Pushing Western Maryland Extension.

Prospects are bright for the connection of the rails on the Cumberland extension of the Western Maryland Railroad early next month. The line will be opened for freight traffic just as soon as the roadbed settles sufficiently to permit running heavy engines and cars over it. Passenger service will begin in the early summer.

Mr. F. S. Landstreet, vice-president of the Western Maryland Railroad, that it had been hoped to connect the rails on the Cumberland extension earlier in the year.

Mr. F. S. Landstreet, vice-president of the Western Maryland Railroad, says that it had been hoped to connect the rails on the Cumberland extension earlier in the year.

"The sticking point," he said, "is Kessler tunnel, located 35 miles west of Big Pool, the junction with the main line, and 25 miles east of Cumberland. Track has been laid from each end of the extension to the approaches to either end of the tunnel, making a gap of about 4500 feet. This should be closed early next month.

To Move Freight Early In Spring.

"We are ballasting the track as rapidly as possible, and hope to move freight early in the spring.

"Work trains are now run to either end of the Kessler tunnel, and they will go through it just as soon as the rails are connected. The tunnel will be lined with timber. The other tunnels are finished. With the exception of the bridge over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Baird, all the bridges have been completed, and it is expected that this bridge will be completed in a short time."

Mr. Landstreet said that work on the improvements on the main line was progressing satisfactorily. The chief work of this character now under way is the revision between Williamsport and Big Pool. This stretch is being brought up to the standard of the Cumberland extension, so that the same tonnage may be hauled over it as can be hauled over the extension. The filling of the old wooden trestles is being done rapidly, and although the entire revision will not be completed until the early summer, it should be possible to run heavy power over this stretch when the Cumberland extension is opened. The line will then be in shape to run heavy power and trains from the mines to the head-waters of the Potomac to Hagerstown and thence to Highfield.

At Work On Bridges.

"East of Highfield," continued Mr. Landstreet, "we are renewing some of the old bridges and strengthening others. Some small bridges are being replaced by culverts and fills. We are also pushing the laying of the 90-pound rail, which was delivered late last fall. When all this shall have been completed, we will be able to run our heavy power from the mines on the West Virginia division to Port Covington, thus materially increasing the capacity of our line."

Sunflower Seed.

A correspondent of Farm and Fireside writes as follows: "I have often fed sunflower seed quite regularly to poultry, swine, calves, cows and horses and apparently with most excellent results. A table of the composition of foodstuffs issued by the Department of Agriculture gives the following as the composition of corn and sunflower seed, respectively:

"Corn Average—10.5 per cent. protein, 69.6 per cent. nitrogen-free extract; 5.4 per cent. of fat.

"Sunflower Seed—16.3 per cent. protein, 21.4 per cent. nitrogen-free extract, 21.2 per cent. fat.

"Now as the value of the fat for producing heat is nearly two and one-half times that of carbohydrates, we find in sunflower seed 16.3 per cent. of protein against 10.5 per cent. in corn, and the equal of 74 per cent. of carbohydrates or nitrogen-free extract as against 83 per cent. in corn. The protein or blood and muscle forming element is by far the most valuable and most expensive of the different nutrients. For this reason sunflower seeds must be considered the more valuable because better balanced ration of the two food materials. Sunflower seed, however, is quite light. The comparison is made for equal weights of it and corn. Neither of them, however, should be fed exclusively, whether to poultry, hogs or any other stock. But a small ration of the sunflower seed right along has always seemed to me to have a tendency to keep the animals in perfect health and in good productive condition."

Winter Sleep of the Animals.

In the strict definition of the word there are very few mammals in Maine which hibernate, becoming so lost in sleep as to be oblivious of what is going on around them, says the Bangor News. Our raccoons and skunks and bears crawl away to hiding places and seem to be torpid, though they awaken and become active as soon as their apartments are invaded by human foes.

Twice we have seen bears uncovered from under fallen trees during very cold weather in midwinter, and in both cases the animals were awake and on the defensive as soon as the choppers could get at them. Raccoons do not hibernate in the sense of becoming unconscious. They den up in hollow trees and logs, but let someone come along and strike forcibly above their secluded dens, and they are up dressed and ready to flee as quickly as a family is when the fire alarm is sounded at the front door. During nearly every winter thaw bears, skunks and raccoons come out and walk about on the snow, at times going miles away from their winter quarters.

