SIDE TWO

kindly in your interest yourself for me, I feel to be a sad dull topic — but to hear from you — & of your good health — is a cent pleasing one — therefore when you can write, I entreat you — with — for my sake — that certainly in selfish, in me — mind this — you never must tell me again — that — it would be any sacrifice to me — in making a visit to West River — this really is a miserable reflection on my taste & feeling — no let me assure you. I never enjoyed a gratification more highly — than the society there — I want to go — I wish to go — & I will go — if I can. But I — must try to conquer this affection of my Stomach &c — before I can leave home — I take some of your — Mothers favorite Pills, — & Janey I am benefitted — — Fanny — must — & will be well soon — I am sure — this intermittant — that worries & torments her — will be done away — by cold weather — & she must learn — not to let her spirits sink — under pain — I wish she would try to rouse herself — she must come to welcome her friend — Mrs Thomas — I had a message last Night from Mrs Alexander — she has expected her Sister Mrs M — for some days past — on her way home — — but she had not come — I in time — I she intends to have every thing ready for the reception of her new Sister — You have heard no doubt of — Mr — Worthington having brought — his young Bride home — They gave a dinner the day after — to all the young gentlemen & ladies — no Married — of course Arthur & myself were invited — he went — I did not — it was a dull affair he thought — Mr Magnadier was not there — a great tender — loving pair I am told — if possible — she more in love than her husband — cannot bear him out of her sight — this seems so perfectly unnatural — — a girl of eighteen — in love with — B — W — that I must ever believe — a good comfortable establishment — had more charms — for the — than Brice — himself — Arthur did not — off for Fred — until Saturday — of course lost the pleasure of the Marriage ceremony — which took place on Thursday — for my Aunts sake — I was anxious he should be there in time — but got a little cold — on his visit to Mr Mercer — & my Brother advised him — not to go — until the weather was more settled — he will miss the Bride & Groom altogether. for I hear to day they were to be in Baltimore the morning after the wedding — To tell you — a secret — — Arthur was so disgusted — with a connexion with the Tylers — he did not wish to be with them — You must give my affectionate love to your Mother — & Sister — I am happy to hear you are relieved from your fears & anxiety
