The Maryland delegation to the Chicago convention elected Mr. William P. Jackson, son of Congressman Wm. H. Jackson, of the First District, as the Maryland member of the Republican National Committee.

Taft for President.

The Republican National Convention, in session at Chicago, yesterday nominated Hon. Wm. H. Taft, of Ohio, as the candidate of the party for President of the United States. The nomination was made on the first ballot, Mr. Taft receiving 702 votes, against 278 for all other candidates. With great enthusiasm he was made the unanimous choice of the convention. The Maryland delegation, with Hon. Sydney E. Mudd as its chairman, voted solidly for the nominee, thus obeying the well known will of its constituents. The nomination is hailed with gratification and enthusiasm by the Republicans of the county.

The convention met on Tuesday and is still in session today to complete its work by the nomination of a candidate for Vice-President.

The platform adopted is voluminous and boldly meets every question of importance before the American people. As any abstract or synopsis would give but a faint idea of its declarations, the SENTINEL will not attempt an outline of it this week, but will publish it in full at a later date, with such editorial comment as may be pertinent.

The Church of the Brethren.

The great conference of the German Baptist Brethren at Des Moines, Iowa, by a vote of 289 to 103 changed the name of that demonination to "The Church of the Brethren."

The Grand Valley church, through the district meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Colorado, petitioned the annual meeting at Springfield in 1906, as follows: As the word "German," in our church name "German Baptist Brethren," is no longer applicable to us as a denomination, but is misleading and in many places detrimental to our church work, and since there is another denomination by the name of "German Baptist," thus creating confusion, therefore we ask annual meeting through district meeting, to drop the word "German" from our church name.

The committee made the following report at the Des Moines annual meeting, last week: "The committee recognizes the fact that there is a widespread demand that our name be changed. While this is true, it is also obvious that we are somewhat divided as to a new name to take the place of the old. Therefore we recommend the three following names, to be taken up in order in which they are set down, discussed and voted upon until, if possible, one be selected:

First, The Brethren.
Second, The Christian Brethren.
Third, The Dunker Brethren."

The following account of the action of the conference on the committee's report is taken from the Des Moines Register and Leader, of June 11, for a copy of which the thanks of the SENTINEL are due to Mr. Amos Wampler, who attended the sessions of the conference.

OBJECTIONS TO NAME.

Perhaps no query has been before the general conference so often as has the church name question. Many object to the vulgar name Dunker, or Dunkard. Some object to the legal name.

The people at Des Moines in an international conference have been called Dompelaers, Anabaptists, Taufers, Tunkers, Tunkards, Dunkers, Dippers and many other names, according to the locality and the age in which these names were given. It is said that no religious sect has ever received more unfavorable criticism, in proportion to the amount of history written concerning them, than have the Brethren, as they have always called themselves. Long, long ago, before the church was ever organized in America, they called themselves Brethren. But their peculiar mode of baptism, that is, peculiar to the other colonists in the new world, caused them to be called Tunkers, or Dippers. This name was given them by the Quakers in the early days of Pennsylvania, upon seeing a number of the Brethren being immersed in a stream of running water. Of course this is taken from a German word meaning to dip. It might be well to mention here that in the libraries of London, is to be found a copy of "The Era of Nonconformity," in which is to be found a paragraph stating that the name Dunkers was first given to the Anabaptists in Switzerland, in 1525 A. D., soon after the great Uhlman tragedy. Brother Wolfgang Uhlman was a prominent minister of the Tunker church, and was burned at the stake for his undaunted faith and the demonstration of it.

NOT ALL GERMANS.

The legal name of the church, under which the church property is held, is "The German Baptist Brethren." It is not that all of them are Germans, but this somewhat lengthy title was given as a compromise between different factions of the church who had certain fancies to certain names which, they thought, best represented the faith and practices of the Brethren.

The Brethren are really little known outside the localities in which they reside. Their plain, quiet, unassuming life has led them to be far from conspicuous in any way, and whatever comment has been made upon them or their work by historians and collectors of religious data, seems to have been from ridicule rather than from a desire to represent them acurately. Some of the best encyclopedias, whose works have been relied upon by the general public, have even stated of the Brethren that they did not believe in marriage, and that they are nomadic in principle, roaming over the country like gypsies, etc. The fact is that there is no class of people in the United States who have been more prosperous as an agricultural class of people, and who have been more successful in building up happy homes and who are greater lovers of home life than are these people. From the time of the settlement of the eastern states up to the present their center of population has slowly but surely been moving westward, almost keeping pace with the geographical center of population of the United States, until at the present time the church of the Brethren, or Dunkers, as it is too often called, is found in almost every state in the union, from one ocean to the other and from the great lakes to the gulf.

