Game May be Contested.

Much contention marked a game of football between Western Maryland and St. John's Colleges in this city last Saturday afternoon. In the first half Western Maryland made a touchdown, but failed at goal. St. John's kicked field goal and the half ended with the score of 5 to 4 in favor of Western Maryland. In the second half the contention occurred and game was stopped seven minutes before the end of time. St. John's had the ball on Western Maryland's territory and it was held for downs, the linesman notifying the referee, who ignored the notice and continued play. St. John's then again kicked field goal. Western Maryland kicked on referee's decision and play was stopped. During the entire game Western Maryland was heavily penalized. The referee gave the game to St. John's 6 to 0. The game will probably be contested, as the Western Maryland team and its friends regard the decisions of the referee as notoriously unfair. Lineup:

Reserved to Win.

The New York World tells the story of how a young man, only 28 years old, during the recent bear market on Wall Street, made $3,000,000, after watching the market and waiting patiently for five years. That young man is Mr. J. L. Livermore, a client of Mr. Ary J. Lamme, son-in-law of Mr. William B. Thomas, this city, and friend of Mr. Thomas. Mr. Livermore and his wife visited Westminster last Christmas as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Thomas, spending the holiday week with them. Mr. Livermore is a quiet, unassuming gentleman, and all who have met him during his visits to Westminster unite in saying that he is an all round good fellow in the very best sense of that phrase. The personality and character of the man is in keeping with the remark he is said to have made to the World reporter, who informed him of the declaration of a Wall Street man, who said, "I do not believe it possible for a man to have won $3,000,000 in Wall street without the fact becoming known. The street is alert to know of operations involving that amount of money and who makes it." The world reports that to this information Mr. Livermore replied with a chuckle, "I have not paraded in the corridors of big hotels after the close of the market. I have chosen instead to return to my home, where I live quietly. I have not made myself known and see no reason why I should be known in Wall Street." The World further says that he is preparing to quit Wall Street with his earnings.

Democratic-Republican Demonstration at New Windsor.

A stranger in New Windsor last night would have supposed that all the people in the district had come to town and he would not have been far wrong. The streets were thronged, flags were stretched across them; bunting, Chinese lanterns, candles in the windows of many homes, bright electric lights, with the moon flooding all with its mild beams, covered the little valley town with beauty. The people were a happy people, happy over the election to the legislature of two of their fellows, to whom they had given loyal support, Messrs. R. Smith Snader and R. Lee Myers, happy that with the clearing away of the smoke of political battle, friends are still friends and the strife has left no bitterness.

The occasion was a remarkable one, unique in the political annals of the State. All the people, Republicans and Democrats had come together to unite in ratifying the election of Republican and Democratic candidates.

A procession was formed at the depot, headed by Messrs. Philip B. Snader, father of Mr. R. Smith Snader, and U. Grant Heltibridle, marshal, and their aids, Messrs. George C. Anders, Howard Devilbiss, Harry Gilbert, Walter Harman, Charlie Harman, J. E. Barnes, Walter Barnes, Harry Harman, Guy Babylon, Dave Cantwell, Lee Crawmer, Frank Petry, Preston Roop, Ersie Benedict, William Miller and Addison Lindsay. All were mounted on fine and gaily caparisoned horses.

Following the marshals rode a number of young ladies, skilled and beautiful horsewomen. Then came an open baroneche, decorated with United States flags, in which were seated Mr. R. Smith Snader, Republican member elect of the House of Delegates, Mr. R. Lee Myers, Democratic member elect of the House of Delegates, Mr. Jeremiah Belt Townshend, Republican sheriff elect, and Dr. A. E. Lambert, escorted by about 100 mounted torch bearers. Following this division of the parade came the marching footmen bearing torches and a number of carriages and buggies with ladies and gentlemen, torch bearing. In the midst of all was the First Regiment Band, of Westminster, with full ranks, winning great applause and many well merited encomiums as it furnished the music for the parade. After marching through the principle streets, the procession was disbanded in front of the Odd Fellows' Hall. The hall itself had been made a bower of beauty by the hands of the fair women of New Windsor. Over the stage was a streamer, bearing the legend "Welcome to all say Snader, Townshend and Myers, for the People." All chairs had been removed except those on the stage, reserved for the band. At one side of the hall, stretching its full length were the tables, loaded with refreshments. About 600 people filled the hall to overflowing. After several selections by the band, Geo. L. Stocksdale, Esq., in appropriate and well chosen words greeted the assembled company and introduced Mr. Jeremiah Belt Townshend, who made an address full of sound common sense, and abounding in wit, increasing the admiration of his friends. Mr. R. Smith Snader spoke feelingly of his gratitude to friends and neighbors for their faithful support, and pledged himself to the conscientious discharge of the duties of the office to which they have elected him. Rev. W. L. Seabrook, one of the Editors of the AMERICAN SENTINEL, responded to repeated calls for a ten minutes speech, congratulating the people of New Windsor and Carroll county on the happy augury of such a united gathering of Republicans and Democrats, and upon the fact that no county in the State had conducted a cleaner election with a purer ballot than Carroll, and making a plea for the reverent exercise of the sacred duty of voting, by every voter. After these addresses, the tables were surrounded, Mr. Seabrook was called upon to invoke the Divine blessing, and about 40 of the ladies of New Windsor served refreshments to the whole audience.

The night will long be remembered by the people of New Windsor district and its happy influences must be felt by the whole county.

Proceedings of Circuit Court.

The November term of the Circuit Court for Carroll county began on Monday, with Judge William H. Thomas on the bench. Thomas Eckard was appointed bailiff to the grand jury, John W. Arbaugh bailiff to the petit jury, John T. Phillips and John Bemiller, Sr., bailiffs at the gates.

The juries were drawn and constituted as follows:

Petit Jury.—Cornelius F. Dice, Wm. H. Phillips, Andrew J. Long, William C. N. Myers, Oliver D. Birely, David R. Geiman, Frank H. Willet, Edward Leese, John L. Nott, Benjamin F. Bosley, Eli T. Cookson, Wm. H. Stansbury, Jacob H. Dell, Aaron D. Leister.

In charging the grand jury Judge Thomas laid particular stress upon the importance of keeping its proceedings secret and instructed the jurors that they should not confide any fact or occurrence of the jury room even to any members of their families nor to their most intimate friends. This is required by the official oath and is necessary to the strict administration of justice. Judge Thomas further said that he knew of no case of a serious violation of law for investigation. There are but five prisoners in jail and these for minor offences. They should be speedily investigated and indictments found or the parties discharged.

The dockets for the term are the smallest for many years, there being but 57 trial cases, 12 appeals and 18 originals. Many cases were continued, a few were disposed of by non pros or otherwise.

Ball and Cue.

In the billiard tournament at Klein's parlors, Baltimore, a large crowd was in attendance last night, and the Sun says that the games bordered on the sensational, that "the Wantz-Blakesley contest forced the spectators to rise and applaud time and again." Mr. Wantz defeated his opponent by the score of 150 to 146, and easily won from Blumenfeld by the score of 150 to 80. There are ten contestants. Mr. Wantz has played eight games and won all except one, which he lost to Linhard. Linhard has played six games and won them all. The winning of the cup lies between Wantz and Linhard, with a possibility of Lang, who has not played many of the games, but has won all in which he played, having a show. Lang was sick last night and could not play.
