and there was nothing to cry about, you open the tear gates. But, there, this won't do. I am forgetting my horse.'

'But you musn't go back there, she cried.'

'Musn't? O, yes, I must. You wouldn't have me desert an old comrade like that. I'll have him. Trust me. Look at the poor fellow ahead there. See how quiet he stands. He knows I'm coming to help him.' He turned to the girl. 'Here,' he cried. 'I'll tell you what you can do. You can run up the path there and see if anybody is in sight. Signal the first man you see to come here at once. I need help. The girl hurried up the steep pathway and cast a swift glance around her when she reached the high ground. There were three men working in a field not far away. She unwound her scarf and waved it, and called to them. When they saw her they came running, and when she explained to them they brought their spades and set to work with a will.

But it was the driver who directed them, it was the driver who held the advance post of danger, it was the driver who cheered them on, it was the grimy driver who made the dirt fly the faster.

And presently it was the driver who, with infinite care and gentleness, drew the wagon back, and then turned the horse and led him to safety.

When they were ready to resume their journey back to the forks and then up the other road to Meredith's, the driver looked at her with a funny smile.

'Perhaps it would simplify matters a little,' he said, 'to explain that I have been taking a somewhat questionable advantage of you.

'Yes,' she said, as she looked across at the distant hills.

'I make you my most profound excuses. You will pardon, me won't you. You see I'm rather anxious to have your good opinion.'

'What have you done?'

'Well, you see, the fact is I am George Meredith.'

She flushed prettily.

'I guessed it sometime ago,' she said.

PICNIC LUNCHEONS.

There are so many toothsome dainties that can be prepared for picnic luncheons without much trouble that picnics need not be looked upon by housekeepers as more drudgery than pleasure. There are numerous articles that can be bought for very small sums that will add much to the lunch and yet not be extravagant.

There is scarcely anything nowadays in fruit, fish, fowl, or vegetable that cannot be made in sandwiches which are the most essential in the lunch. Pressed chicken or minced ham with mayonnaise dressing make the most appetizing sandwiches. Peanut butter, neuchatel or cream cheese bought for a few cents a tinsel package, chopped raisins and nuts, lettice leaves, chopped egg with mayonnaise dressing, and celery all make excellent filling for sandwiches. One can use any kind of bread, white, brown, whole-wheat, graham or rye, or some prefer crackers, especially with the cheese or peanut butter filling. The large milk crackers are nice for that purpose, or the saltines. 'If one is making bread especially for a picnic it is an excellent plan to bake it in half-pound baking-powder boxes which turn out the neatest slices imaginable. Butter each can very carefully and fill half full of dough. Allow it to raise to within two inches of the top, butter the inside of the lid and put it on. Do not allow them to bake more than half an hour or they will be too crusty.'

Sweet biscuit and cinnamon buns are excellent for satisfying the hunger. Be sure to wrap the bread sandwiches in dampened napkins to keep them fresh. Deviled eggs are always appetizing. To prepare them, boil as many eggs as necessary ten minutes or more. Put them immediately into cold water until cool. Take off the shells and cut either lengthwise or crosswise. Mast the yolks and season with pepper, salt, mustard, and moisten with a few spoonsful of vinegar and cream. Replace in the whites and put the halves together by means of toothpicks. Some people tie them with narrow ribbon.

If salads are to be taken, do not mix the dressing with meat or vegetables until ready to use.

Above all things do not forget pickles of some kind, either sweet or sour cucumber pickles or olives, chili sauce or mustard pickles.

In carrying cakes it is wise to take plain ones. However, if frosted ones are preferred, be careful to have the filling a little stiffer than ordinarily. An easy way to carry a cake and keep it well is to put it in a box. If one cannot be found the right size, take a large cover and cut it in two, using one piece for the top and the other for the bottom.

Almost any kind of fruit is acceptable at picnics—bananas, oranges, berries, melons or jellies.

Last, but not by any means unimportant, comes the beverages. Some prefer cold tea or coffee or milk, while others prefer lemonade or orangeade, grape juice or raspberry or blackberry shrub. For those who have small alcohol lamps hot tea or coffee are easily prepared.

A box of fudge is also a welcome guest at a picnic and also a box of salted peanuts to aid in digestion—Mrs. C. W. English.

