My Dear Wife

I have just returned from a pretty walk to get a tinman to attend to the spouts on the Western Wall. It became obstructed on Saturday during the heavest rain and blew them from their fastenings and the water soaked through the wall, ruining the plaster & paper on his chamber & back hallway. He sent for the tinman to look his own roof examined on Saturday & then let me know that it was the defect of my spout. The man Dubury had told me in the Evening that
