THE SITUATION IN RUSSIA.

The autocratic government of Russia is face to face with the most serious problem in its history. With a gigantic war on its hands in Manchuria and an uprising against oppression by vast numbers of workingmen in St. Petersburg and other large cities it is evident the government, if its purpose be to maintain an absolute despotism, has an almost impossible task before it, and it is not a matter of wonder that the Czar is driven to the necessity of temporizing with the malcontents and is reaking vague promises of listening to their grievances and initiating reforms, being certain that the crisis, once past, his absolute authority can be quickly resumed. And this is logically probable. While a vast army is operating against the Japanese in Manchuria, forces sufficient to quell uprisings in the large cities of Russia are retained at home, and the population of the rural districts has been kept in such ignorance and debasement through centuries of oppression that it probably cannot be aroused, to any great extent, to join in a revolt against its oppressors. This great mass of ignorance makes up a considerable part of the entire population of Russia and will hardly be induced to join in any movement against the government. It cannot be classed as really civilized.

Notwithstanding this, Russia has an immense urban population and if the present movement spreads to this element throughout the empire it will eventually make itself felt even with the degraded and oppressed inhabitants of rural Russia.

Lovers of liberty cannot fail to be in sympathy with a people seeking a larger measure of personal freedom, and to hope that the present movement may lead to such a change in the Russian form of government as will give the people a national legislative body chosen by their own suffrages. The period in the world's history when the will of one man is the law governing untold millions should be brought to an end, and their autocrat be forced to recognize that they are endowed by their Creator with rights that should be inalienable, and should be given the privilege of "liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Russia Threatened With Revolution.

Striking Workmen Start a Movement That May End in Change of Government.

A Large Body of Workmen, Marching to the Czar's Palace to Appeal for Justice, Fired Upon By Soldiers and About 100 Killed and 350 Wounded.

Daily Summary of Occurrences in Connection With the Trouble.

During the brilliant imperial ceremony of blessing the waters of the Neva at St. Petersburg on Thursday of last week a charge of grapeshot was fired from a saluting gun in charge of an aristocratic military corps. The shots struck the little chapel in which the Czar was standing and smashed windows of the palace. While officials say it was an accident, there is a mystery about it that seems to savor of an attempt at assination.

On Saturday Russian strikers prepared a petition to the Czar and insisted on receiving an answer from him at his palace Sunday.

Investigation of the firing on the Winter Palace by a saluting battery continues without definite result.

The strike in St. Petersburg continue to spread. Strikers paraded the streets and forced a number of shops to close. The troops have been called out. Over 100,000 men are on a strike. A great mass-meeting was held in Palace Square Sunday and Father Gopon lead the demonstration.

Strike agitation on a large scale began at Muscow, on Monday, and there are fears of a bloodier outbreak in that city than occurred in St. Petersburg Sunday.

Further lagre demonstrations in St. Petersburg were prevented by an overwhelming display of military force.

Troops fired on a host of workingmen near Koepino, a suburb of St. Petersburg, killing and wounding many on Tuesday. The revolt continues to spread to other cities.

A proclamation issued in St. Petersburg, on Wednesday, promised concessions to the workingmen.

St. Petersburg and Moscow were comparatively quiet, but at Helsingfors. Finland, Cossacks wounded about 30 rioters.

Lurid revolution broke suddenly in St. Petersburg Sunday. It was a day of horrors that will be forever memorable in the history of Russia.

Five hundred persons, according to conservative estimates, were killed or wounded by soldiers for collecting in street mobs and refusing to disperse. Some estimates of the victims run to 5,000 and beyond, the London Daily Mail's correspondent stating that about 2,000 were killed and 3,400 wounded. At night the crowds, stung to madness by the merciless treatment they received, were arming for a renewal of the conflict.

Czar Nicholas II disregarded the plea of 100,000 strikes to appear in front of the Winter Palace at 2 P. M. and receive their petition. Instead, thousands of soldiers were drawn up there and at other vantage points in the city, ready to mow down the people.

As the mobs approached they were ordered to disperse. They refused to do so and hurled epithets at the soldiers, also clamoring to see the Czar. Then volley after volley was fired and Cossacks charged with sabers, men, women and children falling by scores before them.

For a time the mobs were dispersed by these fierce onslaughts, but at night they gathered in other quarters of the city and were arming for a renewal of the outbreak. Their faith in the Czar seems broken, and shouts of "Down with the Emperor!" are heard.

Father George Gopon, the priest who is leading the outbreak, was spared by the troops.

It is rumored that the army is disaffected and that one body of troops refused to fire on the strikers.

A member of the Czar's household is quoted as saying that the outbreak will end the war with Japan and that Russia will have a constitution or the Czar will lose his head. Comment was made that the troops were braver against their own people than against the Japanese.

Thirty workmen were killed and many wounded by troops at Riga, Russia, according to unconfirmed dispatches from that place to a London news agency. Another report in London stated that a cotton mill in St. Petersburg was in flames.