Our greedy little friend, the chipmunk, is not believed to sleep any more hours in the winter than in the summer. It puts by a plentiful store of food and performs light housekeeping in its hole far below the frost. So far as anyone can learn, the chipmunk dwells alone in its underground den. The old notion that the father and mother chipmunk took their children into winter quarters and gave them lessons in stealing grain and gnawing holes in corn bins is a fabrication.

SOCIAL HABITS OF SKUNKS.

We have talked with scores of men who have been close observers of chipmunks for years, and as yet we have found none who ever saw two chipmunks dwelling in the same compartment. Skunks, however, are very social in their winter habits. One winter, when a barn in Waldo county burned down, the charred bodies of eight skunks were taken from the ashes and rubbish left from the blaze. Raccoons have small objections to receiving sleeping partners in hollow trees, though bears seem to be morose and solitary brutes, which have no liking for their kind.

But the woodchuck sleeps soundly enough to make up for all the wakeful and half-wakeful creatures. Boys who have stored tame woodchucks in barrels in the cellar to pass the winter have taken the torpid animals and carried them miles in their arms without breaking in upon their sleep. A fat woodchuck in early winter may be brought from its nest and placed by the side of a warm stove for half an hour without making any apparent change in its conduct.

But when a slumbering woodchuck is warmed and rubbed until it is fully awake it is about the most disagreeable beast living. Though it has been as tame as a pet kitten when put away, it will 'snicker' and gnash its teeth and show many signs of displeasure if aroused from its long sleep before it has burned up its surplus fat by respiration.

It requires long hunting and much patience to find a slumbering bat in mid-winter. The animals are so small that they can hide in most any crevice, and their color is so subdued that unless one is looking for them he can never find them. The general impression is that bats hibernate from October until April, as no one sees them flying about during the cold months.

Years ago we found a seemingly torpid bat concealed among a wad of hay in the mortice of a beam in a hay barn. The season was winter, for we remember there was snow on the ground. It was cold weather, too, for we took off a thick woolen mitten as a cage for holding the bat until we carried it to the house and installed it as a pet. The reason why we never tamed and studied the habits of that particular bat was because the pestiferous little creature bit us sharply in the thumb as soon as we touched its body, and before we were over our great surprise at this impertinent act the bat had fled from sight. It may be that bats assume a sleep that leads to unconsciousness in winter, though the one we met assumed nothing.

HABITS OF REPTILES.

Nearly all reptiles—including frogs, toads, snakes and turtles—bury themselves below frost in winter and remain sluggish and at times torpid until spring. If a frog is dug up from the mud and placed in a spring it will swim away, though slowly at first.

The little newts or salamanders and the lizards, we are unable to say concerning their habits. They are reptiles, though the specimens found here at the North are small enough to be classed as insects. We have dug both salamanders and lizards from springs in winter and have found them in full possession of their faculties. We have left newts out of doors in water in a tin pail over night and have had them freeze as solid as ice, though when they thawed out they did not show any ill effects from frost bites.

Frogs and toads can stand freezing and thawing a few times, though the experience seems to be 'wearing,' as most of them succumb after repeated trials. Just how snakes pass the winter we do not know. Two or three specimens of the common striped snake which we have dug from stone heaps in the winter appeared to be frozen and stiff, though a natural repugnance to the reptiles prevented close observation.

Most insects can undergo freezing and thawing with impunity. Insects which breath air and dwell on land cannot survive freezing in water, though dry cold does not impair their health.

Memory of Turtles.

During the summer months from May to August the big sea turtles lay their eggs on the beach. They come possibly hundreds of miles and if undisturbed will land within a few yards of the same place year after year. They crawl up the beach in the night and make their nests in the sand just above high water mark. I have watched them from behind a sandhill but a few feet away.

They dig the hole with their hind flippers, and, after covering it over, first filling it with eggs, they will go a few feet and make another place, I always thought as a blind, for one looks just like the other. They lay each month, usually during the high tides of that month, beginning in May and ending in August, from 90 to 185 eggs.

During the summer I found and brought into camp 2,755 eggs. I put some in the sand near our camp, and in twenty-seven days the top eggs hatched, the rest in three days more. The little turtles would dig out, raise their little heads and sniff the air a moment, then start for the river, 100 yards away. It was always a mystery to me how a turtle could find the same place on the shore when a short distance out at sea it all looks alike, just sandy ridges, with scrub palmetto and coarse grass.—Forest and Stream.

For the Boys.

