CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.

over him. And on its heels came a coolness that surprised him.

The captain looked round the field at his team. He found the eyes of every man fixed upon him, inquiringly, almost imploringly. He did not smile at them, or speak; but they saw his face had changed—how, they could not have told, but subtly, powerfully, they felt their confidence returning. "Come in for the plate "the short-stop growled at Danforth. "Tommy's all right; we've got 'em"

The batsman felt the change, too. The tall boy in the pitcher's box seemed to tower above him terrifyingly. When the ball came, he struck weakly and too late.

"Strike!"

"Foul! Strike two!"

Brownlee at short chuckled aloud—a genuine, mirthful, happy chuckle.

"Foul!"

"Strike three! Out!"

The scarlet stand broke out into a great cheer, then fell silent, apprehensive.

"Strike!"

"Strike two!"

The batsman lunged at the next ball, but it dropped sharply as he struck, and rolled easily out to Corbin.

The man on third took the desperate chance. He sprinted fast, but the ball was at the plate long before him.

Now there was a different tone to the cheers. Hope had crowded out despair. No one minded that the runner went on to second.

The blue-and-white captain, the best hitter of his team, shifted his feet nervously at the plate, and gripped his bat hard. He, too, knew the meaning of the seventh inning.

Corbin nodded at the catcher's signal, and the ball shot in shoulder-high, with all his strength behind it.

Morrison swung viciously.

"Strike!"

A foul soared high over the fence. It meant, "Two strikes."

In both stands the spectators waited breathlessly. The runners crouched, ready. The fielders moistened their dry lips.

Again the ball came fast to his shoulder. Morrison knew he must hit.

He did hit, but not squarely. The ball rose almost straight into the air, but within the diamond. It seemed to the watchers that it would never stop going up; it seemed to Corbin, waiting under it, that it would never come down.

The runner on third trotted in; the runner on second sprinting, dashed across the plate; Morrison was well on his way to second. If the ball were muffed, two runs were safely in, and more might follow.

The captain's arm trembled violently. He had never missed a catch like this, but he had never had to make one under such conditions. He drew in his breath sharply. Then the ball was in his hands!

The storm of cheering broke and rose and broke again. It kept on when the captain ran out to the plate bat in hand. It was deafening when he hit Altman's first ball savagely to left field. It howled across the field when he stole second by a perfect slide. When Boalman drove a long single into right, and the captain scored, it became a screeching delirium.

"The lucky seventh!" "Boalman!" "Corbin!" yelled the scarlet stand.

"Good old Tommy!" whispered Larry, huskily, to nobody in particular.

Boalman himself scored before the seventh was over. But his run was not needed. The battle was over; neither side passed the first base in the remaining innings.

Outside the gymnasium Larry waited for the captain again—for the last time he thought soberly.

Corbin came out at last. "Hello!" he said. "I thought you would be here."

The captain's face seemed to bear the marks not only of the physical trial, but of a struggle of the spirit. But there were, too, the signs of a double victory.

"That was a great inning, Tommy. It settled the game, settled it right there. The rest was easy."

The captain smiled at his friend, and when he spoke his voice was that of a man confident, untroubled, secure.

"It was settled right there, Larry, whether the rest is easy or hard. I shall tell Jurgenson I'm going to the medical school."

Larry drew a long breath of pure joy. "I thought you'd see it," he said.

THE DATE

For Our Next Baking Contest Will Be SATURDAY, AUGUST 1st, 1908.

We were so well pleased with the general appearance and quality of the Bread exhibited at our baking contest last month, that we propose to try it again.

A 10 Cent Plate of Ice Cream FREE to every contestant.

WE WILL GIVE

$3.00 for the best Loaf.
$2.00 for the next best Leaf.
$1.00 for the next best Loaf,
and 50 Cents each for the 5 next best.

Bring your bread to the mill, where it will be received by the lady in charge and a number given. The bread will be judged and tested by the miller and manager, A. M. Swain.

