SIDE TWO

Mrs. Caspar Morris
West River –

Poldenews
(Mr. P. Perot.)

Uncle Charles', so you see Israel and I have to be desperately attentive to each other. I do hope that Atlantic City breezes may benefit Nan, for the child certainly is very miserable, she cannot either sit down or rise from her chair, without help – and to see her walk is positively painful; still, on the whole, I suppose she is improving, but very slowly – they hope everything from the sea-air, and I earnestly trust they may not be disappointed – What would Annie think of joining them here? Father says, if she would like to try it – he would not object – but perhaps she would prefer being quiet at home. We shall be very glad to have them back again, tho' I don't know how the warm weather may affect her – but Ma and I as well as her own family will be here and she can do just as Father thinks best when he sees her –

Ches & Hannah went off with quite a family, must not it be an undertaking to move so many – I quite pitied Hannah, with such a sick baby too, poor little fellow, he looks wretchedly, tho' says she reproaches herself
