DEFERRED LOCALS.

Shipley Items.

Farm labor here is progressing nicely and some of our farmers are done husking corn; some have been putting away their fodder, too.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Thompson and son Charles, of Baltimore city, recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Columbus A. Shipley and family.

The Ladies' Mite society of Bethesda M. E. Church was well attended at its meeting on the 13th ult. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klee, Mesdames, Ruth Slasman, Mary J. Shipley, Jennie Klee, Etta Pool, Kate Buckingham, Maude Buckingham, Mittie Miller, Elizabeth Ridgely, Martha E. Phillips, Annie Griffee, Sarah Grimes, Penelope Snyder, Mattie Barnes, Ella Shipley, Maggie Green, Ruth A. Shipley, Emma Slasman, Maggie Phillips, Hattie A. Barnes, Carrie Stouffer, Maud Pool, Misses Emma Shipley, Martha Viol, Pearl Shipley, Elsie Easton, Rena Snyder, Cora Selby, Clara Green, Olie Pool, Martha Zentz, Lillian Buckingham, Lillian Grimes, Hilda Green, Ruth Slasman, Masters Henry Green, Geo. Grimes, Raymond Shipley, Frank Stouffer, and Roland Pool. It was decided by the society to hold its next meeting at the home of Mrs. Parker, near Pool's schoolhouse. The society was royally entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Klee and after the meeting adjourned the guests were treated to a nice set out of cakes, lemonade, confectioneries, bananas and other fruits.

The early sown grain came up nicely and many of our grain fields are green as meadows. Barley is matting all over the ground and looks forward enough for May. Our forests are getting pretty bare and the grey squirrel can't hide himself so easily now. Rabbits, grey squirrels and partridges are fairly plentiful this year. So are the ground hogs. The last named are becoming very numerous and, in many instances, a perfect nuisance for the farmer to contend with.

Union Mills Items.

On Saturday, 24th inst., F. Neal Parke and Guy W. Steele, trustees, sold, at public sale, the farm of the late David H. Feeser, containing 206½ acres and located on the turnpike between Union Mills and Littlestown, Pa., to Wm. T. Brown, at $37 per acre.

Wm. H. Bankert has sold his farm, containing 116 acres, near this place, to his son-in-law, Oliver Shall, for $3500.

Rev. J. Stewart Hartman, who was in attendance upon the recent meeting of the Potomac Synod of the Reformed church, at Hanover, Pa., visited a number of his old parishoners at Silver Run and Union Mills, before returnnig to his new home in Woodstock, Va.

The mad dog excitement, which has pretty well subsided, caused a reduction of about one half in the canine population of our village. The lad, Stirling Frock, who was sent to the Pasteur Institute, Baltimore, for treatment, is reported as coming along very satisfactorily.

Samuel Messinger is erecting a dwelling house on a lot in this place, purchased of Herbert Essig.

Mrs. Wm. Tagg, the most aged resident of the village, we regret to announce, is critically ill.

The new banking house of the Union Mills Savings bank is nearing completion, and will soon be ready for occupancy.

George W. Bankert, a clerk in the store of George W. Yeiser, and Miss Merle Nusbaum, two of the most popular young people of this vicinity, were quietly married last Sunday evening, Oct. 25th, at the Reformed parsonage, Silver Run, by the Rev. S. Charles Hoover. The young couple received a serenade at the home of the bride's father, Charles E. Nusbaum, on Tuesday night.

The young ladies of the congregation are collecting money for a new carpet in the Reformed Church at Silver Run.

The Union Mills Band furnished the music for our Republican meeting, on Saturday night, 31st inst.

Smallwood Items.

Never before has a campaign aroused enthusiasm to such a pitch as that just closed. On Saturday, October 24th there were two poles raised, the Democratic, 72 feet high, the Republican, 52 feet. In spite of the disagreeable weather, there was a large gathering and every one enjoyed the good natured badinage of the members of the opposing parties and helped each other cheerfully.

The tomato factory here has closed, the pack being 2800 cases of 2 dozen each. Home help did the work, and thus the people of this community will receive about $1500 for tomatoes and labor.

