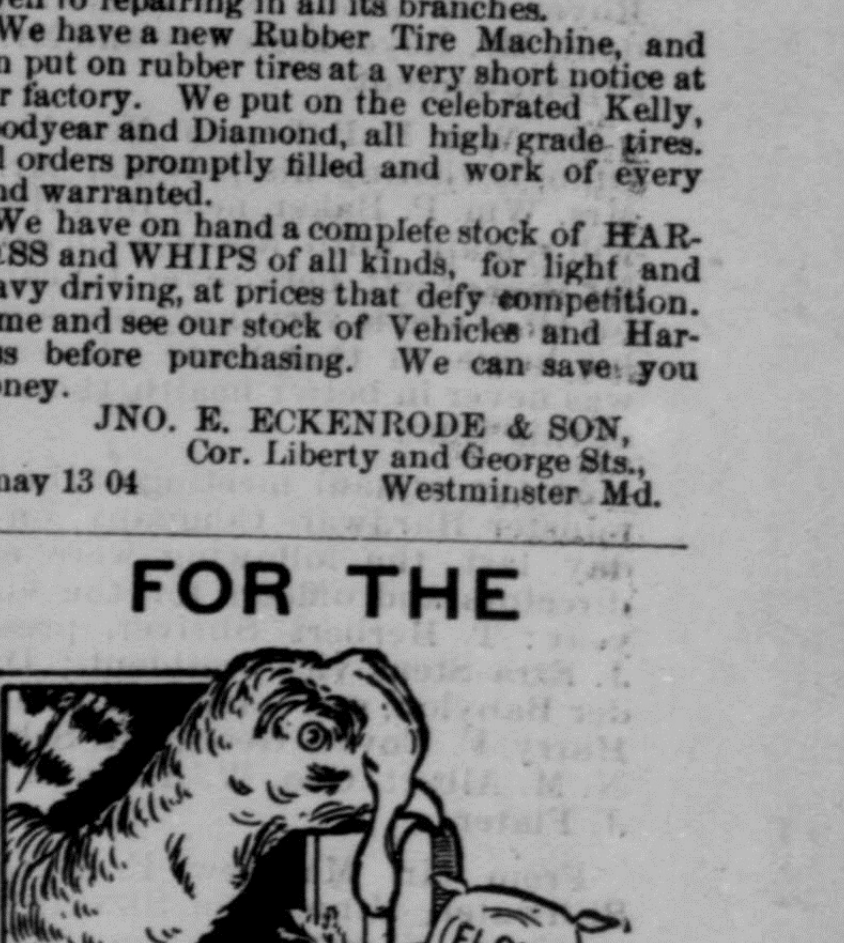
FOR THE



New Year Holidays,

you should let us supply the Groceries. We have everything that is needed to make you happy during the holiday season. The special things we have for this season are all bright and fresh, like the rest of

OUR GROCERIES.

So much depends on the quality of your Groceries that it is folly not to get the best, especially when you can do it so surely and reasonably as you can here.
