SIDE TWO

at times very nervous. The weather has a great effect upon her, some days she quite surprises us with how much she can do, but then it must be without bustle or noise; and she still can enjoy the society of her old friends. Papa has purchased a house close to London where we are now all settled, and as it is considered a very dry air we hope Grandmama will derive benefit from. Though we do not personally know each other, I believe from description you are acquainted with every member of our family, and as belonging to your dear Aunt take an interest in what concerns us, this prevents my feeling as if I was writing to a stranger. Our family circle has suffered a diminution, but one I trust that will increase the happiness of her whom we have parted with. Last week my dear Sister was married, it is a union which pleases all parties, as we have long known and liked her husband, and as far as we can judge she has every prospect of being as happy as any can in this uncertain world, her residence is not far from ours therefore we shall often meet, still being an only sister I cannot but miss her very much. My Brother John is now with us Grandmama has often expressed her anxiety on his account, you will be therefore glad to hear his health is reestablished, and he is grown quite a stout and I must add a very nice boy. So long a time has e since Grandmama has received any letters that she is very anxious to hear from you and likewise from your Brother, as she wishes to know what expenses were incurred on account of her Brothers illness and decease, and also to know how his Son is who was ill. She desires her kindest remembrances to all your family and hopes to receive good accounts, and believe
