SIDE TWO

about writing I should grumble more than I do at never hearing a line from him, However as long as I can hear good accounts from you, & you are constant in them, I shant be very angry —

A little dapper good humoured looking fellow yesterday delivered me a letter from Fanny - I thank her for it & shall answer it by the same little Messenger who has promised to call again before he sails which will be in about a fortnight — I will send all your things by him if I can, if not — they shall come by the very first Ship after, & he shall convey papers & Magazens — There has been a said break in those Matters the last year has been so completly a deranged one — I was not satisfied with the last Fresh I sent you myself - it was a take in rather - but I had not time to rectify it — Still have I money of Mrs Ringgolds in my hands, & have not had a line since I sent the plate - I will obey her commands with respect to it when ever I receive them - Pray present to her my best compts —

I thank my Name sake for her invitation to America, if she will insist Dame fortune to turn her wheel in my favour, we will certainly accept it - for I perfectly agree with her, that a sea voyage would do her Uncle Ben more good, than all the Medical fraternity put together — I have not the smallest doubt but we should all love one another very sincerely if this can come to pass, accept my love & good wishes my Dear sister for self & young Tatho & my fair brother - I believe me most truly yours & there affectionate sister & aunt
