WESTMINSTER, - MARYLAND.

W. L. W. Seabrook, - Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1906.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity" is a sentiment to which those who prefer Democratic to Republican rule in this country may readily subscribe. The experiences of the last fourteen years amply demonstrate that Democratic policies insure national adversity, while the policies of the Republican party have been marked by unexampled prosperity. Those who are yearning for a change should remember the quadrennium from 1892 to 1896.

A CIGARETTE BILL.

A bill introduced in the Maryland Senate by Dr. W. W. Goldsborough, Senator from Caroline county, to prohibit the manufacture, sale and giving away of cigarettes in this State, was passed by the Branch of the General Assembly in which it originated, on Monday last. The object of the measure is a commendable one and it is to be hoped that its stringent provisions may not lead to its evasion. As a rule extreme prohibitory legislation has not proved an efficient preventative of the abuses at which it has been aimed. That the cigarette habit is pernicious, especially in boys and youths, cannot be doubted. That any legislation calculated to prevent the acquisition of the habit by minors is commendable, if effective, must be conceded, and adults addicted to it should be willing to suffer its deprivation if, thereby, the young can be prevented from its indulgence. The full text of the bill has not come to our knowledge, but it is to be hoped it contains proper safeguards against the manufacture of cigarettes by individuals for their own use. Otherwise it will prove but a dead letter. Unless provided against the smoker can bring together the tobacco, drugged or otherwise, and the paper necessary to form the cigarette, and thus set the penalties of the law at defiance.

But whether a perfect preventative or not, the House should pass Dr. Goldsborough's bill and let it be thoroughly tested in operation. If defective upon actual trial it may be perfected hereafter, and a form of vice ruinous to children and youths effectually destroyed.

WORRYING THE RAILROADS.

The Legislature of Maryland is after the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad with a sharp stick and proposes to see to it that that corporation shall be forced to make good its obligations to the State.

Congress is taking, or proposes to take, a hand in regulating railroad business generally. Just what shape legislation to that end may take is uncertain. One of the objectionable railroad conditions is the large holding of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in the Baltimore and Ohio and other roads, by which it is enabled to nullify all healthy competition. It is said, however, that Congress will probably ignore that condition and may pass a general law prohibiting railroad companies from engaging in other business. It will be seen that such a measure is a powerful menace to such roads as the Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia and Reading, whose ownership of anthracite coal lands enables them to oppress the people by charging extravagant prices for fuel.

In reference to the relations sustained by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to the State of Maryland there is no doubt that these relations should be thoroughly investigated. It is said that the earnings of the Washington Branch, in which the State has large holdings, are being employed for the betterment of other lines of the company and that by this process the State is being defrauded of dividends which legitimately belong to her. And further, it is claimed that the company is evading the payment of a large amount of taxes due and owing to the State under a former agreement. Since the Legislature has begun to agitate the question the Washington Branch has declared a dividend of six per cent., the first in many years.

These proceedings in the State and National Legislatures may lead to the tax payers, and the people generally, realizing some benefit therefrom. But why such zeal is now being manifested in the matter by legislators may be a problem, and plain people may wonder why something was not done in the directions indicated before this. Can it be that the suspension of railroad passes to public officials has any bearing on the subject?

LINING UP AGAINST THE GORMANS.

In 1878 a compromise was made between the State and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, by legislative action, which was palpably disadvantageous to the former, and Major John I. Yellott, of Towson, who was then a member of the House of Delegates, alleges that the compromise was engineered from Washington by Senator Gorman. Now, Mr. Gorman, Jr., State Senator from Howard county, is endeavoring to take the lead in a movement to investigate the State's relations with the railroad company. Mr. Gorman is chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate, to which three resolutions, providing for such an investigation, were submitted—one by himself, another by Senator Perkins, Warfield Democrat, and the third by Senator Baker, Republican. Mr. Gorman's resolution provides for a report two years hence, and, whether open to the imputation or not, is regarded as a means of furthering the political interests of his father or himself. The committee, however, decided to report it favorably, which was done on Tuesday. Then Republican Senators and Senators favorable to Governor Warfield combined and adopted a motion to recommit it to the committee, with instructions to report all three of the resolutions named. This probably means that Senator Gorman's proposition will be voted down and one of the other, or something on the same order, adopted. It probably means, further, also, that the Warfield Democrats are preparing to line up against Mr. Gorman and are not averse to accepting support from the Republicans in the fight which seems to be on between the Democratic factions. The events of the past two years indicate that Governor Warfield is not in sympathy with the bosses who control his party, on important issues, and, while his friends are a minority of the party in the Legislature, is not willing to yield to the Gormans the prestige of measures to compel the railroad company to discharge its obligations to the State, and thus make political capital out of the movement, especially as the senior Gorman's influence compelled the compromise of 1878, which was so advantageous to the railroad.