We would advise that each loaf be rectangular in shape, not round or square, and weigh from 1 to 2½ pounds, in order to facilitate the testing. We would also ask that you notify us a day or so before hand if you wish to compete. However, we do not demand this, all we require is that you you bring a loaf of bread any size or shape, baked by or under the directions of the housewife in the kitchen and from nothing but Swain's Best Flour, to the mill not later than 5 P. M., on above mentioned date.

Finally The Worm Turned.

A muscular Irishman strolled into the Civil Service examination room, where candidates for the police force are put to a physicial test.

"Strip," ordered the police surgeon.

"What's that?" demanded the uninitiated.

"Get your clothes off and be quick about it," said the doctor.

The Irishman disrobed, and permitted the doctor to measure his chest and legs and to pound his back.

"Hop over this bar," ordered the doctor.

The man did his best, landing on his back.

"Now double up your knees and touch the floor with your hands."

He sprawled, face downward, on the floor. He was indignant but silent.

"Jump under this cold shower," ordered the doctor.

"Sure that's funny?" muttered the applicant.

"Now run around the room ten times to test your heart and wind."

The candidate rebelled. "I'll not; I'll sthay single."

"Single?" asked the doctor, surprised.

"Sure," said the Irishman "what's all this fussing got to do with a marriage license?"

He had strayed into the wrong office.—Illustrated Bits.

The Reason.

When Secretary Root was at Panama on his return from South America, a New York Tribune man asked him how long he thought the American occupation of Cuba would last, and got the following story in reply:

"A kindergarten teacher asked a class of boys:

"'Have you a warm coat?'

"'Yes, was the reply.

"'Can you take off your warm coat?

"'Yes.

"'Has a bear a warm coat?

"'Yes.

"'Can a bear take off his warm coat?'

"'No.'

"'Why can not a bear take off his warm coat?'

"This puzzled the youngsters a moment and then one cub on the back row yelled:

"'Cause God only knows where the buttons are!'"

From Bad To Worse.

In Dr. Edward Everett Hale's younger days he was about to leave a parish, and a good old lady was bewailing the fact and insisting that the church would be ruined thereby. Dr. Hale says Judge, flattered by her words and manner, and wishing to console her, said:

'But, sister, the man who will succeed me is a fine precaher and a splendid fellow. You'll soon see that everything is all right and get used to it.

"No, no; I won't, she answered tearfully. "I don't get used to this changing. I've seen six changes in preachers now, and its got worse and worse all the time.

Pat Was Glad.

A fine, robust soldier, after serving his country faithfully for some time, became greatly reduced in weight, owing to exposure and scanty rations, until he was so weak he could hardly stand. Consequently, he got leave of absence to go home and recuperate. He arrived at his home station looking very badly. Just as he stepped off the boat one of his old friends rushed up to him and said: "Well, well, Pat, I am glad to see you're back from the front."

Pat looked worried and replied. "Begorra, I knew I was getting thin, but I never thought you could see that much."—Ladies Home Journal.

His Stock Was Low.

John and Jim, just over from Ireland, were strolling the streets of New York, seeing the sights. Passing a business block, they saw a man sitting outside the door whom they took to be the merchant, and stopped to inquire:

"Sure, an' what do ye kape in there to sell?"

"Blockheads," replied the stranger.

"Indade," said Jim, "Ye must have had a foine sale; ye've only the wan left."

Rufus Choate once endeavored to make a witness give an illustration of absentmindedness.

"Wal," said the witness cautiously, "I should say that a man who thought he'd left his watch to hum, an' took it ouen his pocket to see if he had time to go home to get it—I should say that that feller was a leetle absent-minded."—Everybody's Magazine.

"Clara, dear," the young man began, taking her little hand in his, "at last I am in a position to tell you how fondly I——." Instantly she jumped to her feet and clapped her hands wildly. "I got the moth that time!" she said, exultingly, as she resumed her seat. "Go ahead, George."

"In choosing his men, said the Sabbath-school superintendent. "Gideon did not select those who laid aside their arms and throw themselves down to drink; he took who watched with one eye and drank with the other.—The Herald and Presbyter.
