down to whisper into her husband's ear. The nurse touched her with one hand gently upon her shoulder before she turned to go.

'Fight,' said Frances. For many minutes, the time whirling by like the view from a car window, she repeated the word and then, a gift of God, came the sound of wheels, the far-off haste of a horse's gallop. At the window she could see a shaky old carry-all swaying along the white road, a man on the front seat, his arm about a blue cylinder as if it were a human companion. 'Fight,' she cried reaching back for her husband's pulse.

In a moment more she came into the nursery, slowly. The doctor and the nurse turned toward her and then dodged each other's eyes.

'The oxygen has come,' she said, as coolly as if it had been a tub of ice cream. 'It is down-stairs.' The doctor considered that he had never seen a more wonderfully beautiful woman in his whole life. 'And the baby—poor little Hi-boy—poor, little hungry, hungry boy!' She took him to her breast and sat down upon the couch. The doctor stepped suddenly into the sick room; the nurse, with her embroidery needle poised in the air, had not moved, looking and looking at the mother with the baby gurgling in the curve of her arm. As she watched she saw the color and the vitality withering like scorched blossoms.

'I've—I've—I have—' gasped Frances, and then slowly toppled over, the baby still comfortable in the curve of her arm.

'She wins!' cried the doctor from the door. 'Such a rally. Nine-tenths a dead man and such a rally! What ails you? We're at it again! We've got him now! Get that oxygen up here, nurse, you infernal dummy!'

'Fight!' gasped Frances, and then every muscle in her body loosened.

'Stop!' cried the physician to the nurse. 'Leave her alone. We can't fool with her now. Get that oxygen up here, I say!'

At Mercy of Hurricane.

From the Baltimore Sun.

C. C. Morton Stewart & Co.'s barkentine Good News, Captain Myrick, which arrived in port Saturday night disabled by the hurricane, was made fast at Belt's wharves yesterday. The vessel shows the effect of the hurricane that swept the southern coast beginning September 15, when the vessel caught it south of Hatteras.

On September 11, with a cargo of rosin from Fernandina, the Good News left for Rio Janeiro. On the evening of the 15th she was struck by the hurricane and reeled and sped before it until the following Monday morning. The wind came first from the northeast, before which the Good News scudded. Upon the wind changing to the southeast it drove the bark north and toward the Chesapeake. During the 48 hours she fought the gale the seas and wind were getting in their destructive work. Sails were split as if cut by knives, and the starboard rail, which is open to the deck, was carried away and blown into the air.

To make matters worse the seas broke loose 119 barrels of rosin on deck, which rolled back and forth, carrying away the rails and splintering the deck and waterways as if tools had been used to do the work.

The starboard side of the forecastle was ripped out and the galley and the forecastle, where the crew live, were made one apartment. Every article of clothing, except what the men had on fighting for their ship and lives, was swept over the side. Second Mate Jaggersen's room was swept, and with his effects his pet dog went overboard. This was the only fatal accident.

One lifeboat was crushed, and its skeleton remained as a reminder of what had been done to it by the seas. In addition to this fight for life the Good News shifted her cargo of rosin. She arrived off the Chesapeake with a list to starboard, had tarpaulins swept off hatches, smashed water casks and lost considerable provisions.

After the gale had passed and Captain Myrick and Mate Gayle could gather themselves together they witnessed the destruction to others by the hurricane. About them was wreckage, boxes, lumber and ships' fittings, and close by was seen a three-masted schooner which had almost turned over. The action of the waves brought her masts above water at times, which proved her type.

The Good News leaked after the tarpaulins were blown off. A survey will be held on the vessel. After repairs are made it is expected she will continue her trip from Fernandina to Rio Janeiro.

Up to Her.

'Yes,' said the stern woman; 'I am masculine in my dress and I am proud of it! You notice I wear a man's straw hat?'

'I see you do,' yawned the meek husband.

'And a mannish stock and shirt waist?'

'Yes.'

'Also a mannish shoe?'

'I'm.'

'And I can whistle as good as any man?'

The meek man yawned again.

'Well, Maria,' he said, slowly, 'if you are all that mannish, I guess you are the man of the house. So you can just pay the bills hereafter.

The man who has been roped in is apt to look upon his marriage certificate as a sort of noose paper.

CALL OF THE MOUNTAINS.

The mountains call in early fall,
Their glorious summons now I hear,
The partridge shrill calls from the hill.
I climb up to worship, love and fear.
Come, come away, while there's frost in the air;
Come to the mountains and leave all dull care.

To you, maybe, loud calls the sea,
But to me, in the fall of the year,
All else above, the call I love
Comes from the mountains strong and clear.
Come, come away, call the leaves red and yellow?
Come, while the chestnut burrs ripen and mellow!

The sun is bright and cool the night.
But the round harvest moon is calling,
Come out and see, Sweetheart, with me,
While the leaves are falling, falling:
Climb high up with me, drinking life from its well!
Mercy and truth, kindness and peace, here on my mountain tops dwell!

—Esther Jackson Wirgman.

Work of the Government Printing Office.