The ostensible objection to the Gorman resolution is that it involves unnecessary delay in adjusting the State's affairs with the railroad company, and this is probably a valid assumption; but it is generally supposed that deferring action for two years would bring the question prominently before the people at a period when a successor to Mr. Gorman, Sr., in the U. S. Senate, is to be chosen. Being a popular issue it would tend to aid in the re-election of Mr. Gorman, or the choice of his son as his successor, it being reported that the former is in bad health and will not seek a re-election.

All this may be pure speculation, but that does not nullify the fact that there is, apparently, an irremediable conflict between the Democratic ring on one side and the Warfield following, which is lining up against the Gormans, on the other.

Republican Senators and members of the House of Delegates should stand together for such a measure as will best promote the State's interest in the controversy. They should ignore the political issues involved and act squarely in favor of compelling the railroad to discharge its obligations, without regard to political consequences. Standing in with the friends of the Governor is apparently the best way to maintain the rights of the State and, thus far, the Republicans have acted with wisdom, prudence and justice in the case. They should maintain that attitude to the end.

Two years have elapsed since the great fire which ravaged the business section of Baltimore and laid low nearly all the buildings on an area of 155½ acres. Today about four-fifths of this area is covered with structures of a much better type than most of those which stood upon it antecedent to the fire, and it is estimated that the loss of $100,000,000 by the great disaster has been made good and an additional $100,000,000 gained in the value of property. Much of this gain has been through private enterprise. Improvements of a public character have been delayed through various causes but, when eventually made, will add largely to these figures. The city has just opened bids for the construction of the new docks. The delay of this work has been very vexatious, but was probably unavoidable as condemnation proceedings were necessary to the acquisition of property absolutely required to carry out the city's plans. When all these public improvements shall have been completed and the remaining private building sites occupied by structures in keeping therewith, Baltimore will be a city of which every Marylander will have just reason to be proud.

Countess Boni de Castellane, formerly Miss Anna Gould, daughter of the late Jay Gould, of New York, has entered a plea in a French Court at Paris, for a divorce, charging the Count with infidelity. It is generally understood that Count Castellane married for money, as so many European noblemen have done, and it is possible that on the part of his wife the title of Countess was the strongest incentive to the union. The proceedings for divorce are the natural outcome of these conditions. Miss Gould's millions were so guarded by the will of her father that her husband was unable to obtain control of them and she is still a very rich woman, although, out of her income, she has paid debts of the Count to the amount of $7,000,000. She is not seeking a separation from him because of his extravagance, however, but for what is known in this country as a statutory reason.

DIARY OF A VOYAGE TO BRAZIL.

BY PAUL REESE.

CONTINUED.

Wednesday, August 23.

The first mate has had a bad beginning for his voyage. He was tinkering with some of the gear attached to the jib boom when a "jumper stay" broke and striking him in the face inflicted an injury to his right eye that will, in all probability, give him much trouble for a long time to come even if it does not destroy the sight of it altogether. * * * Last evening about sunset we got what I imagine will be, in the natural course of events, our last look upon terra firma until again sighted more than a thousand miles south of the Equator. Today we have been drifting on a sea without a ripple like a sheet of glass. Perched on a "bid" on the quarter-deck sits our captain, a perfect blaze of glory, clad in pajamas of such colors that beside them a tropical sunset would look washed out and pale. He is busy with his hook and line after fish whose beauty and richness of color are almost his rivals. The ocean is fairly teeming with queer looking creatures swimming and floating about; creatures that one would never suppose were fish at all if he did not see them in the ocean. Some look like morning glories, others like orchids, and still others, unmistakably fish, are colored like birds of paradise with all the tints of the rainbow, changing from blue to violet, and from violet to purple, red, or yellow, like an opal. I found myself arousing from my lackadaisical state of mind and becoming really interested in watching them. The following conversation, evidently between the cook and the mess-boy has, also, made me feel much better. I overheard:

"Who's dat come aboard at Fernandina?"

"That's Mr. Reese."

"Who's he?"

"A passenger."

"Don't look like he'd be a passenger for long."

"Why not?"

"He'll be dead man by de time we gits half way dare."

"Aw, mebby he'll git all right. I never seen nobody buried at sea. Did you?"

And then they talked of other things.

Thursday, August 24th.

