—Atlanta Constitution.

A Lively Thanksgiving.

Widder Baxter's daughter, Evelina, she sent word that she was a-coming out to our place to spend a few days at Thanksgiving time. I've noticed that your city cousins and acquaintances always like to come out to your farm when strawberries are ripe, and at Thanksgiving and Christmas, when turkeys is twenty-five cents a pound; but when you offer to go and see them Fourth of July and see the fireworks, they're always going to be out of town. Ever notice it?

I used to go to school with Widder Baxter when she was Ann Jane Lee, and I knowed her, egg and bird, so to speak. She married a widower man, who got rich peddling sausages, and, good land! to see her now you'd never think that she'd ever seen anything to eat but angel cake and whipped cream. She's that high-minded and stuck up that common folks feel kinder faint when she's round. She belongs to sixteen clubs and orders. She's a Darter of the Revolutions, and a child of 1812, and a Colony Damsel, and a Relief Corps, and a member of ever so many Sunday, Monday and Tuesday Clubs. She wears the badges of them all, all to once, and she wears diamonds and false hair every day. As for the insides of her own kitchen, she never sets eyes on them from one year's end to another.

She has brought Evel'na up very particular, and sent her to college, and graduated her with all the letters of the alphabet hitched to her name. Her education has got that poor girl so refined that she can't git up in the morning afore nine o'clock, and she couldn't walk from here to Johnson's red barn without having nervous gastration.

I says to Jeremiah—he's my secont husband—my first died of rhumatiz and johnders ten year ago come May day—says I: 'Jeremiah, the land knows whatever we're a-going to do with her. There's them hens and turkeys to git ready for our dinner Thanksgiving Day, and there's them for Captain Ricker's folks, and they got to be dry picked for fear their skins'll blister if they're scalt, and your sister Sally and her five boys is a-coming for a week, and I'd rather see the Old Harry on trucks than that oldest boy of hern! Mary Ann, she's got a new beau to break in, and she won't be able to help much, and I feel as if I might have an attack of malary most any time, and all three of the cats has got kittens that's either got to be drownded or give away, and the bedstead in the spare chamber's so tetery since that fat city boarder laid on it last summer that I shouldn't dast to trust anybody on it till it was screwed up. There's a missionary meeting over to the school house the Wednesday night before Thanksgiving to see who'll make the Injun puddings for the folks up to the poor farm and——'

'Oh, law!' says Jeremiah, 'let her come'—she's a regular Billings, and the Billingses is noted for being as easy as an old shoe—'and we'll trust to Providence to git through it somehow.'

'Yes,' says I, a little riled, for I knowed the brunt of the battle would come on me, 'you Billingses is always trusting to Providence to paddle you into port while you set back on your oars and look on. But Providence,' says I, 'won't be likely to come round and pick and draw them hens, and drownd them kittens, and screw up that bedstead. Them's things,' says I, 'that I never knowed Providence to tackle. But I suppose she'll have to come, and we'll make the best of it.'

Monday afore Thanksgiving Evelina arrived. She had three trunks and a box, and she wore eye-glasses with no rims on them, and she was bareheaded, and had her chin high up in the air, like a cow trying to look over a stun wall. Her hair was rolled up onto something that made her head about the size of a bushel basket, and her face didn't look bigger than a cracker and kinder sunk back.

'For the land sake, child,' says I, how did you lose your hat?'

'I didn't have it on,' says she, 'its quite an fait to go bareheaded now. The oxygen in the sun's scintillations concentrated and stimulate the hair follicles, and by the force of capillary attraction prevent alopecia, and——'

'My goodness!' says I, 'I never mistrusted the sun could do that are. I've alwas known it would fade carpets, and eat holes in winder curtains, and make cowcumber vines wilt, but I never thought it could fix your hair that way.'

Next morning after she got there Evelina she come into the kitchen where I was picking that Wyandotty rooster that Jeremiah bought to the Pugwash County Fair. He paid ten dollars for him, and he ain't never [illegible]rowed since we had him, because he [illegible] the roup, or something or nuther [illegible] is always having, and the [illegible] come out hard enough to [illegible] of a saint.

