THE OLD CLOCK.

The old clock stands on the mantal high,
And tick, tack, tock, as the hours fly by,
Day after day we can here, tick, tack, tock,
That is the sound that comes from the old, old clock.
It has watched mother, father and family die,
But still you can hear, tick tick, tock, as the hours fly by.
Day after day it keeps its same sound,
While its owner is buried under grou d,
And is free from all care,
But the clock is still happy ou the mantal there.
And the clock stands on the mantal high,
And tick, tack, tocks as the hours fly by.

GETTING ON IN THE WORLD.

I want to have a word with young men. I am going to talk about work, for in my opinion that is the first word for young men who want to be or do something in life. And young men are full of aspiration. They are looking out into this great world of ours with eager eyes. They see noted names in the newspapers and ask questions. They read the story of success and their pulse quickens. The thrill of life is in a young man's blood. The successful example puts a spell upon him and he wants to know the secret.

But here is his first danger. The young man who is looking for the secret of success makes me think of the little holes which I saw in the sides of the mountains out at Cripple Creek. They were dug by men who were looking for gold, and did not find it. Don't go around digging for the secret of success. Go to work and keep working.

Some years ago I read a remark made by President Dwight which greatly impressed me. He said that the majority of men use only a small part of their powers. I had been a worker from my childhood, but I took the remark to heart. I felt that it could so easily be true, that the powers of a human spirit are so great that we hardly realize how much of it we are letting go to grass.

Another observation also keeps calling out to me—"We shall pass this way but once." We can't travel the road again, and the years glide away so quickly. And there comes that warning note from the Master Himself, "The night cometh when no man can work."

We must work. This is the law, and the law is more important than the secret; in fact, we know what the secret forces of nature are when we know their laws. My observation of men is that those who accomplish much are workers. When I talk with them I find that they are up early in the morning and get a good start.

It is perhaps unfortunate for young men that there is now so much agitation for shorter hours. I say this, not because I am opposed to an eight hour day, but because so much of this agitation conveys the impression that work is a bad thing, or a hardship, and that the less of it the better. Eight hours a day make only one-third of the time, and the man who works only one-third of his time will never have the whole of success. Work is not a bad thing. It is a good thing. Really and truly I think a man can get more fun out of work than out of anything else, certainly more satisfaction.

A young man should like work, and the way to cultivate a liking for work is to find what we are best fitted to do. A fish likes to swim and a bird likes to fly. They are in their element. A deer likes to run, it is built that way. I pity the young man who is not made for his job. When I was a boy and drove horses to a plough they were sometimes troubled with sore shoulders. We usually found that it was because the collars did not fit them. It is much the same way with a boy or young man when his job does not fit him. It chafes him, makes him feel sore. An older man gets hardened to it. But this does not mean that a young man is to indulge the fancy that some other young man's job would fit him better. It simply means that he is to know himself and what he has the most natural talent for. A man who has struck the calling for which he is best fitted seldom complains of overwork. A man who is in the wrong calling is always overworked. He is tired before he begins and he makes a lot of other people tired.—Ex.

Telling Age and Sex by Pulse.

"The female pulse always beats faster than the male," said a physician, and from birth to death the pulse speed steadily decreases. I have no doubt that by the pulse alone I could tell readily a healthy person's age and sex. Babes at birth have a pulse that beats 160 times a minute in the case of girls and 150 times in the case of boys. At the age of four or five the pulse beats will have fallen respectively to 110 and 100. Maidens' and youths' pulses average ninety-five and ninety; mature women's and men's average eighty and seventy-five; elderly women's and men's average sixty and fifty. An old woman's pulse rarely if ever sinks below fifty, but among old men a pulse under fifty is fairly common."

Uncle John who has a very prominent nose, was one day teasing his small nephew about the large size of his mouth, when little Ned said: "Say, Uncle John, if your nose and my mouth were both on one face there wouldn't be room for much else, would there?"

Madge—'Does the young clergyman she's engaged to sermonize much in his love-making?'

Majorie—'Well, when he kisses her good night she says he it firstly, secondly, thirdly, and so on.'

THE MOON.

From the Ohio State Journal.