I have tried to break the ice with that boy before the mast and have signally failed. Perhaps I may succeed later during the voyage in gaining his confidence. * * * A sudden transportation from one century to another would doubtless cause the transported person to feel dazed, for a while at least, until he had gotten his bearings. The calendar hanging in the captain's room says August 24, 1905, plainly enough, yet what I have seen today and what I am told occurred last night seems to indicate a state of affairs belonging to some past age and which I never dreamed had an existence at the present day outside the yellow back of some trashy novel or off the boards of the cheap melodramatic stage. Although the first mate, with his villainous face tied up in a dirty bandage, is so evidently the reincarnation of Captains Kidd, Morgan, England, or some other old buccaneer, I nevertheless supposed that a life spent to middle age at the present day would have somewhat modified his manner of dealing with a crew. But clearly this is not the case. * * * The sea has been running high since noon, and, if I pull through tonight without seasickness, I hope to feel myself immune. (No rhyme intended.)

Saturday, August 26th.

One's first experience of a storm at sea aboard of a sailing vessel is, beyond doubt, provided one has not been a soldier in active service, an episode in his life that contains more double-distilled, concentrated, hair-raising excitement than his whole previous life could furnish if summed up in a lump. I am told that the cyclone-tornado-hurricane combination we encountered before day this morning was "a good sailing breeze." Great Scott! What on earth would they call a gale of wind or a storm? Is it necessary to have the deck-houses smashed to kindling wood, every stitch of canvas carried away, a mast or two torn out by the roots and the boats and half the crew washed overboard, before you can call a storm a storm? The royal sheet and gallant sail carried away, and when it got light enough to see I noticed other damage aloft also. But I must not forget myself again and make such a glaring display of my ignorance as to call a little zephyr like this a storm. Common report has it, and statistics seem to bear it out, that there are comparatively few safer places in the world, at any time, than the deck of a ship, but I had to grit my teeth and do some hard thinking this morning to remember so comforting a fact.

The mess-boy is awfully seasick and this explains why he is called mess-boy. I never knew before why he was so called. Perhaps the whole breed is subject to this ailment. Our specimen is at present about as messy as the messiest mess-boy that ever served a mess—or made one. "Topsy," the captain's little fox-terrier, is not feeling up to the scratch either. She paid me a visit a little while ago and on saying good bye was kind enough to leave me her dinner. Spite of the fact that she is a lady, and one of high degree at that, I gave her some sound advice with the aid of my slipper not to be so generous next time.

Sunday, August 27th.

The wind has risen to a gale again this afternoon and is driving us farther and farther off our course. I never saw the sea look uglier, but then my experience has not been of the widest. * * * I had the surprise of my life this morning in seeing the strict way Sunday is kept by the sailors. And, I may add, it was really the first time I had seen some of their faces, for this morning they were washed.

Tuesday, August 29th.

Mr. C—— is spoiling my trip. I have been obliged to endure some more of his efforts to be agreeable to me. I am certain he is not much fonder of me than I of him. Does he consider it his duty to entertain me? I shall certainly enlighten him in some way. I will not permit him to spoil my voyage any longer in this manner. Besides, his idea of being agreeable seems to be spinning yarns of battle, murder and sudden death, shipwrecks, mutinies, and starvation on desert islands, until my nerves are in a condition bordering on insanity.

Wednesday, August 30th.

To become a properly qualified sailor, one must cultivate and acquire, if he has it not by nature, (and unless he is an ostrich, a goat or a shark, this is apt to be the case) a taste for two dishes I have met for the first time today. One is salt-beef, alias karny, alias salt-horse, alias old critter, alias salt-junk. Although taking the hair with the hide does quite well when used metaphorically as food for thought, I find it by no means so satisfactory when taken physically as food for the body. Yet by drowning it in vinegar, mustard and pepper, I am able to eat it without showing too plainly what I think while doing so. The other dish is a stew, alias slumgullion, alias lobscouse, alias potato scouse. This concoction is so fearfully and wonderfully made that were I a scientist I should certainly preserve a specimen for chemical analysis and see what it contained besides frayed rope ends, glue, bone shavings, tar, oyster shells, feathers, a granular adamantine substance that would make an excellent base for concrete, sand, salt water, curry and potatoes. These are its known elements, but my curiosity is still unsatisfied. I hate to give it up before I know what gives it its strong resemblance to dark-green, stagnant water. I cannot credit our cook with the invention of this dish; it would be too evidently robbing the devil of his dues.

CATARRH IS DANGEROUS.

Winter is the season in which Catarrh gets in its fatal work. Better attend to it now. If you delay consumption will follow. Dr. Bloser's Famous Catarrh Cure will not only relieve you, but it will cure you, if given a fair trial. I do not claim that one month's treatment will effect a permanent cure, for where the disease is deeply rooted it may require two, or even three months' treatment, but even so, it is a cheap remedy when compared with other so-called cures. It is especially recommended for Nasal Catarrh, Catarrh of the head, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Deafness, Asthma, Headache, Colds, etc. One month's treatment, in either pipe or cigarette form, by mail, postpaid, $1.00. Address all orders, till March 25, 1906, to, W. T. JARBOE, Winfield, Md.