[illegible] [illegible]er!' says I, as I pulled my thumb nail round skewing, 'I wish he'd never been born!'

'He was not born,' says Evelina; 'he was an embryo in an egg before he was incubated, and——'

'Mary Ann,' says I to the hired girl that was standing a-wiping the dishes, with her underjaw dropped in amazement, 'you bring me them twezers that Jeremiah pulls his eyebrows with, and I'll see if I can't incubate this plaguey critter over again.'

'Are you sure there are no microbes here in your sink?' says Evelina, for she had been peering into the sink, and kinder sniffing round the dishpan. 'How is your drainage? Do you use disinfectants frequently? The fluid from bathing dishes is appallingly prolific in generating bacterial formations. It is said by scientists that there are nine hundred and fifty millions six hundred and ten thousand, four hundred and fourteen forms of microscopic bacteria in one square inch of what vulgarly is known as dish water!'

'Good land!' said Mary Ann, dropping the tin pan she was wiping onto a pile of plates, and cracking three of them clean acrost. 'Will they bite you?'

'Oh, no,' says Evelina, 'but they do worse. They burrow into your vitals, and fill your blood with toxine, and frequently produce locomotor ataxia, and paresis, and——'

'Oh, heavens to Betsy!' says Mary Ann, 'I'll never touch a blessed cup of dishwater as long as I live! I'll starve first!'

'You jest go on and wash them dishes,' says I, 'or I'll send for your Aunt Jemima, and see what she can do with you. I'm a-paying you two dollars a week and your board, and I ain't going to have no loafing round here, backteries or no backteries!'

'Might I inquire if you have sterilized that biped?' says Evelina, looking hard at the rooster through her specks, that kept falling off'n her nose every minnit.

'Have I what?' says I.

'Have you sterilized the bird?' says she.

'I guess not,' says I. 'I've scalt him, and picked him, and drawed him, and now I'm a-going to stuff him.'

'Goodness!' says she, and you haven't disinfected him?'

'No,' says I, 'I ain't, and I ain't a-going to put no carbolic acids or roll brimstone onto no Thanksgiving poultry of mine,' says I. 'We disinfected the house after Tom and Sam had the scarlet fever, and the smell ain't got out of it yet.'

'Oh, of course,' says she, 'you wouldn't use anything of that kind. A solution of carbonate of soda would destroy the ptomaines.'

'Pots of mine,' says I; 'who wants their pots destroyed, I should like to know? Pots cost money, and kittles, too, and I guess,' says I, 'that you'd enjoy it better out on the front piazzy. It's warmish for the season, and there won't be many more days that a hammock will be any good.'

So she went out and left me in peace.

Thanksgiving Day Jeremiah he had promised to haul Parker's folks a load of hay. He'd got it all loaded, and the brindle steers hitched up to it, and he'd come into the home to put on a clean shirt. Jeremiah ain't no dandy, and he ain't over particular about his clothes, but he's great on clean shirts. If he was a-going to be hung, he'd want on a clean shirt. While he was in the house, that Jack of sister Sally's he got to entertaining Evelina. Jack is a regular limb of the Evil One, and what he can't think of in the way of deviltry ain't worth thinking of.

'Don't you want to have a little ride on a load of hay?' says he to Evelina. 'All the city folks likes to ride on hay. It's jest as easy as setting in a rocking-chair. And if you've noticed, all the fellows that write poetry has something about haying.'

'Yes,' says Evelina, rolling up her eyes. 'Maud Muller, on a summer's day, raked the meadows sweet with hay——'

Jack, who is great at rhyming, and is studying, so his mother says, to be a poet, says he:

"Oh, when the fervid sunshine falls
You'll sweat clean through your overalls,
In haying time, I vow,
And thunder showers will come ea h day.
And spile that pesky, half dry hay,
When grass is lying low."

'Oh,' says Evelina, 'really that's quite pretty. I do so admire poetry, and I should like to ride on the hay, if I could only get up there.'