One of the most beautiful, interesting and conspicuous objects in the world is the moon, and yet nine-tenths of the people know nothing about it. They do not know the distance to it, its size, its motions, its physical nature. They will pay a dollar to see the "blue moon" or some other such nonsense; but to see the real moon, that has the glory of God about it, they would scarcely turn their heads. Behold it, these fair October nights in its full beauty, high in the skies. It seems almost to speak to one, so mild and gentle it is, and so very near, and yet it is 240,000 miles away, but the nearest of all heavenly bodies, except now and then the big meteor that comes sailing through our air. It seems to be traveling west, and it is going east at the rate of more than half a mile in a second. And it is going with the earth around the sun four times faster than that.

Up there in the skies, it seems only a foot or two in diameter, but it is 2,160 miles. It would take nearly five areas the size of the United States to cover its surface. It is dry as a cinder, which it, probably, is—no air, no water, and it is colder than ice all the time, and on the side turned from the sun it is 300 degrees below zero. Gravity at the moon is one-sixth less than it is at the surface of the earth. Therefore if a man weighing 150 on the earth would go to the moon he would only weigh 25 pounds there, and, if he would keep up his strength, he could jump 40 feet on the moon where he could jump only six feet on the earth.

Advice to the Aged.

Age brings infirmities, such as sluggish bowels, weak kidneys and bladder and TORPID LIVER.

Tutt's Pills

have a specific effect on these organs, stimulating the bowels, causing them to perform their natural functions as in youth and to the kidneys, bladder and LIVER. They are adapted to old and young.

IMPARTING VIGOR

The Child at Bedtime.

Whatever the child's daytime naughtiness may have been, at nightfall he should be forgiven and go to rest with the mother's kiss on his lips and her voice in his ear. Hardly anything can be worse for a young child than to be scolded or punished at bedtime, and to carry into its dreams harshness or gloom. The mother does well to be a little blind to some things and remember that much childish culpability is superficial and washes off almost as easily as the soil from hands and face in the evening bath. Children should never be allowed to carry with them in their thought the mental suffering which too many parents seem to think an absolute necessity in the careful bringing up of children. All too soon will they have to face the world and its sorrows. Before the nursery brood is undressed and in bed, the lights turned low, and the room quieted for the night, the mother or older sister can sweetan their last waking moments with stories before they embark for dreamland. While the most exact and rigid truthfulness should be practiced in our dealings with children, and they should be taught to shun all equivocation and lying, still we need not fear to satisfy their vivid baby imaginations with the literature of fairyland, says Woman's Life. They early learn to find the the truth wrapped up in the husk of the story.

The Average Boy.

The more there's work
To do at home
The more I long
To up and roam,
The more I banker
And I wish
To cut a pole
And go and fish.
But when there's not
A thing to do,
(Say, don't it work
That way with you?)
I am content
To rest a spell
Where I can hear
The dinner bell.
Work doesn't bother
Me a bit;
In fact, I'm rather
Fond of it;
But when it's to
Be done, then I
Wish I had wings
And I could fly.

Exaggerating and making mountains out of molehills.
Lamenting the past, holding on to disagreeable experiences.
Pitying yourself and bemoaning your lack of opportunities.
Comparing yourself with others to your own disadvantage.
Work once in a while and take time to renew your energies.
Waiting round for chances to turn up. Go and turn them up.
Writing letters when the blood is hot, which you may regret later.
Thinking that all the good chances and opportunities are gone by.
Carping and criticizing. See the best, rather than the worst in others.
Thinking of yourself to the exclusion of everything and every one else.
Dreaming that you would be happier in some other place and circumstances.
Belittling those whom you envy because you feel that they are superior to yourself.
Dilating on your pains and aches and misfortunes to every one who will listen to you.
Speculating as to what you would do in some one else's place, and do your best in your own.
Gazing idly into the future and dreaming about it instead of making the most of the present.
Longing for the good things that others have instead of going to work and earning them for yourself.
Looking for opportunities hundreds of thousands of miles away instead of right where you are.—Orison Swett Marden, in "Success Magazine."

Too Late.

The junior and senior proprietors of the great magazine had just been over the accounts for the past year, and were congratulating each other.

"Yes," said the junior member, "It's great. A year ago our periodical was practically nothing at all. Then through the idea of our editor we run our series of exposures. At the same time our advertising man excluded all improper advertising from our columns. To these two lieutenants more than anything else do we owe our great success. Let's call 'em in and congratulate 'em."

"Good idea," said the senior. "Robert"—to the office boy—"tell Mr. Pratt and Mr. Smith to step this way."

The office boy came back with a grin on his face.

"They've both gone, sir," he said. "They and the cashier took the midnight train for Canada."—From Life.