Boys, be industrious. The world wants earnest workers. God never intended for any one to be idle. The more work you do the sweeter will be your sleep and brighter and happier your holidays. Take off your coat and make a dust in the world. But we would not repress your buoyant spirits or shut you out from all that is glad and happy in this beautiful world. We would like to pass an ordinance for our neighborhood to have a large playground, where the boys could meet, at least once a week, and enjoy a holiday. We would have it just as pleasant as it could be made, shaded by lovely trees, plenty of soft grass to tumble on and singing birds overhead. This will be so much nicer for our boys than loitering on street corners. We would have the old-fashioned games our grandfathers played and all modern improvements for developing the muscles. But, listen boys, we would not have any pastime you would blush for your parents or sisters to witness, such as scorch and wither every high and noble aspiration, degrade the soul and prepare the way for many of the sins that now corrupt society. We would not have that lovely spot desecrated by an oath.

She—The only time that I can remember of you ever telling me the truth was during your proposal, when you said that you were unworthy of me.

He—Madam, to day you will look upon my face for the last time.

She—What, you would not kill yourself!

He—No, I'm going to raise a beard.

Captain—"All is lost. We cannot save the ship."

Moses—"Do you hear vat he say? Ikey, the ship is going to sink."

Ikey—"Vell, let it sink; it don't belong to us."

After marriage—She—You claim that you love me!

He—And so I do, darling.

She—Would you die for me?

He—Well, hardly! You see, mine is undying love.

"Your money or your life!" the footpad growled.

"Take me life," responded the Irishman. "I'm savin' me money for me old age."

Barber—How do you want the little fellow's hair cut, Mr. Balder?

Johnny Balder—I want mine cut like papa's, with a hole on top.

A FACT ABOUT THE "BLUES"

What is known as the "Blues" is seldom occasioned by actual existing external conditions, but in the great majority of cases by a disordered LIVER.

THIS IS A FACT which may be demonstrated by trying a course of

Tutt's Pills

They control and regulate the LIVER. They bring hope and bouyancy to the mind. They bring health and elasticity to the body.

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.

New York's Annual Drink Bill.

The annual liquor bill of New York city is $365,000,000, or $1,000,000 per day. This is more than the income from the tariff. Four times the annual gold output.

Six times the yearly silver product.

One-third the value of all coal mines in a year.

In some sections of New York there is one saloon to every 30 families.

The money spent there in ten years for liquor would buy every working man a home in the suburbs.

New York's annual drink bill would buy:

73,000,000 barrels of flour.

730,000 wagon loads of wheat.

It would take 50 persons a year to count the money in $1 notes.

The money would cover 10,000 acres of ground.

Varying Weight of the Body.

A physician points out that several fallacies are common with regard to the weight of the human body. The man who congratulates himself on his gain of several pounds in weight in a given period may have no cause for rejoicing, for he may be under a delusion. Very few persons, says the investigator, have any correct idea of their own weight. As a matter of fact, the weight of the body is continually changing owing to innumerable influences. On a warm day after breakfast, a man will lose more than a third of a pound per hour. Seventy per cent. of the body contains water, and its weight varies constantly. The inference to be drawn from the loss or gain of a pound or two may be mistrusted. Fluctuation of a few ounces are a sign that the body is in a healthy state.

Didn't Want His Feet Tickled.

At the divorce trial of Albin Ritterhoff, against his wife, in New York City, she testified that the trouble began one morning just before Christmas in 1897, when she, in a playful mood, tickled his feet with a feather as he lay in bed. Then the wife declares Ritterhoff began to abuse her and to irritate her in innumerable small ways, such as blowing cigarette smoke in her face, walking too fast for her and speeding when they were riding their bicycles so fast that she could not keep up. And worse, she alleged, on one occasion he even overturned the mattress of the bed on her, trying to smother her.

Pearls Of Thought.

The man who is ever on the make never makes a man.

It's the small joys we give that make our great joys.

A coat of arms will be a poor protection in the judgment.

The poorest kind of a man is the one who is made of money.

This is only a good world when we know that it is God's world.

Never have anything to do with the hopeless except to do all in your power to help them to be hopeful again.

A reputation once broken may possibly be repaired, but the world will always keep its eye on the spot where the crack was.

She—What two things are helping mankind most to get up in this world.

Why Not Cure Your Cough or Cold?

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

MR. JOS. B. BOYLE:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but TEMPORARY RELIEF. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try YOUR Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost INSTANT RELIEF, but a PERMANENT CURE. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,

EDWARD LYNCH.
