TARIFF REVISION.

It has become apparent to the most ardent protectionist that the Dingley tariff law, which has been in force more than ten years, should be revised, and both the Republican and Democratic national conventions have declared in favor of such revision. There is a wide difference, however, between the tariff planks adopted by these conventions in relation to the character of the proposed legislation. The Republican platform reaffirms the adherence of the party to the true principle of protection, and declares that this is "best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad;" and it further declares that in no other way can the high standard of wages of the American workman be maintained. The Democratic platform practically denounces protection and declares in favor of a reduction of tariff duties to a "revenue basis."

Here then, in a nutshell, is the essential difference between the two parties on the subject of the tariff. The Republicans are in favor of maintaining the high standard of wages of the American workman, by imposing such tariff duties on importations which bring him into competition with foreign labor as will equalize the increased cost of production caused by the difference in the wages paid at home and abroad. The Democrats are in favor of levying tariff duties upon a revenue basis, without considering the effect of that course upon the wages of the American workman or the destruction of American industries if the workman declines to be employed at reduced compensation. The consequences of this Democratic policy, if carried into effect, would be inevitable. Either a much lower scale of wages than now prevails would become an absolute necessity or furnace fires would be quenched, factories would be closed and large numbers of both skilled and common laborers would be without employment. It was the fear of just such legislation that occasioned the hard times which prevailed from 1893 till 1897.

In a revision of the tariff, therefore, it is of the utmost importance to wage-earners, as well as to their employers, that the legislation demanded shall be made under the control of the party which favors protection. It is true that whatever the result of the election in November next shall be, the Republican party will have a majority in the United States Senate until March 4, 1811, and can prevent radical free trade legislation. But the temper of a Democratic Lower House of Congress, with a Democratic President as the executive of the country, would be in opposition to compromise upon any other than a revenue tariff basis, and so all efforts at revision might, and probably would, fail.

In the meantime uncertainty as to the ultimate result of the efforts to revise the tariff law would cause timidity and caution on the part of men engaged in manuactfuring industries and would occasion a curtailment of operations which would throw many workmen out of employment. If this is doubted remember the tinkering with the tariff indulged in by the Democratic Congress which passed the Wilson-Gorman bill. It cannot be doubted that uncertainty as to the outcome of that piece of legislation intensified the distress and hard times primarily produced by the election of Mr. Cleveland and a Democratic majority in both Houses of Congress. That was an object lesson which the voters should recall and in the pending contest for President and Congress vote to prevent its repetition. They know that in revising the tariff a Republican Congress will have regard to the stability and prosperity of American industries and the welfare of American workingmen. The interests of all classes of citizens is involved in the issue and can be best promoted by such an overwhelming Republican victory in November as will leave no doubt as to the attitude of a large majority of the people on the subject.

Mr. Talbott Notified.

At his Lutherville home, on Wednesday, Congressman J. F. C. Talbott was notified of his renomination for Congress by the Democrats of the Second District. Guy W. Steele, Esq., of this city, made the notification address, fuisome with eulogy of Mr. Talbott and denunciation of the Republican party. In formally accepting the nomination, Mr. Talbott said among other things that he intended to devote all his efforts in the next Congress toward securing the building of a national highway from Washington to Gettysburg, through Carroll county, by way of Westminster, and said: "This road by all means should be built. I will advocate with all my powers its construction by the shortest and best route. It is fortunate that this happens to be through my district and by way of Westminster."

THE DUTY TO WAGE WAR.

We have a right to take pride in whatever is honest and true in our commercial, industrial and financial systems of business. But this right is only the other half of the question. Along with it goes the duty to wage war against whatever is wrong and false in business methods and conditions. The two can never stand together in peace, any more than light and darkness can coalesce, or the lion and the lamb lie down together. There is, between these two, a perpetual declaration of war to the death, and the duty of every honest and faithful citizen is to carry a loaded gun for iniquity and wrong wherever it manifests itself, whether it be in political, in commercial, or in industrial life.—Wall St. Journal.

CALL ON ME AT ANY TIME

you require dental work and you will not regret it. I practice all kinds of dentistry except the poor kind. I make a specialty of Bridge Work, which is probably one of the most difficult operations in the profession. But I have reduced it to an exact science and can and do guarantee my work in each instance. Let me replace that missing tooth with a new one which will match perfectly the natural teeth in your mouth. It will hurt neither your person nor your purse. Full sets of teeth made while you wait. Painless extracting 25c. Free when plates are ordered. Teeth filled with gold, Silver and Amalgam. Broken plates repaired and made good as new. Charges always moderate.
