to hear her dreams, Mary had it favorably and is quite well, her mother is a perfect Skeleton, I never saw a person look so ill as she does, Mrs R. also with fatigue of mind and body is quite an invalid, but I hope she will soon pay us a visit and rest her mind a little, I this instant was handed your very kind and affectionate letter you chaid me for my silence and not without cause, my foregoing apology will I hope Elucidate the ~~[illegible]~~, therefore I will say nothing more on the subject — sorry I am and sincerely do I sympathize with you for your Dr father's ill health, I cannot give up the idea of his being much benefited by a ride into this part of the country, I wish I had the power er of persuading him and could I by any thing I could say influence him to come should he sent him, you damp all my hopes in your last letter, (that I had cherished) of seeing all your good family in July.

Mr Vickerman told me you wd certainly visit us at that time, our carriage and horses is at your service when ever it can be made convenient by your father's health to put up at Auction what wd afford so much in--ex pressible pleasure to us all, Mr R. desires me to say for him, to Mr C that he will meet him at any place with carriage & horses to bring you on, Oh! that he could, once gather resolution I think it wd be of more service to him and his Dr family, than can be imagined God grant it may take place if fervent prayers on my part will avail, we shall soon see you — I am glad the Tell[illegible] family are again returned to you, and pleased to he[illegible] is recovered, I heard she was ill in Philad[illegible] pray offer best love and good wishes, in which Mary and [illegible] must share a part — tell your good Mother I long to see her and Fanny I very often think of you all & feel grateful for the many happy and cheerful moments you have all occasioned me to pass, when at your house, and at a time when I could hardly support myself — you speak of my dear children, I am obliged to Mrs G. for her praises of them, I am perfectly satisfied as most mothers are, that generally, they are surprizing children, but never had the vanity to suppose any body wd coincide with a fan--tical mother, Mania often talks of you, and can