The expenses of the Government Printing Office which are appropriated for by Congress to the sum of about six millions of dollars a year would seem to a casual observer to be out of all proportion to the amount of information distributed through that centre, or of benefit derived from it by the people who pay the bills. Some of the items in the expense account of this biggest printing shop in the world are curious if not interesting. For instance the man who gets the Agricultural year book once a year and finds its principal benefit to be that it fills up his yawning book shelves will be surprised to know that in the construction of that five thousand dollars is spent for the ornamentation if it is in gold leaf that it may not shock the aesthetic taste of the farmer interested in cow peas or the future millionaire who may be wanting to follow Secretary Shaw's advice to 'put his money in hens.' Over four tons of glue and thirty barrels of flour made into a paste are required to make the bindings stick together and sixty thousand yards of cloth and five car loads of binding boards are consumed in making them. One ton of thread is used on the machines that sew the leaves together and 36,000 yards of tape are employed for the same purpose. Of course this publication is only one of dozens that issue in like form from the printing office each year and are converted into mental pabulum to nourish and enlighten the world. Of common book ink 40,000 pounds are used annually in the Government publications and as no printing office is complete without the 'printers towel' 200,000 of these accessories to the toilet are the yearly allowance. In the average newspaper office there is a tradition that the 'printers towel' is never removed until it falls and breaks, but in the Government shop $3,500 is the annual bill for laundering the towels. If any man fears that his Government document is not made under sanitary conditions his anxiety may be allayed by the information that twelve tons of soap are used every year by the printers and that four carloads of laundry soap are consumed in cleaning the buildings. The two items of coal and gas knock the spots out of $30,000 and three thousand barrels of saw dust are purchased every year in order that the spittoons may be kept in condition. A refrigerating plant in the building to cool all of the drinking water is one of the permanent features.

Aspic Jelly.

This is a favorite English condiment, and is used mostly for garnishing cold meat, though occasionally an invalid will relish a tiny cube of it. Soak two scant tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one gill of cold water. Boil for ten minutes one and a half pints of water with one-half an onion finely cut, half a bay leaf, two cloves and three whole peppers. Add half a cupful of strong stock (beef is best) or one-half teaspoonful of extract of beef, and the gelatin, and cook for five minutes. Then add the beaten white of an egg with the juice of half a lemon, stir and boil till the egg disappears. When cooled a little, strain through two thicknesses of fine cloth; add a bit of salt or vinegar to suit the taste, and put in a cool place to set. Aspic jelly is sometimes served as an entree in tomatoes having the skins removed and set on lettuce leaves.—Pilgrim.

'How is it, my dear,' inquired a school teacher of a little girl, 'that you do not understand this simple thing?'

'I do not know, indeed,' she answered, with a perplexed look; 'but I sometimes think I have so many things to learn that I have not time to understand.'

Pension Roll is Dwindling.

Notable Decrease During the Past Year.

Washington, September 30.—The net decrease in the pension roll of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30 last amounted to 12,470, the largest decrease ever known in the history of the country. These facts are brought out in the annual report of Commissioner of Pensions Warner, which has just been completed. In the report the Commissioner expresses the opinion that there will be a still more marked decrease during the present year.

During the year there were added to the roll 33,569 new pensioners and 1,405 restorations and renewals, making a total addition of 34,974. The total number of pensioners on the roll during the year was 1,033,415. The number of pensioners dropped from the roll during the year was 47,444, leaving the number of pensioners June 30, 1906, 985,971.

The maximum number of pensioners in the history of the bureau was reached January 31, 1905, when it was 1,004,196, since which date there has been a steady decrease, aggregating to June 30, 1906, 18,225.

Death was the principal cause of the decrease of the past year, the number of names dropped on that account being 43,300. Of these, 29,208 were those of survivors of the Civil War, leaving 666,453 survivors of that war still on the roll. There are still four pensioners on account of the Revolutionary War, one a widow and the other three daughters; 660, all widows on account of the war with Spain, and 11,472, on account of the Mexican War. Of the Mexican War pensions 3,984 are to survivors.

The Commissioner calls attention to the fact that while there has been a material decrease in the number of pensioners, the annual value of the roll is nearly as large as it was last year. This arises from the fact that the ratings of many invalid pensions are constantly increasing, the average increase last year being $1.22.

Pennsylvania has the largest number of pensioners, 98,829. Ohio follows with 98,564; New York has 89,240.

Over 5,000 pensions are paid to persons residing abroad. of these 3,657 are in Canada, 602 in Germany and 495 in Ireland, and the others are scattered in 64 other countries, including the Island of St. Helena, the Azores, Siam, Korea, etc.

During the year 23,628 claims were allowed, under order No. 78, allowing old age pensions.

Since the begenning of the Civil War there have been granted by special acts of Congress 17,215 pensions and increase of pensions, of which 10,417 are now on the rolls, with an annual value of $2,937,620.

During the last session of Congress 3,507 special acts were passed.

The report shows that in the entire history of the country the total expenditure on account of pensions has been $3,459,860,311 of which only $96,445,444 had been paid out prior to the beginning of the Civil War. Of the total $3,259,195,306 was on account of the Civil War. The total payment of pensions on account of the Spanish War reaches $15,438,355 up to date.

The disbursements for navy pensions during the year were $4,204,004, and the income from the navy pension fund available for the payment of pensions was $363,618, or less than 9 per cent. of the amount required for the payment of have pensions. Since 1870 this fund has been inaduquate to pay navy pensions and the deficiency has been provided for out of the public funds by congressional appropriation.

Jellied.

Peel and score trat, firm apples, and put over the fire with just enough water to cover and sufficient white sugar to sweeten. Cook s'owly on the back of the range until the apples are tender, but have not lost their shape; lift out with a split spoon and place in a crystal dish. Bring the liquid left from them to a boil (there should be about a pint and a half), and add to it a tablespoonful of gelatine that has been soaked in a very little cold water for half an hour; color pink with fruit juice coloring or that which comes with the gelatine; when cool and nearly ready to set, pour over the apples until they are covered, and set the dish on ice until very cold. Serve with a boarder of whipped cream.

Potato Custard Pie.

For one pie, press sufficient cooked potato through a ricer to make half a pint, adding half a cupful of sugar, a quarter of a cupful of butter, the grated rind and juice from half a lemon. Beat the yolks of three eggs very light, add half a cupful of sugar and stir smoothly into the other mixture, then add the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, and proceed as for custard pie.
