and uneasy lest Deedie should tell Mr Dillon to "stop, let my sister alone" but they both behaved very nicely never whimpered until just at the last when Mr D. held her down rather firmly and then she saw me and put up her lip but it was all over as soon as she got back to Ellen and he did not spare the water I assure you his handful three times and then the sign of the cross, and was it not singular the bible class lesson for that day was upon baptism the questions had been given several weeks before without any knowledge of my intention of taking the baby to Church and a most excellent and clear explanation of the duty of bringing infants to baptism, it was. Aunt Sally has had a bad cold and the day I came here was the first day she had been out of her room for nearly a week, on Friday we all went to Cous.
Mary's to spend the day, we quite suffered with the heat and as Aunt S. was afraid to have more than one window open in the carriage the children seemed so uncomfortable that we shut all up and then took all their wrappings off and you cant tell what a relief it was to them And then yesterday it was freezing what a climate to be sure on Friday early in the morning entirely out of the sun's influence the thermometer stood at sixty two, and in four and twenty hours it was raining and the icicles hanging from the windows, and this morning all the trees were cased in ice. I was much disappointed last evening to find that our mail had gone to Cedar Park and even Harry missed it somehow on the road so I shall not get it until tomorrow. I should have gone home yesterday but that I had sent Henry home and told him to come up to day so as to take Ellen to Church this afternoon, however they seem to enjoy having us here and this would have been a lonely day at home, and we have all enjoyed a sermon that Uncle read to us
