Then And Now.

In 1905 United States Senator Rayner opposed the constitutional amendment then submitted to the suffrages of the people because it lacked an educational test as a qualification for the right to vote, and because, in his opinion, it would have disfranchised thousands upon thousands of his white fellow-citizens.

In 1909 he favors the adoption of the disfranchising amendment now pending and pours out floods of oratory to emphasize his anxious zeal for its success. He accepts the bastard provision imposed upon the negro, and which he asserts does not apply to any white citizen, as an educational test and in strict harmony with the views he entertained four years ago. This test may meet Senator Rayner's judgment of the attainment in intelligence that should be required of the negro to entitle him to vote, but it is a test which today could not be met by one in a hundred of the white voters of the State.

If Senator Rayner were called upon, without previous notification, to submit to it, he would probably fail to prove himself a qualified voter. Could he, without reference to some authority, sit down off hand and write the full name of the President of the United States, of one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, of the Governor of Maryland, of one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and of the Mayor of Baltimore City? Yet that is precisely what is required by the amendment of a negro in Baltimore City, and, if a resident of one of the counties, the substitution of the name of a county commissioner for that of the mayor. This, however, is not the only requirement, there being other provisions still more difficult and especially applicable to men who make a living by working for wages, as most negroes do.

The injustice of the amendment, on this account, is so glaring that it is difficult to conceive how any fair-minded man can vote for it. It may be uncharitable to suggest that in Senator Rayner's case a change of circumstances has altered his judgement, but four years ago he was not a candidate for the United States Senate.

Death of a Great Man.

Governor John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, died at 3.25 o'clock, Tuesday, September 21st, from exhaustion following an operation on Wednesday, September 15th, at St Mary's Hospital, Minneapolis.

Governor Johnson was of humble origin. His father Gustav Johnson, was a Swede, a blacksmith by trade, who came to the United Staates in 1861, in the hope that new associations would free him from the appetite for alcohol. Before falling again into his old habits, he married Caroline Haden Johnson. John was their second son. When he was about four years old, his parents moved from the little farm on which they had lived, to the near-by town of St. Peter, where the father fell into his old habits, and, by the time John reached his thirteenth year, sold out his interest in a blacksmith shop for $200 and disappeared. Inside of a year, he returned a wreck, suffering from alcoholic dementia, and in a little while died in the county home. The boy left school at once. His mother desired him to continue his studies, but the lad refused in order to help her make a living. He went to work in a grocery store and thus added to what his mother made in taking in washing. Two years later he got a place in a drug store, and when about 20 years old obtained a position in a general store. This gave him more time to read at night. Later he became timekeeper for a railroad construction gang. When 25 years old the St. Peter Herald was in need of an editor, and the Democratic stockholders selected him for that place, and though he had never done a stroke of newspaper work in his life, he made the paper a success.

In 1894 he first became a candidate for the State Senate, but was unable to overcome the normal Republican majority. Four years later he was elected. When 33 years old, he married Miss Eleanora Preston. In 1904 though Roosevelt's plurality in the State was 161,000, Johnson won the governorship by 7,800 votes. Two years later, a candidate for reelection, he increased that plurality to 72,000. In 1908 he was elected Governor of Minnesota for the third time. He was the first native of the State to be chosen governor. He was regarded by many men of all parties as the strongest candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1908, and many Maryland Democrats were his enthusiastic supporters. There is little doubt but that he would have been the nominee of the party in 1912. One who knew him well has said of him:

"In speaking of his career, Governor Johnson was wont to say 'Whatever I have accomplished was due to my mother's influence.' He always gave credit to her, and she was indeed a fine character, and a woman of some education. Governor Johnson was absolutely proud of his own record. He was never ashamed of his humble origin."

After his death President Taft sent the following telegram to his wife:

"Mrs. John A. Johnson, Rochester, Minn.:

"My heart goes out to you in sympathy for you and your children in your present deep sorrow. Governor Johnson was a national figure of great ability and great capacity for usefulness to this country, as he had already demonstrated, and his loss will be felt far beyond the state that loved him so well. I sincerely hope that the fond remembrance in which he is and always will be held in Minnesota and elsewhere and the record of his high and valued public service may come as a boon to you in your sorrow and may in time lighten the burden you are now called upon to bear.

(Signed) W. H. TAFT."

The president also made the following statement:

"The death of Governor Johnson is a great shock and fills me with personal sorrow and with a deep sympathy for the people of Minnesota, whose favorite son he certainly was. It has been my good fortune to have had the pleasantest personal relations with the governor, and although we differed politically, we agreed on a great many subjects, as I had reason to know from personal conversations.

"He was a wonderful man. He added to a charming personality a frankness and common sense that won over his natural political opponents, and he made an able, efficient and most courageous public official. That a man of his parts and of his capacity for great public usefulness should be taken now at the age of 48 should be, and is, a source of national regret, for had Governor Johnson lived his position in the state and country was such that he certainly would have been called upon to fill an important place and to assist in the progressive movements of which he was a consistent advocate.

"It was my great pleasure in Washington to meet not only the governor, but his family, and my heart goes out to those who are bereft of a noble and loving husband and father."

Gives the Organization Unlimited Power and Converts It Into an Autocracy.

(Isidor Rayner, Baltimore News, October 18th, 1905.)

Let it be known that I have no feeling, not the slightest, against a single member of what is called the organization: on the contrary, a great many of the gentlemen connected with it are my personal friends; but I am the mortal foe of the system and its methods. I have fought for more than a quarter of a century for the rule of the people within the party, and now the hour has come for deliverance or death. This amendment, placing the election machinery in the hands of a political cabal, means death—political death—to every rising man in Maryland. It mows down the genius of her children, it blights and blasts our hopes, it closes forever the gates of a laudable ambition, it decimates the ranks of honor, it makes a man who desires to enter the public service a mendicant at the doors of political managers, it takes the heart and every vital function from the life of the party, it tramples upon the people and it corrupts and contaminates the elective franchise—the most sacred and valuable prerogative of American citizenship. It places in the hands of our political rulers the right to enfranchise whoever will bow his body or bend his neck to their authority and to disfranchise those who question and challenge their right to dominate our destinies. It will, if it is adopted, perpetuate them in power and convert the free institutions of this State, not into an oligarchy—because an oligarchy they have never been—but into an autocracy—that does not know what public opinion is and does not care; that never comes in contact with the people; that would pay not the slightest attention or regard to their wishes or petitions, and that would wield the same unlimited power and dominion within the party councils as has ever been wielded by the most absolute despotism that ever trampled upon the liberties of the human race.

* * * * * *

THE "ORGANIZATION" THAT HAS USURPED THE FUNCTIONS OF THE PEOPLE WITH BUT FEW VICISSITUDES OF FORTUNE SINCE THE CONSTITUTION OF 1867 MAY GO DOWN IN DARKNESS, AND ITS DOWNFALL, IF I KNOW THE SPIRIT OF OUR PEOPLE, WILL BE HAILED WITH JOY AND ACCLAMATION IN ALMOST EVERY QUARTER AND SECTION OF THE STATE.

POOLE.—In loving remembrance of my dear wife, Virginia, who departed this life, in Taneytown, Md., on Sept. 12th, 1908.
