London 29th Sept.r 1790

My Dear Girls!

You see I address you both & shall expect you will take notice of me accordingly — My constant friend in Throgmorton St. has just informed me a ship is on the point of sailing — if it is a good opportunity, I shall ransack up some papers of Magazines for my Brother, I sent a parcell of the latter some time past — Thank your Mamma for her of the 4th July, I had written a short time before that — We are both very much better in our healths for being a great deal out of Town in the course of the Summer — We luckily have a few friends who either reside, or have houses for the summer season within a few miles distant be one good natured, & indulge them with our company a great deal when the weather is tempting — & Mr. Beverley finds great benifit from riding a horse back — Indeed I think the remains of his last severe plunge are
