TALBOTT AND GARRETT.

A Political Contrast.

(Adapted from an article in the Baltimore News of August 20, 1906. This article is said by the friends of Mr. Talbott and Mr. Garrett to be perfectly fair to both.)

Joshua Frederick Cockey Talbott vs. Robert Garrett! The two conventions of the Second district have named their candidates for Congress. The voters will decide between them. They have until the first Tuesday in November to make up their minds.

There is no great mystery about either of these men. Their lives are open and simple. The voters will have to do no hair-splitting in determining their choice. One man stands for one thing, the other for another. If a voter likes Talbottism, then Talbott is just the sort of man he likes. If he likes the things Garrett stands for, then Garrett is precisely the kind of man he likes. That's all there is to it.

Talbott is getting to be an old man. He is 63 years of age, and disillusioned. He has no illusions regarding graft. The chief bulwark of his political machine for years has been the poolrooms and the picnic resorts along the shore. They sell liquor on Sunday, make books on the races, run slot machines and sweat games and violate the law in other particulars. They go unmolested by the county police. In return, these places contribute liberally to Talbott's machine. Their owners are not Democrats. They are not Republicans. They are adherents of the dominant party as long as that party does not interfere with their illegal business.

So, too, in the matter of spoils. Talbott looks on offices solely from the standpoint of their availability as rewards for party service. Not for party service, either, but for service to Talbott's machine. Talbott fights the Democrats who oppose him just as fervently as and with the same weapons that he fights the Republicans.

Talbott practically has never been in any other business than politics. He has either been in office or a candidate for office ever since 1872. What alleged law business he has done since that time has been largely in the capacity of political agent for corporations. He was State's Attorney of Baltimore county from 1872 to 1876. In 1878 he was elected to Congress and remained there for three terms. He was elected again in 1892 and 1902 and 1904. Every second year since his first term in Congress he has either been a candidate for renomination or a candidate at the election. Sometimes he has been defeated at the primaries, sometimes at the polls; sometimes he has been successful at both. He has always been a candidate. His one idea is political control.

Talbott is an extremely likable fellow. He is plain, unassuming, jovial. There is no cant, no hypocrisy, no posing about him. No man is a better companion on a junket. He is the best "mixer" in the country, knows everybody in this county and would go far to do a personal favor for a friend. He is a jollier. People say of him: "He is a good fellow." They like him more than they admire him.

Talbott drifted into politics because he liked the game. He naturally adopted views of his people before him and the friends around him. Principles mean little to him, environment everything.

Talbott, in his speech in response to the notification of his nomination, said that he proposed to discuss national issues during the campaign. "There are some candidates who defame people," he said, "while others discuss public questions. I will discuss public questions." There was the shrewd politician talking. Talbott has been in Congress 12 years and he has never discussed public questions yet. That is not his strong point. But he knows his vulnerability. He knows that if he becomes the issue he can make no defense before the people. So, for the moment, he assumes the attitude of the statesman and proposes to discuss public questions. That is a very clever attitude to assume and will appeal to some voters. As a matter of fact, Talbott will not [redacted] his opponent, while he will endeavor to make himself solid with the individual voters. He will don his mantle of good-fellowship and go out and talk with the farmers and their wives and their children. He is a dangerous antagonist because he can do that thing so well.

Talbott is the very incarnation of the old idea, the idea exemplified by Quay and Platt and Gorman.

Garrett is 31 and has a naive belief in political purity. When he was first nominated for office the Republican henchmen in the county, had beatific visions of an "open bar'l." Garrett disappointed them. A bought election had no attractions for him. He wouldn't even "set 'em up for the boys." The young man's numerous private benefactions, modestly and liberally made, absolutely preclude the idea that stinginess prompts his attitude regarding campaign expenditures. It is a matter of principle with him. It follows that young Garrett could never become the head or part of a political organization whose life-blood was graft. There he is the direct antithesis of his opponent.

Garrett would no more wink at law-breaking or consent to the acceptance of contributions from the law-breakers than he would buy votes personally. He wouldn't stand for incapable men in office. He is a hater of graft and spoils in every form.