THE BIRDS IN JUNE.

June is the month in which the birds are so full of housekeeping cares that they hardly have time to draw a long breath, much less to sing. After a delightful springtime, in which the sober, modestly dressed little ladybird was ardently wooed and won by her gaily bedecked lover, the happy pair settled down to the serious cares of life. No longer could Mr. Bird spend his time in flaunting his beauty, and no more could Miss Ladybird flirt with half a dozen admirers. In May the mated pair had about as much as they could do in house-hunting and preparing and furnishing their little home. Very few birds care to 'rent' houses—they usually build their own residences—and as for 'furnished apartments,' only one or two individuals are so unfashionable as to use second-hand nests, and they are not well received in Birddom, in consequence.

There is a great deal to be considered in building a bird's nest. First, the location must be such as to make it as inaccessible as possible to such enemies as cats, hawks and schoolboys. Now, it is hard to choose a place high enough to escape a boy and yet have it low enough not to be seen by a hawk. It must be put, perhaps, on a limb which is too weak to hold a cat or a 'possum, but yet not on one so frail that it would break in a heavy wind. Then it must be placed convenient to the source of building supplies. Of course, anyone can see that is a very important consideration, when everything has to be carried in one's mouth. But this is not all; the most important thing is yet to be considered, and that is to get the future home near 'the market.' The building materials can be better carried a long distance than the innumerable breakfasts and dinners and lunches for which the wee baby birds will soon be clamoring.

Altogether, May is a busy, trying month for a newly wedded bird couple. Then comes June, 'balmy June.' Nest-building was completed in May and the dear, beautiful eggs were laid; the tired little mother was glad to seat herself on the nest for the long repose of incubation, while the husband-bird sang and rested and fed his lady throughout the hatching period. But, oh, the joy in the little home, when, on a bright June morning, Mrs. Bird, all aflutter with excitement, communicates to her happy mate the news that an egg is chipped, and a nestling ready to come out. By the next morning it is fully hatched, and a brother or sister expected; and so it goes till all have arrived. Now must Mr. and Mrs. Bird 'get busy.' So many little mouths to feed, so many, many calls for 'more, more, more,' is it any wonder that the parents have very little to say, and that June is about the least entertaining month in which to study bird songs and plumage? But if one is willing to be wary, to be patient and gentle, what lovely tales of mother love, or paternal devotion, will June provide. Suppose you go into some quiet orchard in the dreamy noontide, when all seems still, and only the drowsy murmur of the insect life is heard. Begin to kiss the back of your hand with as loud and drawn-out a 'smack' as you can, and see if at once there is not a response from some anxious bird. 'You see, the sound made in this way, greatly resembles the sound made by most young birds when they are in danger, and it would be a very hard-hearted bird who would not hurry to see who is hurt and what family is in trouble. It is funny, too, that the birds forget all their personal quarrels at such a time, and join in chasing an intruder away, if it is one of a size they can cope with. Many and many a time have I seen a crow (which bird is extremely fond of eating eggs and young birds) flying wildly across the sky, and chased by ever so many small birds, who would have no chance at all in a fight with an enemy as large as a crow was it not that a crow flies slowly and clumsily, as the swift, small bird seeks a position over its head, and there endeavors to pick out his eyes.—Frank Anandale, in McCall's Magazine.

What to Do with Strawberries.

From McCall's Magazine.

Strawberry Shortcake.—Make a layer cake like the following recipe and bake in three shallow tins: Take two cupfuls of powdered sugar and cream or beat it with half a cupful of butter. Beat three eggs very light and mix with it and stir in slowly one cup of milk. Sift two teaspoonfuls of baking-powder through three cupfulls of flour. One teaspoonful of vanilla. Very slightly crush or cut in two some strawberries and cover the top of one cake when cold, sprinkling with sugar; put on top another cake and some more berries, and then the last cake, and decorate the top with either icing or whipped cream and berries, in any fancy design desired. Serve with cream.

Jellied Strawberries.—Use as many cupfuls as you think you have persons to serve and in the bottom of each one put a few large berries and then fill the cups half full with lemon jelly, which can be made in this way: Soak half a box of gelatine in half a cupful of cold water until soft, then add one pint of boiling water, one cupful of lemon juice, a little more than one cupful of sugar and the well-beaten yolks of two eggs; strain this and pour on the berries and set the cups on ice. When ready to serve, invert each mold on an individual sauce plate, and pour around the base a little rich syrup made with strawberry juice and sugar.

