THE LITTLE WHITE CHURCH.

The woodpeckers tap at its weath r-worn gables,
The pigeons flit in at its belfry above;
The swallows build nests in the roofs of its stables,
And round it the bees seek the blossoms they love.
The green plumed old elms stand like sentries before it,
Behind it the willows droop drowsy and still,
And gently the breeze from the ocean sings o'er it—
The little white meetinghouse under the hill.

The golden barred sunbeams, new minted and yellow,
Like falchions flash in at the window's queer panes
To fill the old church with a radiance mellow,
And cut through the dust drift fair star-powdered lanes.
They gild the high pews with a glittering splendor,
With halos of glory they dapple the wall,
And on the quaint pulpit their touch falls as tender
And soft as the peace that lies over it all.

How often I've gazed at those bright lances streaming
And fancied them ladders to mansions of joy,
As, in the old pew by the aisle, I sat dreaming
The wonderful dreams of a light-hearted boy!
My eyes do but close, and again to their places
Come trooping the shadowy figures I know;
The forms, well remembered, the dearly loved faces
The faces and forms of the blest long ago.

I hear round about me the hymn book's light rustle,
The lavendered gowns cent the fan-driven breeze,
And through the faint murmur and soft Sabbath bustle
The sermon drones on like the buzzing of bees.
Beside me the dear, sweet faced mother is sitting,
The white-haired old grandsire, serene and devout,
The brother with thoughts 'neath his curls idly flitting
To where the blithe bluebird is singing without.

Dear little home church! 'tis a beautiful story.
The picture you frame in the sunbeam's red gold;
For through it is shining the God given glory,
The rest and the peace of those Sundays of old.
And though in grand temples that tower high above you,
Far, far from your portals they worship at will,
While memory lasts all your children shall love you,
O little white meetinghouse under the hill!

Joe Lincoln.

BESIDE LIBERTY'S CRADLE.

Memorable Anniversaries of the Fourth in the Quaker City.

John Adams rightly prophesied when he wrote of the initial Independence day that it would "be the most memorable epoch in the history of America." "I am apt to believe, he said, "that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty; it ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations from one end of the continent to the other from this time forward forevermore."

The following year, 1777, congress resolved that Independence day should be made a holiday, and this was the first Fourth of July celebration in Philadelphia. It was so successful that it was taken up in every state in the Union.

On July 4, 1788, the United States established a new constitution with becoming ceremony. On July 4, 1826, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams lay dead, and great sorrow was observed throughout the country and especially in Philadelphia.

On July 4, 1858, Edward Everett in speaking of the great memorial day of 1776 said: "Eighty-two years ago this day a deed which neither France nor England, Greece nor Rome, ever witnessed was done in Independence hall, in the city of Philadelphia, a deed that cannot be matched in the history of the world. That old hall should forever be kept sacred as the scene of such a deed. Let the rains of heaven distill gently on its roof and the storms of winter beat softly on its door. As each successive generation of those who have been benefited by the great Declaration made within its walls shall make their pilgrimage to that shrine, may they think it not unseemly to call its walls salvation and its gates praise!"

Early on the evening of July 3, 1876, throngs of people, estimated at 50,000 or 75,000 gathered about Independence hall to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of Independence day. On this occassion the Declaration of Independence was read to the people by Richard Henry Lee, the grandson of Richard Henry Lee, who offered the resolution. In September, 1886, the governors of the thirteen original colonies came to Independence hall to make preparation to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the promulgation of the constitution of the United States, one of the most impressive ceremonies ever witnessed and participated in by the citizens of Philadelphia.—Philadelphia Times.

The Liberty Bell.

From the earliest times the Philadelphia statehouse bell has been a symbol of patriotism. It sounded the repeal of the stamp act, and in 1766 it tolled forth the closing of the port of Boston. It announced the first battle of the American Revolution and the passage of the Declaration of Independence, on which day we are told, that the "great bell rang all day and almost all night." It announced the surrender of Cornwallis and the establishment of the constitution of United States. It has given a hearty welcome to foreign visitors and tolled the requiem of honored and respected dead.

SPECIALISM IN LAW.

In this country nearly every student admitted to the bar is under the impression that there is in him the more than possibility of a great trial lawyer. Having read accounts of brilliant cross examinations and successful addresses to juries, he has in his mind that he is entirely competent at the outset to try the most complicated and difficult cause. Unfortunately as to many who are not qualified for that work it is only after very many years and after considerable experience at the expense of litigants and the public, if at all, that they ascertain that they have not the peculiar aptitude necessary to the successful trial lawyer. In the meantime not only have clients suffered, but the business of the courts has been retarded to a very serious extent by the lack of adaptability on the part of the practitioner as well as by lack of experience, since it is impossible that every man admitted to the bar shall have the opportunity to try a sufficient number of causes to give him the degree of experience requisite in order to obtain the best results.

Sooner or later in the interest of the clients and to save the time and patience of the courts there must be in this country a natural division between the labor of the solicitor and the duty of the barrister, not artificial or conventional, but one which shall grow up from the nature of the case, by which certain men who are best qualified for the trial of causes will carry on that work to the practical exclusion of those without special adaptability for that class of business. In this, as in every other direction, the specialist must find his place.—Green Bag.

About the only reason a woman has for marrying a man is—because.

More men would marry only for love if they could afford it.

At 18 a girl is fickle, but at 28 she only awaits a chance to be otherwise.

A woman can make a dollar go so far that her husband never sees a cent of it again.

In addition to the news of the day, it publishes the best features that can be presented, such as fashion articles, and miscellaneous writings from men and women of note and prominence. It is an educator of the highest character, constantly stimulating to noble ideals in individual and national life.

The Sun is published on Sunday, as well as every other day of the week.

By mail The Daily Sun, $3 a year, including the Sunday Sun, $4. The Sunday Sun alone, $1.00 a year.