TO FARMERS AND BREEDERS.

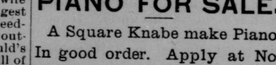

The Hambletonian Stallion, Maplewood Norval, will make the season of 1906, beginning Monday, April 2nd, as follows:

Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday of each week, at the Montour House Stables, Westminster. Wednesday of each week at the Franklin House Stables, Manchester; Thursday of each week at Stick's Hotel Stables, in Hampstead, and continuing until June 30th, or further notice.

We do not think there is any better breed of horses for general purposes, hardiness and gentleness, than the Hambletonians. Breed to a standard bred horse, thereby improving the standard of your colts and especially the fillies for breeding purposes. Book your mares early as the horse will not be allowed to serve as many mares as last season. This horse will be at the Montour House Stables, in Westminster, during the entire month of March, and will be ready for service for any one desiring to breed early.

For further particulars see large bills later.

CLAUDE TILDEN SMITH,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,
WESTMINSTER, Md.
Office No. 7 Court Street. 12 tf

E. OLIVER GRIMES, JR., Solicitor.

NO. 4267 EQUITY.

In the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting as a Court of Equity.

Hattie Hopkins and Kenton Hopkins, her husband, and Annie Penn, Plaintiffs, vs. Grafton Penn and Sarah Penn, his wife, Gertrude Penn Presco and Steven Presco, her husband, and Charlotte Penn, widow of Francis Penn, late of Carroll County, Maryland, intestate, deceased, Defendants.

The object of this Bill is to obtain a Decree for the sale of certain Real Estate situate in the City of Westminster, in Carroll county and State of Maryland, of which a certain Francis Penn died seized and possessed.

The Bill states:

First.—That Francis Penn, late of the City of Westminster, in Carroll county and the State of Maryland, deceased, was, in his lifetime, and at the time of his death, seized and possessed, in fee simple absolutely, of a certain piece or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in the City of Westminster, in Carroll county in the State of Maryland, aforesaid, containing one-eighth of an acre of land, more or less, the title to which the said Francis Penn acquired by deed from a certain Ira E. Crouse and wife, dated March the 25th, A. D. 1870, and recorded among the Land Records of Carroll county in Liber J. B. B. No. 38, folio 169 &c.; a duly certified copy of said deed is therewith filed as part thereof and marked Exhibit "I. E. C."

Second.—That the said Francis Penn, being so seized, departed this life some time in the month of ——— in the year ——— intestate and left surviving him Charlotte Penn, his widow, and the following sons and daughters as the only heirs-at-law, all of whom are adults above the age of twenty-one years, namely: Hattie Hopkins, a daughter, who intermarried with Kenton Hopkins, both of whom reside in the City of York, county of York and State of Pennsylvania; Annie Penn, a daughter, who is unmarried and who resides in the City of York aforesaid; Grafton Penn, a son, who intermarried with Sarah Penn, both of whom reside in the City of Pittsburgh, county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania; Gertrude Penn Presco, a daughter, who resides in the State of New York and who intermarried with Steven Presco, who resides in the City of Philadelphia and State of Pennsylvania.

Third.—That said Real Estate descended unto and vested in the said Hattie Hopkins, Annie Penn, Grafton Penn and Gertrude Penn Presco, as the only heirs-at-law of the said Francis Penn, intestate, deceased, subject however to the right of dower therein of the said Charlotte Penn, the surviving widow of the said Francis Penn, deceased.

Fourth.—That the said Real Estate is not susceptible of partition and cannot be divided without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interest therein, and that in order to make a division of said interests it will be necessary that said Real Estate be sold, and the proceeds thereof divided amongst the parties interested according to their respective interests.

The Bill then prays:

(1) That a Decree may be passed for the sale of said Real Estate.

(2) That a distribution of the proceeds of the sale thereof be made amongst the parties entitled thereto.

(3) For general relief.

For an Order of Publication against Charlotte Penn, widow of the said Francis Penn, deceased, who is a resident of the City of York in the State of Pennsylvania, the said Grafton Penn and Sarah Penn, his wife, both residents of the City of Pittsburg in the State of Pennsylvania, the said Gertrude Penn Presco, a resident of the State of New York and Steven Presco, her husband, a resident of the City of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, all of whom are adults and non-residents of this State, giving them notice of the objects and substance of this Bill and commanding them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before a certain day, to be named therein, to show cause, if any they have, why a Decree ought not to pass as prayed.

It is thereupon, this 9th day of February, A. D. 1906, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll county, sitting as a Court of Equity, that the Plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Carroll County, Maryland, once a week in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of March next, give notice to the said absent defendants of the objects and substance of this Bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 28th day of March, next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

WM. H. THOMAS,
Associate Judge.