Garrett has never held public office. He is interested in several things. He is a man of business, for one thing. He is actively at the head of the banking firm of Robert Garrett & Sons, a firm established by his great-grandfather, the father of John W. Garrett of B. & O. fame. He is a student, interested in archæological research, and has recently been doing some work along that line at Princeton University. He is much interested in athletics. He himself was once the champion discus-thrower of the world. He went to Greece at the first revival of the Olympian games, and beat the Greeks at their own particular game.

Garrett is also a likeable fellow, but in another way. He is a clean, well-built young man physically and morally, appreciates a joke, but is no teller of stories. "A splendid young chap," people say when they meet him. They are apt to admire him as much as they like him.

Garrett has gone into politics in Baltimore county because he thinks he can accomplish something there. He is a Roosevelt Republican. He believes in civil service reform and such things. A banker and holder of stocks in various corporations he believes in the various Rooseveltian measures for corporation control. A son of a millionaire, he believes in an inheritance tax. An adherent of the protection theory, he would like to see the tariff revised.

Meanwhile Garrett proposes to discuss Talbottism. Not Talbott, but Talbottism. He recognizes the fact that personally Talbott is a very clever and pleasant citizen. But he intends to bring home to the voters the other fact that Talbott is the exponent of a worn-out and discredited political system, a system based on graft and spoils, that is harming Baltimore county continuously in a hundred ways and sapping the manhood and independence of every young Democrat who enters political life in the county and bows before the god of the machine.

As a politician Garrett stands for the new idea in politics, the idea exemplified by Jerome and Folk and Roosevelt.

On November 6 the voters of Baltimore, Carroll and Harford counties and of the Fifteenth and Sixteenth wards of Baltimore city will have a chance to say which they prefer.

"Everything seems to be speaking love," she coaxingly remarked: even this old apple tree is sighing and moaning a tale of love." "If you were as full of green apples as this tree, you'd sigh and moan, too," was his absent-minded reply.

Adam (returning to dinner) to Eve—Good heavens! Oh, these women! They can't leave anything alone. You have gone and made the salad out of my Sunday clothes!—Bon Vivant.

The layer of the Sea taken up in clouds each year is now estimated at 14 feet in thickness.

Authorities on forestry say that seventy-five years are required for the oak to reach maturity; for the ash, larch and elm, about the same length of time; for the spruce and fir, about eighty years. After this time their growth remains stationary for some years, and then decay begins. There are, however, some exceptions to this, for oaks are still living which are known to be 1,000 years old.

She—Yes, and raises her voice if she doesn't get it.—Illustrated Bits.

BEN BOLT.

Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?
Sweet Alice whose hair was so brown;
She laughed with delight if you gave her a smile
And trembled with fear at your frown?
In the old churchyard in the valley, Ben Bolt,
In a corner, obscure and alone,
They have fitted a slab of granite so gray,
And Alice lies under the stone.

And don't you remember the school, Ben Bolt,
With the master so cruel and grim,
And the shaded nook in the running brook
Where the children went to swim?
Grass grows on the master's grave, Ben Bolt,
The spring of the brook is dry:
And of all the boys who were schoolmates then
There are only you and I.

There's a change in the things we loved, Ben Bolt;
They have changed from old to new:
But I feel in the deeds of my spirit the truth
There was never a change in you.
Twelve months twenty have passed, Ben Bolt,
Since first we were friends—yet I hail
Thy presence—a blessing, thy friendship a truth,
Ben Bolt, of the salt sea gale.

Wilson Promulgates Purefood Regulations.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture today promulgated the regulations under which the recently enacted purefood and drug act will be enforced. The commission appointed to prepare the regulations consisted of Dr. H. W. Wiley of the Agricultural Department, Dr. S. N. D. North of the Department of Commerce and Labor and James L. Gerry of the Treasury Department. In a letter to the Secretaries of their several departments they say their agreement on the regulations was unanimous. To the regulations Secretaries Wilson, Metcalf and Shaw have given their approval. The section of the regulations respecting the labeling of products requires that the ingredients of the package shall be stated, so that the purchaser may know precisely what he is buying.

In the matter of Coloring.

In the matter of coloring the requirement is made that no ingredient known to be deleterious to human health shall be used by manufacturers. This regulation applies with particular force to the manufacture of candies.