'Oh, that's dead easy,' says Jack. 'I'll git the step-ladder and give you a boost, and I'll drive you round the yard once or twice while Uncle Jed's gitting on his shirt.'

So he got the step-ladder, and Evelina climbed on to the load. Then Jack he picked up the ox goad that had a brad in the end of it, and he gave the off ox a jab in the ribs. The critter jumped, and turned right round quicker'n scat, and when he turned he drive the horns of the nigh ox right through the open place in that step-ladder, and off them two steers capered down the road, with that step-ladder on the horns of one of them, and hittin the tother one a bump every time it flopped.

'Whoa hish there!' yelled Jeremiah, rushing out into the yard, with his clean shirt in one hand and his gallerses a-flying. 'Whoa there! Whoa there, Spark! Whoa hish, Star!' But Spark and Star had got under good headway, and they didn't stop for no swearing. And I'm sorry to say that Jeremiah let off enough profanity to set a dozen swearers up handsomely in business. I told him he ought to be ashamed of himself.

Evelina went off a-yelling, and a waving her arms, and shouting for help, and the oxen set in on a dead run down the hill. Two men on bicycles was a coming up the hill, and they was so took a-back that they didn't jest know whether to turn out or not. While they was a-wobbling from one side of the road to the other them oxen was upon them, and the ox that didn't have no step-ladder on his horns run his head clean through one of them bicycle wheels, and h'isted the rider up in the air, and away that pair of steers went—one with a step-ltdder on his head, the tother with a bicycle?

Poor Evelina was nigh about dead with fright. She stopped yelling, and had fell down in the hay as limp as a bacterial dish cloth.

The second bicycle fellow was a hero—one of them you read of, but don't often come across. He sees that his companion was picking himself out of the gutter, so of course he warn't dead, and he jest run right back as fast as his legs would carry him, and grabbed a rail out of the fence, and when them oxen come tearing on, he let them have it right between the eyes. That backened them so's they'd geed out against the wall and stopped.

Then he held up his arms to Evelina, and she tumbled into them and swooned. He brought her back to the house, and we brung her round but she didn't have no appetite for turkey.

After things were straightened out, Jeremiah he took that Jack of Sally's out behind the barn and gave him an awful trouncing, and Sally she got so mad about it that she took her whole brood and went off home without her Thanksgiving dinner.

I've jest got a letter from Widder Baxter which says that Evelina is going to be married to the bicycle fellow that saved her life, and that if I can make it convenient to leave home, they will be glad to see me at the wedding.

Good land! who'd ever thought that Jack of Sally's would ever have been the means of making a match for anybody?

Lots for Sale.

From Puck.

'Lots for sale.' Lots—of what?
Lots of trouble, like as not,
Lots of fuss with 'equities'"
Titles, deeds and lawyers' fees.
Lots of talks with architects—
Every man the job expects.
Lots of tiffs with carpenters,
Masons, plumbers, plasterers.
Lots of unexpected bills,
'Little extras'—bitter pills.
Lots of city taxes due—
Gas and water, sewer, too.
Lots of advertising, then
Try, and try, and try again.
Lots of folks with half a mind,
And a dozen faults to find.
Lots of worry, pains untold,
Till the pesky thing is sold.
Lots of fine experience,
But of profit—not five cents.
'Lots for sale'—and who will buy?
Lots of people; no more I.

Curious but True.

Although difficult to believe, it is nevertheless true that the death of two half sisters, the daughters of the same father, occurred 170 years apart. The grandfather of the British minister, Charles James Fox, Sir Stephen Fox, married in 1654 and had a daughter born to him in 1655 who died in the course of the same year. He had several other childen who grew up and married, but all of them died before the father and without issue. Sir Stephen, not wishing his large fortune to fall into the hands of distant relatives, married again at a very advanced age, and his youngest daughter was born in 1727. She reached the age of ninety-eight years and died in 1825—that is, 170 years after the death of her oldest sister.

No, replied the practical girl: I do not have to. They generally hunt for me.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?
WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.
MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:
Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