On Thursday evening of last week there was a very enjoyable surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Buckingham in honor of their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Edmondson, of Ashland, Ohio. But it is very hard to find Mr. and Mrs. Buckingham unprepared for the reception of company, and the following guests were welcomed and entertained in a very hospitable manner: Judge John E. Eckenrode, wife and daughter Margaret, Mr. Elias N. Davis, wife and daughters Lottie and Nettie, Mr. Wm. Utz, wife and son, Mr. Eugene McCaffrey, all of Westminster; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Edmondson, of Ashland, Ohio; Mr. James G. Bowers, of Baltimore; Mr. Iven H. Sayers, wife, son and daughter, Mr. Howell Davis, wife and daughters, Mr. Richard Baker and wife, Mr. Harry B[illegible] and sons; Miss Katherine Fiscel, of New Windsor; Miss Debbie E. Zile, of Winfield. At a late hour, all left for their homes, after informing the host and hostess that they had spent a very pleasant evening.

Berrett Items.

Mr. Wm. H. Roberts and son Henry, of Houghton, Michigan, who had been visiting relatives in this vicinity, have returned to the West.

Messrs. John R. Bennett, Richard R. Bennett, Wm. H. Roberts and Henry Roberts spent two days in Gettysburg.

Mr. Marshall Sellman made sale of his personal effects on Tuesday, and with his sister May and Wilie Cook left for California Monday, 26th ult., where they expect to make their future home.

Mr. Reese Shipley, who had been ill with the grip, is able to be out again.

A Westminster Boy Spends Month In Paris

EXTRACTS FROM A PERSONAL LETTER

William B. Seabrook Writes Entertainingly of his Varied Experiences in the Beautiful City. Regular Letters Telling of his Tramps will appear in the SENTINEL, Beginning November 20.

Many anxious inquiries have been received as to when the AMERICAN SENTINEL would begin the publication of the promised letters from William B. Seabrook. It is hoped and expected that it will be possible to begin the rgeular series, which will be published in a number of county papers, in about two weeks. In the meantime, for the benefit of his friends, the following extracts from a personal letter, dated Paris, October 19th, received October 30th, are published:

"Now to try to tell you what has happened during the last week at Paris. I will attempt no literary descriptions or highflown language, but will give it to you straight from the shoulder.

"You will recollect that a gentleman named M. Jules Rival and I were appointed delegates to the 'International Road Congress.' I had practically forgotten all about it when last Monday morning on getting out of bed I found stuck under my door a note from him—he has a beautiful suite of appartments in Paris and spends every winter here—saying that he would call for me the same morning at 10 o'clock. He came and we went together to the great ampitheatre of the University of Sorbonne, founded by St. Louis, and still more interesting because Cardinal Richelieu is buried there. The stage was covered with silk and gilded furniture, and the chairs were occupied at ten A. M. by a hundred or more men in full dress suits; numbers of them were decorated, and among them were famous statesmen. The "Garde Republicaine," the finest brass band in Europe, cut loose with the Marseillaise. It was too noisy to be musical, but it was martial and thrilling, and every soul in the ampitheatre arose. I thought with shame of many an American audience I had seen sit through the playing of the Star Spangled Banner without moving a muscle. But after all, things of that kind are merely a matter of form, or rather of fixed custom, and signify little or nothing. If it came to a question of defending that same starry banner, there would be no lack of enthusiasm.. But I digress. The French, German, Austrian and Italian heads of delegations all made speeches in the French language; the English and American delegates in English. Decidedly the most sensible speeches were made by the American and French delegates. It was all hot air. Toward the conclusion, the band played Sousa's Stars and Stripes—Europeans think the Stars Spangled Banner is atrociously ugly from a musical standpoint, and I am inclined to agree with them, except when it is sung by a great soprano artiste—and we Americans, following the French custom, raised a great racket. "Later in the day, M. Rival and I went to dine at a swell restaurant on the Boulevard des Italiens. He paid . . . for the dinner and his tip to the waiter was two francs, that is .40. Afterward we drank our coffee and smoked our cigars. A day or two afterward, I had a note from Mr. C. P. Presley, an Augusta lawyer and a good friend, who was formerly Consul General at Marseilles; he asked me to call at the Hotel du Louvre. I went and spent a pleasant morning with him, his wife and daughter, and some other Georgia Society people, in the most sumptuous parlors I have ever seen. What a curious "double life" I am leading: One day dining on bread and grapes and cheese in my cosy little garret, and afterward smoking my pipe with poverty-stricken Russian students; the next day finding myself equally at home with millionaires in the swellest hotels of France. Well it is all coming to me without my seeking and it is well to see things from both sides. Only when I told my Russian friends about it, they hungrily licked their chaps and voted me an ungodly liar.

