More complaints are being made about the condition of the road between this city and New Windsor. A. Shriver and Mr. Powers the road is "simply awful," and is dangerous. With this much traveled highway in this condition at the beginning of winter what may be expected of it after awhile. The officials charged with keeping it in repair should give it prompt attention.

This firm has been furnishing Passover flour for a number of years. The order this year is for one thousand barrels and five thousand bushels of wheat will be required to produce it. The Hebrews of Baltimore are partial to Carroll county wheat for their flour, as every year the amount of the order has been increased.

Next week Hebrew Rabbis of Baltimore and their watcher will visit the mill and purify it, going through the ceremony peculiar to their religion. One man, satisfactory to the Rabbis, will be in constant attendance and stamp and mark every barrel of the flour as it is produced, and keep close watch over it until it is loaded in the cars, which will be carefully locked and it will be unloaded in Baltimore by trusted employees.

The parade was interrupted for a time by a pause at the residence of Mayor O. D. Gilbert, where an elegant luncheon was served. The knights, in their magnificent uniforms, made a splendid appearance and attracted universal attention. The parade disbanded at the Westminster, where, during the evening, a banquet was served in the inviting style for which that widely known hostelry is celebrated and for which the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Crout, were warmly complimented by their guests. The visitors left for Baltimore at 10 o'clock. R. Lee Gill is Eminent Commander, and Harry O. Perry Captain-general of the Commandery. Paul Reese at Rio de Janeiro.

Letters have been received from Paul Reese announcing his arrival at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and giving an account of the long voyage of 58 days in the barkentine "Good News," and, also, his first impression of Rio. In a letter dated Oct. 28, and received here Nov. 21, he writes: "I have already seen the best of what is worth seeing here, the National Museum, which was Dom Pedro's palace during the Empire, the Market, the Cathedral, the Botanical Gardens, and have tried the two mountains, Corcovada and Tejuca, the former of which I ascended. Last Sunday—Oct. 22—I spent as guest on a coffee plantation belonging to a friend of the captain of our ship, and to boil the whole thing down, I can say that, up to date, I have by all odds had the time of my life. This beats Europe in my estimation. Europe is too civilized to be interesting to one who has seen South America. They are almost as civilized in Europe as we are in the United States. Rio is quite unlike any European town I ever saw—, at least, no city I ever visited in Europe was half as dirty, nor could all the elevated trains in New York, running on one street, make as much noise as goes on here during 24 hours of the day, from a combination of church bells, brass bands, cannon, steam whistles and fire works. And the people are so noisy, voices are so loud that two men talking on a corner can be heard in the next street, but it is only natural, I suppose, that people who live in such a continual clatter and bang should become accustomed to shout at each other when they talk. To my ears, habituated to so long a silence at sea, the racket was rather annoying at first. The shipchandler's store seems to be headquarters for all the skippers in port, and the yarns one hears there are wonders. Speaking of stores, what do you think of good butter at a dollar a pound, that not so good at 75 and 80 cents a pound, and such as only natives can eat at 65. Eggs are rarely below 35 cents a dozen. I have gone marketing with our captain once or twice and that is how I come to know of these things. A seeker after new sights and sounds could not come to a better place than Rio. The only fault I have to find is the disappointment bound to be encountered when, after having seen the city at a distance, one comes to see it at a close range. The evening we anchored, it was just about sunset and at the distance of a mile and a half from shore. Were you to see a picture of the city just as I saw it then, with its pink, blue, yellow and green houses with red tiled roofs; the avenues of tall palms showing over them in all directions, and back of all the huge mountains with their peaks in the clouds, you would say that the artist had certainly let his imagination run away with him. Beyond all question the harbor of Rio de Janeiro is the most beautiful in the world."

Good Shooting.

Mr. Edward Barnes, the crack shot of Gamber, visited his uncle, Mr. W. F. Barnes, of Porter's, on a hunting tour from Thursday till Saturday last, during which time he had the good fortune to bag twenty-three rabbits, eighteen partridges and one woodcock. For the bagging of the birds Ed. is very largely indebted to the wonderful intelligence of his famous English pointer jip, "Belle," and for the rabbits to "Fritz," a small fox terrier, belonging to his uncle. Mr. Barnes is quite an enthusiastic sportsman and an unerring shot. He missed but two chances during his two days sport, and was compelled to hire conveyance for himself and game to Gamber.

The revival service going on at Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, which were noticed in the SENTINEL of last Friday, still progresses with much spiritual interest and enthusiasm. On Sunday morning last there was an unusual scene in the church. The pastor of the church, Rev. Milton Thomas, delivered an eloquent and powerful sermon. His text was "and there are six steps to the throne," 2nd Chronicles, ch. 9, v. 18. He spoke of the character of each step the first of which was "consideration," second "conviction," third "repentance," fourth "faith that saves the soul," fifth "justification," sixth "sanctification." He said that without the attainment of each step it would be an impossibility for the soul to get to the throne of God. Seven ladies and five gentlemen approached the altar and united with the church on probation. Among the number was Captain H. Clay Eby formerly a passenger conductor on the Western Maryland Railroad now residing near Wesley Church. The revival still goes on.

Mr. John Koons, of Baltimore, mail clerk between Baltimore and Pittsburg, and his two children, from Winchester, Va., who had been on a visit to Mr. Koons' father and mother, at Carrollton Station, returned to their homes on Monday last.
