be easily wheeled across. If the weather permits I wish Mr Cunnyham or Maughlin which ever may be about as superintendant would have a well dug at the end of the meat house not less than sixty feet below the surface as it will be when levelled. nor less than sixty feet in diameter, the bottom to be laid in brick of this shape and terminating in an iron pipe of this kind the bottom to be coated with cement about two feet high. and the remainder to be bricked up to the surface. I fear it can not be done this winter. Mr. M. will understand what pipe is wanted to convey the water from the kitchen and wash house to it and the waste from it, as we talked all that over. This will leave all the in door arrangements for Another year with stones it can be made nicely & easily & with my attention to practice the means can be procured I believe I have been thinking about the effect of the falling on the water & have some doubt about carrying the rain from that part of the roof into the cistern this winter. When the tinner is there it will be easy to arrange that it should not be thrown into the cistern till the permanent roof is laid. — I have also been thinking about the coal Old London asked for let me have his measure & I will send him one I wish him to have it from us. You will I hope find a bundle at the landing on Tuesday next which you had better have taken Home in the carriage as it might be injured or wet in Mack's boat or the cart; It will