The strike is spreading in nearly all the cities and towns, and at Libau, where a policeman was killed and strikers went from mill to mill forcing men to quit work.

Troops are patrolling the streets of St. Petersburg, Moscow, Libau, Odessa, Kieff and other industrial centers. In Moscow some of the employers are evincing a willingness to make concessions to workmen.

In St. Petersburg the return of workmen has enabled several factories to resume. The authorities hope for a general resumption on Monday.

Prince Mirsky has given a partial promise to release noted writers and others who were arrested.

BLIZZARD GRIPS EASTERN STATES.

Maryland Suffers, But Storm is Fiercer Further North.

Scope of Storm And Havoc Wrought in Outline.

A blizzard to which only the famous storms of 1888 and 1899 can be compared swept Baltimore, Maryland, and all the States of the North Atlantic Coast and Middle West Wednesday.

The storm raged most furiously in New York and the New England States, where, althoogh the snow was not very deep, the wind attained hurricane force.

In Baltimore, starting, with a moderate temperature, a light snow and little wind, it reached its height in the afternoon and evening, and by its fury almost cleared the streets of pedestrains and suspended business. The wind attained a velocity of 30 miles an hour. Railroad trains on all lines were delayed, some many hours, but the street car lines were operated with some regularity even in the suburbs. No serious blockades occurred, and telephones, telegraphs and electric lights were little injured.

The estimated fall of snow in Baltimore was 8.3 inches, but in places the drifts were five feet deep. At 8 o'clock in the evening the mercury stood at 17°.

In New York there were eight deaths, scores were injured, surface car lines had to stop, traffic on the Erie road was suspended, as it was on divisions of other roads. Train service on the New York Central was suspended at night and trains were hours behind. Similar conditions prevailed in New York State, in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New Edgland.

Three schooners were wrecked in Hampton roads, Va., and many vessels are stormbound at Newport News.

A Delaware and Chesapeake train is snowbound at Clayton, and a Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic train, near Easton, Md. Most of the country roads in Maryland are blocked by snowdrifts and communication with the country districts is almort entirely cut off.

The storm was much less severe west of the Allegheny Mountains, but the weather was extremely cold in the Northwest, Southwest and South.

A peculiar fact was that It was warmer along the Eastern Lakes than in Missouri and Kentucky.

As the snowstorm passes out to sea the cold wave in the West follows in the storm's wake.

TIE-UP IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Easton, Pa., Jan. 25.—Everything in the lower end of the Lehigh Valley is tied up today by the blizzard. The early trains managed to get through after several hours' delay, but traffic is now at a stand-still.

The trolley tie-up is complete and cars and snowplows are stalled at various points along the line.

Mills and factories are closed and the stores are doing practically no business.

Hazleton, Pa., Jan. 25.—Hazleton tonight is in the grip of the worst storm of the winter. Snow has been falling since 7 o'clock yesterday morning and is now 22 inches deep. The trolly system is completely paralyzed. Railroad trains are stalled and the third rail line between here and Wilkesbarre is tied up. The mines were in operation, but there will likely be a general suspension tomorrow.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 25.—The Wyoming Valley is in the grasp of a blizzard. Snow is 14 inches deep on the level. In many places it has drifted badly. The railroads are crippled, trains being from one to two hours late.

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 25.—This is the heaviest snowstorm of the winter. Reports from the country districts state the snow is being piled in huge drifts, making many of the highways impassable.

Trolley service in city and country is completely paralyzed. All trains on the steam roads are late.

Snow has fallen to the depth of 14 inches on the level. The thermometer at night registered 18°, and the mercury is falling rapidly.

Williamsport, Pa., Jan. 25.—Eight inches of snow fell throughout Central and Northern Pennsylvania last night. A high wind drifted it in the mountains and all trains are late. In Potter, Tioga and Sullivan counties the storm was of the nature of a blizzard and county roads are impassable.

The snowfall was about eight inches and it was badly drifted by the stiff wind which was blowing all day. Tonight the mercury registered 7° above zero and was steadily falling.

Pittsburg, Jan. 25.—A snowfall of four inches, accompanied by high winds, last night caused a drop of 20° in the thermometer, to 4° above. High winds prevail and a further drop of 10° is predicted. This is the coldest day of the winter. All through train are late.

THE STORM IN MARYLAND.

In Howard county, the snow attained a depth of eight inches on a level, rendeaing the county roads impassable.

The coldest weather of the winter, with blizzard accompaniment, prevailed in Allegany county. At Terra Alta the thermometer dropped to 6 degrees below zero. Three inches of snow fell, while the wind blew with hurricane velocity. The drifts were not deep enough to interfere seriously with railway traffic.

