The National Conventions.

The Republican National Convention, to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President, will be held in Chicago next week and the Democratic Convention in Denver, Col., the week following. There is little doubt that Secretary Taft will be the choice of the Republican convention for the Presidency and Col. William J. Bryan seems to be absolutely certain of nomination by the Democratic convention. Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou is looming up as a possible nominee of the Republicans for Vice-President, but there are no signs of agreement upon a candidate for that office by either party.

The friends of Speaker Cannon, Senator Knox, Senator Foraker, Gov. Hughes and Vice-President Fairbanks have combined their forces against Taft and are conspiring together to defeat his nomination. In large measure this may be due to the fact that only by defeating him in the convention can any one of those in the alliance hope to secure the nomination. The curious feature about this alliance is that there is no agreement among the parties to it, as to which of them shall be the favored candidate. If they can succeed in defeating Taft's nomination—which seems very improbable—they will fall to fighting each other as fiercely as they are now contending against him. The extreme probability, therefore, is that Taft will be nominated.

It will be a contest between Republicanism and Bryanism—not Democracy. Bryan is classed as a Democrat, but he is practically a Populist and the Democratic party, as an organization, is, with little variation, only in agreement with him in so far as he is in agreement with the policies of the Roosevelt administration, other than the tariff, of which Secretary Taft is the exemplar. There is little reason, therefore, why any Democrat should vote for Bryan against Taft, and, without doubt, many members of that party, who are opposed to Bryanism, will take that view of the case. With Taft and Bryan as the candidates another notable victory for the Republican party may be set down as extremely probable, if not absolutely certain.