Strawberry Fritters.—Beat one egg very light, and pour it into one cupful of sweet milk and add one tablespoonful of sugar. Into this dip slices of stale sponge cake cut into neat pieces. Fry in hot butter, arrange on a hot plate and heap each fritter with strawberries and sugar. Serve with cream, either plain or whipped, if preferred.

Strawberry Custard.—With the yolks of five eggs, one quart of milk, half a cup of sugar and half a teaspoonful of vanilla make a boiled custard. Beat up very stiffly the whites of the eggs. Take one pint of berries, crush and strain them and mix with them half a cupful of sugar and a little more if the fruit is very acid. Beat this gradually into the beaten whites of the eggs. Fill glass cups half full with the custard, heaping on top the strawberry whip. This makes a very delicate desert.

Strawberry Tapioca.—Into one pint of cold water soak one cupful of pearl tapioca for two hours or more. Then put it into a saucepan over the fire, adding one pint of water and sugar to taste. Cook about half an hour or until clear. Have ready one quart of stemmed and clean strawberries and pour over them the prepared tapioca and set away in a cool place or on ice. Serve with cream and powdered sugar.

Strawberry Sauce for Baked Pudding.—Cream together half a cupful of butter and one and one-half cupfuls of powdered sugar; then add the yolk of one egg and a cupful of crushed berries just at serving time.

Strawberry Ice-Cream.—Crush two quarts of strawberries and mix two cupfuls of sugar thoroughly through them, letting them stand half an hour or until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved; then put them into a large square of cheese-cloth, hold it over a bowl and squeeze as long as any juice or pulp will come through. Empty the seeds and pulp into a pan and pour on gradually about one pint of milk, stir it well through the pulp, then squeeze again through the cheese-cloth until you have only a ball of seeds left. Add to all this juice from one to three pints of cream, and sugar it until very sweet. Freeze as usual.

Strawberry Pie.—Make quite a rich pie crust and cover the plate with it (roll it out very thin). Make a little rim all around the top of the plate to hold in the juices, fill the center with bread crusts and bake in a quick oven; when done, remove the crusts and fill with strawberries which have been rolled in sugar. Beat the whites of three eggs very stiff, adding three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, spread this over the berries, return to the oven and leave it only long enough to brown slightly. Serve cold and with cream, if preferred.

Strawberries and Toast.—Cut some slices of stale bread very thin and toast them a light brown, butter quite thick, and line the bottom and sides of a pudding dish with them. Fill the dish with strawberries as full as it will hold and sift plenty of sugar through and over them. Set this in the oven for about half an hour. Serve very cold with rich cream.

Strawberry Jam.—Take equal weights of berries and sugar. Mash the berries well in a preserving kettle, heating slowly for half an hour; then add the sugar and boil twenty minutes, stirring frequently and skimming.

Strawberryade.—Crush to a smooth paste one quart of ripe berries, add the juice of one lemon and three pints of water. Let stand three hours, then strain the juice through a cloth over three-fourths of a pound of sugar, squeezing the cloth hard, and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Set on ice before serving.

How He Found the Vest.

Little David had always been regarded by his doting relatives as particularly clever. Still he rather out did himself when a rough looking tramp invaded the yard one afternoon and asked where his father kept his money.

'It's in his vest in the kitchen,' replied David.

A few minutes later the tramp came through the kitchen doorway in a hurry, much battered and torn.

'Smart kid, dat!' he muttered. 'Never said a word about de old man bein' inside de vest.'—Philadelphia Public Ledrer.

The Reason.

He (after marriage): 'I don't know why you are not as considerate of my comfort as you used to be of your father's.'

She: 'Why, my dear, I am.'

He: 'How do you make that out? When I come into the house I have to hunt around for my slippers and everything else I happen to want, but when I used to court you, and your father would come in from town, you would rush about gathering up his things, wheel his easy-chair up to the fire, warm his slippers, and get him both a head-rest and a foot-rest, so that all he had to do was to drop right down and be comfortable.'

She: 'Oh, that was only so he'd go to sleep sooner.'
