ted to know what quantities to get of every thing. Of course I shall do all that I can for her both now and at all times. I shall cut out some night shirts for Harry tomorrow and try and get as much of my work done as I can so as to be ready, I shall offer to work the flannel petticoats for her would not you like to do the best shawl you will have time enough after you come home. Tell the girls that the work that German girl did for Hannah was miserably done. Harry's shirts do nicely excepting that they are a few threads too tight in the neck and he would like the coloured ones open in the binding both back and front, and wants them made with pearl buttons, not either studs or sleeve buttons on account of the danger of losing them and ~~we the~~ had you not better have them washed before you make them? Send me the pieces that are left to make the collars. You will be surprised to hear that Billy and Henry are about to put up a plank fence from the kitchen pailing to the one before the door I found Harry dreaded so the undertaking of the other and seemed to think it impossible that I told him yesterday to begin with this so as to keep the sheep within bounds and that when Father was here the other could be made. Hathy thinks it important to keep this flock of pet sheep up here as there is some disease amongst the others one of them has lost all its wool. There are six lambs in the large flock but none in this other one as yet. We have no fresh cow but I think the one we have with Henry's management is doing wonderfully well, we are
