AMERICAN SENTINEL.

WESTMINSTER, - MARYLAND.

JOS. D. BROOKS, Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1910.

The fellow with the ten cent pocket book and million dollar idea was at the meeting alright.

The tax rate in Baltimore county will be $1 for the coming year. How would we like that in Carroll? If the suggested bond issue becomes a fact we may prepare for the same thing, or worse.

When Mr. Stonesifer said the bond issue was inspired by the automobile people the chairman of the meeting was in the lime light for a few moments. He is the happy or unhappy possessor of two or three machines.

If Mr. B. F. Crouse had not taken a hand in the meeting on Saturday last it would have probably wound up in an old fashion Democratic row. His motion to adjourn came just in the nick of time. As a well trained politician he knew what sort of medicine to administer.

From the way some of the gentlemen talked in the meeting at Odd Fellow's Hall on Saturday last one would imagine that issuing bonds and expending $500.000 was an every day affair with them. But then, some people are mighty liberal while spending some other fellow's money.

To the gentleman who did so much talking in the meeting at Odd Fellows' Hall on Saturday last, we will quote the following, which, by the way, is not by Tennyson:

Unto those who talk and talk
This proverb should appeal:
The steam that blows the whistle
Will never turn the wheel.

The Baltimore American applauds the idea of issuing bonds for improving the roads of the county, but if it thinks the farmers of this county are fools enough to spend a lot of money fixing roads for the accommodation and comfort of a lot of city people with automobiles, it has another great big "think" coming to it.

Don't you think the Democrats should give an account of what they have done with the Good Roads Loan before asking the people of this county to let them have $500,000 more to use in building roads? They should show that they have been faithful in one matter before they ask you to trust them in another.

It was a Democratic organization meeting alright. The longest and most frequent talkers for the bond issue were all well known organization men, while those opposed to the bond issue were all well known anti-organization men. The fact that two well known Republicans happened in the meeting and spoke against the bond issue did not change the political complexion of the meeting.

A good illustration of how the bond issuing business pans out may be found right here at home. We have heard it said that a concrete fact is very potent, so here's one you can study for a while and then tell us what you think of the proposed bond issue.

About twenty years ago the city of Westminster had a tax rate of ten cents for general purposes and five cents for water. Certain citizens of the city thought the roads and streets should be improved, pavements cut down &c., and they proposed a bond issue of $25,000. After a great deal of argument pro and con the bonds were authorized and issued. Main street and one or two cross streets were improved and the gutters were paved and rearranged to properly carry off the surface water. The city looked pretty well after this and everybody seemed to be happy. After a while the streets began to wear out, the interest on the bonds became due, a dozen other things happened, and before the people were aware of it they were paying a 40 cent tax rate and still owed for the bonds. Today the city owes $6,000 of the self same bonds and about $12,000 or $14,000 of floating debts, and will ask this present legislature to authorize the floating of about $20,000 worth of bonds in order to take up the present bonds and pay off the unsecured debts.

The streets of the city, as everyone knows, need repairing but not one dollar of the new bond issue will be used for that purpose. How then are they to be repaired?

With all the money gone and with a tax rate raised from 15 to 40 cents, with some of the streets still unimproved, the city is not any better off, as far as the streets are concerned, than it was before the bonds were issued. It has the higher tax rate and the increased debt with nothing to show for it but a lot of worn out streets.

Now, if our friends, who seem to be so bent on borrowing so much money, will only stop to investigate, they will find that the very things they do not expect to happen will surely happen—just as the citizens of Westminster found out; that a bond issue means a much higher tax rate and that the bonds will never be paid off. Some people say they will not be paid off during the lifetime of their children, but we say they will never be paid. They may be refunded and reappear in a different form but the old debt will still exist because the cost of maintenance of the 900 miles of road will be enormous.

Our friends seem to think that the promise that the funds will be handled by a non-partisan board helps the matter very much. In reply to that argument we simply point to the Mayor and Common Council of Westminster that has always been strictly non-partisan. Non-partisan boards are all well enough if the business in hand is sensible and feasible, but a non-partisan board never helps a bad business proposition.

The Good Roads Commission has been in office for nearly two years and in possession of a large amount of money but up to this time we have received no account of its stewardship. No wonder our Democratic officeholders were not able to float that million dollar loan. We have, however, been informed through a bill introduced in the legislature that the commission made a very bad contract for building a piece of road in Prince George's county. The contractor failed to do the work properly and to make a settlement with his employees, and the bill asks the taxpayers to pay about $50,000 to the latter. If the commission had attended to the matter in a business-like manner it would have exacted a proper bond from the contractor, which would have protection both the state and the employees. If this is the way things are being managed we are not surprised that we are getting nothing in this county.

Stock-taking which corresponds with house cleaning, has just ended. The rummaging incident thereto has brought to light desirable and seasonable merchandise in almost every department. These limited quantities and incomplete lines must be sold before the crowding in of the Spring Stocks, and prices have been unsparingly cut to the lowest level.

Every odd lot, every short length, every broken size in the house must go, and we have made such low prices on them that you cannot help but buy. But you must be quick as the lots are small. Special tables throughout the house are filled with these wonderful bargains.