From all points in the Alleghenies come reports of intense cold. At Oakland, Frostburg and other altitudes there is considerable suffering. There are seven inches of snow at Gorman and Thomas, and five inches at Elkins, W. Va. The temperature at the higher points along the West Virginia Central runs from 2° to 5° below zero.

In Washington county, many of the roads in the vicinity of Keedysville and Sharpsburg are impassable, the drifts being from 6 to 8 feet deep.

Of the 30-odd rural mail carriers in the county only a few were able to go entirely over their routes. The Clearfoss and Green Castle turnpike is blocked for miles. It will be days before it can be opened for travel. Around Clearspring and westward the roads are all blocked.

The severest snowstorm of the winter raged in Cecil county. The wind blowed a gale from the north, piling the snow 10 and 15 feet deep along the county roads and upon the railroad. Driving through the country is impossible and the trains are having great difficulty in getting through.

The snow in Baltimore county formed many deep drifts and badly blocked travel on the roads. Some of the drifts in the upper section of the county were very deep. About Loch Raven the roads were almost impassable in some places. Heavy drifts were seen along the Hillen road south of Taylor avenue and along the York road, in the neighborhood of Rodgers' shop.

In the upper part of the county the roads everywhere were blockaded with snow, and the rural free-delivery mail-carriers failed to make their rounds.

The worst blizzard that has visited Talbott county, since 1899 when it commenced to snow Tuesday night, and continued until Wednesday night. The wind blew a gale. The snowfall is about 10 inches, but in many plases it has drifted to such an extent that it has been banked so that travel, either on foot or by vehicle, is out of the question.

Frederick county is experiencing the worst storm of the winter. Not so much snow has fallen as on some previous occasions this winter, but with a high wind the snow is being driven into drifts. The weather is extremely cold.

In Kent county the wind was blowing at the rate of 35 miles an hour, and railroad traffic is almost blocked. Snow is piled in the highways in places to the depth of five feet, and has reached a depth of 16 inches on the level. Rural mail-carriers were turned back on their routes and business in all parts of the county is suspended.

Freezing in Florida.

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 25.—The cold wave reached this city today.

At 8 P.M., the thermometer registered 28° and was falling. It is probable that considerable damage will be done to vegetables in the northern part of the State, but the extent of it will not be known until tomorrow.

The temperature in Tampa is only 4° above the freezing point, while at Jupiter it is 44°. The northern border of the orange belt is nearly 100 miles south of Jacksonville, and it extends from that point more than 200 miles farther south. The growers had warning and had an opportunity to gather the fruit that remained on the trees.

The groves themselves are in no danger unless it becomes considerably colder during the night.

W. M. R. R. Ready For Business At Port Covington.

Traffic Manager Griswold of the Western Maryland Railroad announces that the new coal pier at Port Covington, Baltimore, has been completed and is now ready for business. The pier is one of the largest in Baltimore, and has a capacity of about 400 cars of coal a day. The coal pier is 740 feet long and 60 feet wide. Upon the adjoining bulkhead a trestle has been erected requiring nearly one and one-half million feet, board measure, of yellow pine timber of large sizes. The trestle is 70 feet above mean low water, and upon it loaded coal cars will be hoisted by a 20-by-36-foot engine, built in Wilkesbarre, Pa.

The annual election of a Board of seven Directors of The Protection Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of Littlestown, Pa., was held at the office of Squire Chas. H. Myers last Saturday, when the following gentlemen were elected: Geo. F. Krug, S. D. Mehring, Amos Basehoar, Abram G. Keagy, Geo. D. Basehoar. Jos. A. Wolf, Levi J. Motter. The Board organized Monday and elected the following officers: President, Geo. F. Krug; vice president, S. D. Mehring, secretary, Chas. H. Myers; treasurer, Geo. D. Basehoar.

An agreement has been concluded and reported to the court between the Western Maryland Railroad Company and the parties in interest designated by the court, viz: The trustees of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, whereby the railroad company acquires, upon terms satisfactory to all parties, all right-of-way necessary to enable the completion of its line of railroad now being constructed between Cherry Run and Cumberland.

Mrs. Lewis D. Sell, of Hanover, Pa., met with a painful accident at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon which resulted in her nose being broken, as well as sustaining a cut near the temple and several bruises. Mrs. Sell had just left the room of her daughter Madeline, who had been ill, and was in the act of descending the stairs slipped and fell to the landing below with the above result.

Mrs. Augusta J. Rich, wife of Arthur A. Rich of Glyndon, died on Wednesday at her home after an illness of several months. She was the daughter of the late John G. Anderson, of Jefferson county, Florida. Three children survive—Rev. William H. Poole, of St. Barnabas' Protestant Episcopal Church, Sykesville; Lawrence A. Poole, of Baltimore, and Miss Jean A. Rich.

Adjt.-Gen. Clinton L. Riggs has began preparations for the biennial encampment of the Maryland National Guard, which will take place somewhere in the State this summer, with the three regiments and Troop A of the cavalry in camp.