THREE NAMES CONSIDERED.

The three names suggested by the committee were considered in the order presented by the ruling of the moderator. The delegates readily offered an amendment to the first one, "The Brethren," by inserting the words, "The Church of," making it read, "The Church of the Brethren." This name seemed to fall rapidly into favor with the delegates, but it was very hard for some of the Brethren to give up some of their preferences which they have cherished so long. Only very few of the Brethren laid any claim to the preference to the second name, "The Christian Brethren," but when it came to the third name, "The Dunker Brethren," there came forth some pentup eloquence which has been suppressed since the conference at Bristol, Tenn., when nearly a two-third majority asked that the name be adopted. After a long and strong discussion, a motion to adopt the new name, "The Church of the Brethren," was proposed, so that in using it it would not require a repetition of the indefinite article. When the voice was taken the tellers reported 289 for the new name and 103 for no change, so the name is no more Dunker, or Brethren, but "Church of the Brethren."

"After all, which one will live long enough to obliterate the name that was given us 400 years ago?" said a prominent member of the church.

The children's day service at Pipe Creek M. P. Church on Sunday last was largely attended. It was of an interesting character and reflected much credit upon those who had the training of the participants in the program, which, in full, was as follows: Opening hymn, congregation; Lord's Prayer in concert; hymn, congregation; responsive reading; prayer, pastor; welcome address, Horner Smith; recitations, Mary Devillbiss, Caroline Snider; singing, choir; an exercise, Louise Snider, Fannie Wagner, Idona Baile, Millard Fritz, Roy Myers, Naill Baile; The Lost Sermon, Rosa Repp; recitations, Lamore Stoner, Louise Snider; duet, Mattie and Mabel Harman; Wishing, Catharine Snider, Harry Baile; solo, The Daisies, Norman Myers; recitation, May Fritz; singing, children; an exercise, Heathen enough at home, George Hill, Dewey Fritz, Geo. While Mr. Nathan Diehl, of this place, was operating a mower, to which two young mules were attached, the animals ran away. Mr. Diehl was thrown to the ground and considerably bruised andd one of the mules was badly cut by the guards and knives of the mower. Probably the result of the runaway would have been much more serious if the tongue of the mower had not been broken by the cutter bar coming in contact with an obstacle. This released the mules from the machine. The mules were caught by Murray Stem, an employee of Mr. Diehl, and the injured one is being attended by Dr. A. E. Lambert, of New Windsor.

We are glad to learn that Mr. C. C. Richardson, who has been operated on at the Johns Hopkins Hospital for an abscess of the kidneys, is improving rapidly.

Your correspondent has to thank Mr. I. N. Stoner for a box of his choice strawberries, some of which measured 3 by 4 inches in circumference. They were of delicious flavor.

Mr. John Leonard, of Porter's Siding, visited his relatives, Messrs. J. F. Babylon and George P. L. Hoover, last week.

The grangers' festival was well patronized, ideal weather prevailed and the receipts exceeded $44.

SMITH.—In sad but loving remembrance of our dear mother, Emily J. Smith, who departed this life June 19th, 1907, just one year ago to-day, June 19th, 1908.

Once we had a mother
Who was so good and true
That we were always happy,
Although earth's joys were few.

She sought out every pleasure
And cared for us night and day
And was to us a mother
In every word and way.

From morning until evening
Sorrow rested upon her brow,
She has gone from earth to heaven,
We have no mother now.

Oh, mother, could you speak to us,
And could you live again,
Our aching hearts would then be healed
But this we wish in vain.

By her children, Gladys, Beulah and Ruth.

SMITH.—In sad but loving remembrance of our dear daughter, Emily J. Smith, who died June 19th, 1907, just one year ago to-day, June 19th, 1908.

Her suffering days are o'er,
Her pain and misery ceased;
God called her to his Heavenly home,
With him to live in peace.

She will never be forgotten,
Never shall her memory fade,
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger
Around the grave where she is laid.

In the cold and silent grave yard,
In the narrow casket bed,
They placed our dear daughter
With the peaceful dead.

By her parents, J. H. and Ruth A. E. Conaway.