"You recollect I told you that I had letters of introduction to a friend of Francis Perroux, an automobile repairer and chauffer in Augusta? I delivered the letter and found my new acquaintance would make a delightful companion. He has quit mending autos, took a correspondence course and is now a bookkeeper in one of the minor departments at the Bourse. He and I have been to the races at Longchamps, to the Moulin Rouge, always taking the cheapest seats; and Sunday last we spent the day at Versailles, leaving Paris at 8 A. M. and returning long after dark, spending the whole day in the chateaux and parks, seeing the bed in which Louis XIV died, standing on the balcony where Marie Antoinette was forced to appear before the Parisian mob, turning the wheel of Marie's little mill at the Petit Trianon and doing numbers of other equally foolish things. It is impossible to imagine the grandeur and beauty of Versailles; the palace is by far the largest in the world. To give you an idea, the national capital at Washington would be lost in it, that is in ground space, for, of course there is no dome at Versailles. The park, with its miles of fountains, marble collonades and statues, immense marble stairways, half hidden by the trees and so wide that entire armies have marched up them two and three hundred men abreast, is utterly beyond the wildest flight of imagination. It is bewildering. It is TOO beautiful, if you can understand what I mean by that. My feeling was that of the farmer who stopped before the two-humped camel, of which he had never heard or seen a picture, and after contemplating its ungainly and bizarre outlines, turned to his wife and said in a tone of conviction:

'Marthy, there ain't no such animals."

"The friend of Perroux is of humble origin, but a natural gentleman. I have taken several excellent meals with him and his goodhearted old mother and on Tuesday evening I will go there again to make my adieux.

"My average expenses in Paris have been between sixty and seventy cents per day; I have never been in better health. Though I have only been here a month, I feel honestly that I have seen most of the things that are worth seeing, and my recollections of Paris will not be those of a fleeting visit, but of a city in which I actually lived and which I have learned to love.

"This is Monday. My month ends on Friday. I have made all preparations to start into the Touraine, and am only waiting for favorable weather. It is now unsettled and cloudy. The first clear morning, I will start, but if it continues cloudy until Friday, I will start anyhow.

"Meanwhile please continue to send my mail to Paris, care Nicholas Martin, 9 Rue Scribe, who will forward it to Marseilles, where I will get it in a batch in December, or possibly the latter part of November, for my stay in the Touraine will be limited by the weather. I know the sun is shining on the Mediteranean coast."

CONVENTION NOTES.

At District conventions all Sunday School workers attending are delegates.

Parents should encourage this convention by their presence. It is in the interest of their homes and children.

TO PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS.

You are kindly asked to announce this convention to your people and congregation, and urge all interested in Sunday School work to be present at every session. Urge those that are not interested. This is a vital cause and should have the encouragement of every christian and every good citizen.

Only the Best for the Readers of "The Sunday Press."

Only the best is good enough for the readers of "THE PHILADELPHIA SUNDAY PRESS," for they have obtained and will print the best serial story of the day. "The Ring and the Man" is the title and it was written by the great American author, Cyrus Townsend Brady. It is an American story of American life and the great metropolis is the scene of most of this dramatic action. The cause of popular government is fought out right here and the contest transcends in importance any political battle that has ever been waged. George Gormly, the hero of "The Ring and the Man," is the highest type of American manhood. His battle with the forces of civic corruption in the American metropolis will interest every American citizen and reader of strong fiction. The opening chapters begin Sunday, November 29, in "The Philadelphia Press." Be sure you get the opening chapters.
