It is a well known fact that the present season has been the most backward in years, and this has necessarily left us with a much larger stock than is usual at this season of the year. We seldom have cause to complain of our trade, but the cool Spring upset our calculations.

Seasonable goods that ordinarily would have been closed out are still with us, we have therefore concluded in order to move them rapidly to put such prices on them as OUGHT to move them, and will move them, when you see them and realize their value. This in the face of the highest prices on cotton goods since the civil war. If don't think so, ask any storekeeper the price of spool cotton. Almost every department in the store lends something to this great sale.