Adulterations, particularly of drugs, is prohibited, but standard drugs will not be considered adulterated provided that they are branded so as to show their actual strength or purity.

Misbranding Prohibited.

Poisonous or deleterious preservatives shall only be applied externally and shall be of a kind that will not permeate to the interior of the product, and the preservative must be of such a character that until removed the food products are inedible. Misbranding of food or drug products is guarded against particularly. The label on every product must bear the name of the product, of the manufacturer, and must show whether the article is a compound, mixture or blend; and must designate the ingredients and proportions, in the case of drugs and foods. The use of any false or misleading statement, design or device, on the label is specifically prohibited.

Differences of Opinion.

It is known that some differences of opinion arose among the members of the Commission respecting important details of the rules. As originally drafted the rules practically prohibited the use of generic names as applied to products of American manufacture. For instance, champagne, as distinguishing a kind of wine, could not be used in connection with an American wine of that kind, because it was held to be misleading, if not actually deceptive. Geographical names, generally, as applied to food or drug products, or to wines and liquors, were not permitted to be used under the regulations as prepared by the Commission.

When the regulations were submitted to the Secretaries of the three departments for approval some changes were made in them of a very important character.

As to Geographical Names.

The use of geographical names, for instance, was provided for in cases it was thought the names were generic or distinctive. It was provided, however, that it should be indicated on the package containing the product that it was of American manufacture. Thus, champagne is required to be labeled American champagne, or California champagne, so that the purchaser, while he knows that he is getting a certain kind of wine, knows also that the wine is made in America and not in France. The regulations apply to other products in a similar way.

It was the effort of the Commission to insure to the purchaser of any food or drug product absolute purity.

The first witness called in a petty lawsuit in Cincinnati was an Irishman of whose competence as a witness opposing counsel entertained doubt. At their instance there was put to him before being sworn the usual interrogatory, 'Do you know the nature of an oath?'

A broad grin spread over the face of the Irishman as he replied:

'Indade, your honor, I may say that it is second natnre with me.'

A man is never too old to learn, but is sometimes too young.

Snow and Gale in Far West.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 21.—For the last 24 hours this region has been swept by a windstorm of unparalled severity. In addition to three serious accidents to persons, property over a wide area has been devasted. Fire, fanned by the wind, obliterated the new $100,000 plant of the Utah Packing Company. Trains have arrived irregularly, or not at all. Street cars and the electric lighting plants were put out of commission for several hours.

Ruined buildings, fallen chimneys, broken windows, loosened signs and toppled trees are common marks of the storm, and aggregate a loss of $100,000. The wind attained a maximum velocity of 52 miles an hour. For several hours the average speed was 38 miles an hour. The local weather bureau says that the storm was local, with little effect north of Ogden or south of Provo, Utah.

Captain William G. Cahoon and Driver Fred. Gulbranson, of the fire department, were caught under a falling tree while driving to a fire. Cahoon suffered both legs broken and Gulbranson was injured internally. Others sustained less serious injuries from falling trees and short-circuited wires.

A beautiful mosaic window, which cost $3,000, was demolished in the new Presbyterian Church. The Grand, a Chinese restaurant, was demolished. The Belmont Hotel was unroofed. A freight car of a Short Line train was lifted bodily from the trucks.

The only mail received today was from Los Angeles, over the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad.

The only telegraph wires available tonight are two to Denver, along the Rio Grande Western, and one to Los Angeles. Last night the city was dependent upon a single copper strand to Denver for outside communication.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The weather Bureau tonight announced that all that is left of the tropical storm that wrought havoc in its path from Cuba across the Florida Keys is now a shallow barometric depression prevailing over Southern Florida. It has no dangerous features. A severe snowstorm, with freezing temperature is raging in Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Northern New Mexico, Northern Arizona and Northern Texas. The snowstorm extends through the Rocky Mountain districts and the plains states eastward.

Denver, Col., Oct. 21.—A general storm prevailed along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains from Wyoming to New Mexico today. Snow has been falling in Colorado almost incessantly for the last 24 hours. Suburban electric lines are operated with difficulty and railroads experience delay in running trains. From Alburquerque, N. M., comes a report of considerable property damage from high winds.
