goes early tomorrow I shall not have a chance to add to this, so give a great deal of love to one and all ask Annie B. M. if she cannot find time to write to me. I wish she would come down with you, give my love also to Nan Ellis I am very sorry she has rheumatism but hope she is able to be about now. I am delighted to hear Annie Pierce is better tell her I think she will be ready for our sea air by the time it is mild enough.

And now good bye once more my dear parents please do not over tax your strength either of you hoping to see you both very soon

Your loving daughter Mary H. Harvey

In this respect she suits me better than Ellen did this last winter she did not seem to have spirits enough to amuse them. Altho of course I miss Ellen's nice ways about them, and I have to straighten things all the time instead of having some one who is doing it for me all the time. I only hope she may continue to be satisfied, I sometimes wonder how it would do (in case we ever make a change) to try to get her Mother I should suppose that it would give us no more helpless ones than we have now Jemmy is I think just the steady kind of boy Harry needs and the next little girl is old enough to be of use, which leaves only the youngest one to be helpless and she I suspect is more under control than ~~the one that~~ Joe is. If you have the time suppose you stop there some day and see how things look about them
